EVERY individual owes obedience to something, and there can be no obedience without authority. Indeed freedom, rightly understood, imposes the most solemn obligations of all.—When no human control binds a man he is bound with the greater stress to obey the right, to bow to the authority of conscience, to live up to his highest ideal.

THE FRUITS OF BAD SENTIMENT.

The dastardly attempt upon the life of Russell Sage, and the utimely death of others from the dynamite bomb thrown from the hands of the supposed crank in the city of New York last week is the legitimate outcome of certain false and pernicious teachings respecting the rights of property. It is still an unsettled question whether the perpetrator of this horrible deed was set apart for the crime in the secret conclave of the anarchists, or whether his crazed brain received its impulse from the dangerous sentiments so frequently expressed in the discussion of public issues.

Not only have anarchists declared from the rostrum that men of wealth were the oppressors of the poor and robbers of their fellows, but partisan editors criminally indifferent to the moral effects of their utterances, and more ambitious of party triumph than public good, have characterized all classes of organized capital as monopoly or trust having but one purpose and that the enrichment of self by wrenching from the masses their hard earned money.

This discrimination and fanatical tirade against the great commercial and manufacturing interests of the country have not only fostered riot and unrest, but fanned the spirit of discontent ever present among the masses into a determination to destroy the life and property of those who by thrift and foresight have accumulated wealth. To this intense partisanship, tending to sympathy as it does with socialism, and encouraging its advocates in their unamerican ideas, may be traced the influences that made possible this startling crime.

Sentiment, good or evil will ultimately find expression in the conduct. The deed never rises higher than the thought behind it. The democratic press of this county has been guilty of disseminating sentiments pregnant with danger to society and the financial interests of the community. Many were amazed a few weeks ago to see quoted with editorial approval in the application of getting votes, the monstrous maxim "Make money honestly if you can, but make it anyhow."—Many have put away the incident and will await results. During the summer we had an instructive object lesson from one of our active politicians escorting manufacturers through the town, introducing them to the moneyed citizens and offering these manufacturers inducements to locate their plants in Easton, a very commendable thing to do. But in subsequent issues of a democratic paper in this town, manufacturers were characterized as "robber manufacturers."—Capital is always cautious, and that strangers should hesitate to invest their money in a community where their business is assailed and themselves denounced as robbers is not astonishing. Not a few of average intelligence and many who are untrained in the mental process of weighing questrons of magnitude and incapable of forseeing results, accept the vilest denunciations as truthful statement and repeat them among their neighbors, ignorantly insensible to the danger of leading some one on to the perpetration of a great crime.—The undeviating law of result is, that the harvest will be the same in kind as the seed, and from the seeds of bad sentiment sown in the past and being sown now will come the future harvest.

THE Baltimore Sun is the one paper of all the dailies that come to this office on which we implicitly rely for correct general news. It contains all the topics of the day without as well as within the borders of the State of Maryland; its editorials are well written, to the point, and honestly expressed. It does not continually brag on what it is doing and accomplishing for the city, State or Nation. Its politics, though very different from ours in general, is of that sensible sort that commands respect, and on the whole, it gives one the best picture of governmental affairs that we can find in the papers of the day It does not aim at wit and humor. Its aspirations are to become great, and those aspirations are attained to an unusual degree.

THIS is the way an Atlanta Constitution correspondent describes Judge Crisp's opponents: "Tariff haters and men whose exclusive tariff reform ideas are but cloaks to hide their advocacy of the internal revenue system. They are the creatures of the bonded warehousemen. The aroma of the Government distillery exudes from their garments and their noses are painted a mottled red."

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating Sick Headache Heartburn Sour Stomach

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

For Sale By J. S. GRIFFITH, and Leading Grocers of Easton.

THE State of Arkansas is practically bankrupt. There is not a dollar in the State treasury. No money will be available, probably for months and even the absolutely necessary expenses of running the government cannot be met. This deplorable condition of affairs cannot be charged to the so-called "carpet baggers." The State has been beggared by the extravagance and incompetency of democratic rule.

SOME interesting facts appear in the annual report of Mr. Lacy, the Controller of the Currency, covering the year ending October 31, 1891.—While 193 new national banks organized during the period, with a total capital of $20,700,000, voluntary liquidations and insolvencies cut down the net gain to 127 banks, with $12,953,000 capital. The failures were greater in number than in any other year, but less disastrous in regard to liabilities and capital. Over half the insolvent banks were located in two Western States and failed from the effects of four successive poor harvests. However, throughout the country the national banks made an excellent showing. During the last twenty-nine years the annual average loss to creditors has amounted to only 1-20 of 1 per cent. of their average liabilities.

THE Democratic contest for the Speakership of the House was determined Monday night by the nomination of Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia. It was not an unexpected result.

The controversy has developed a division in the Democratic party regarding the tariff question which is of the greatest significance after the unanimity with which it went into the last Presidential campaign on that issue and was beaten. In the race which President Cleveland led his party he never did have the cordial support of many leading democrats such as Gorman and Hill. They have been back of Crisp in the contest because they deemed it safer to put in the Speaker's chair a man who, while he may hold substantially the same views as Mills, has not been aggressive in declaring them.

Mr. Mills had the energetic support the most if not all of the out and out free trade element of the party, and of the distinctively Cleveland following. At Washington urging his cause were two members of the Cleveland Cabinet. There was never any doubt that Mills' election was intended to be the first step toward the nomination of Cleveland and it would have meant an aggressive, open and ceaseless assault upon the protection system throughout the present Congress. The Cleveland newspapers and the Cleveland supporters are responsible in a large degree for so shaping the contest.

But the anti-Cleveland end of the party has won a great victory. It is due partly to the fear of the party to enter upon a campaign under the banner of Roger Q. Mills, and partly to the skilled leadership of those democrats who are not willing to have Grover Cleveland again nominated for the Presidency. While Crisp will get Speaker's chair the victory in party leadership must go to Arthur P. Gorman, of Maryland and David B. Hill, of New York. It opens up some interesting features for the coming struggle in the democratic party. It is an announcement to the country of very serious difference of opinion, at least in the matter of party policy.

It may now be expected that the democratic majority in the House will play a game of subterfuge on the tariff question, and carry it through the Presidential campaign. It has turned down Mills, with his open free trade declarations, and it means if possible to cheat the people into believing that the candidate and platform with which the party went through the last campaign are not what it now wants—Crisp is a party mask.—Philadelphia Press.

What Shall we do With Our Boys?

"Whose boys?" "Your boys; your neighbor's boys; everybody's boys." Boys will be boys, but not everyone knows how to manage them; but if you wish some practical commonsense suggestions, read the article on the subject published in the January number of Demorest's Family Magazine, that ideal publication which bears out to the full the promise of its name. The January number contains a genuine holiday feast. The subject of the beautiful water-color "A Slippery Spot" appeals to every parent who has little ones, and the subtle sentiment of the exquisite full page engraving, "Eloquent Silence" (after a painting by Alma-Tadema,) will be appreciated by men and maidens. The artistic attractions include, besides, over 200 other pictures, illustrating "Burma and Burmese" by a resident of Burma; "Evolution of Modern Costume," interesting alike to men and women; "Intelligence Offices in Paris," which will strike a responsive chord in every housekeeper's heart; "Home Art and Home Comfort," which, besides novel ideas for fancy work, includes a paper on "Amusements for a Sick Child;" "Correct Styles in Table Silver," an appropriate sequal to "A Course Dinner," given in the previous number; and several especially fine stories.—The departments, "Our Girls," "Sanitarian," Artistic Notes," "World's Progress," "Chat," "What Women are Doing," "Household," "Correspondence Club," and "Mirror of Fashions," each have special attractions this month; and this splendid menu, with variations, is furnished twelve times a year, for the subscription price of $2. Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York City.

Hired Girl.

This most laughable issue of Judge's Library, or Monthly Magazine of Fun, came out last month, but its sale has been simply immense. It is a well known fact that we delight to see things pictured which we do not enjoy in natural life. Thus it is we appreciate most keenly the repartee in the "Hired Girl." "Police" and "Hired Girl" are natural companion numbers and every man, woman and child in the country should see these great numbers, which our paper alone can offer at the reduced clubbing rate of $1.50 for Judge's Library and GAZETTE

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C. Dec. 7, '91.

Hon. Edward McPherson, the retiring Clerk of the House of Representatives, who is probably as widely known among republicans, owing to his having been Secretary of the Republican Congressional Committee in a number of campaigns, as almost any man in public life who has never been a candidate for a national office, called the House to order to-day, as the two hands met on the face of the big clock over the door of the main entrance and the session of the House of Representatives was formerly declared open.

The first business was the swearing in of the members, which, in order to save time, was done by State delegations. As soon as this was over the House proceeded to the election of its officers. The democrat was of course, elected Speaker, receiving the unanimous vote of his party, although it was plain to be seen that the protracted and bitter contest, ending only a few minutes before the convening of the House, had left its wounds and that a goodly portion of them did so unwillingly—how unwillingly will be made manifest later on in the pickerings that are certain to come over the bestowal of the committee chairmanships by the Speaker, a task which will hardly be accomplished before the holiday recess. The republicans voted solidly for Mr. Reed, and to a man they were proud to thus publicly endorse his able performance of the duties of the Speaker during the long to be remembered Fifty-first Congress.

Mr. McPherson retired from the chair and the newly elected Speaker, escorted by Mr. Reed, and his principal competitor before the democratic caucus for the nomination, took the chair amid the applause of those democrats who have been his original supporters in the caucus. Then the House proceeded to the election of its other officers. All of the retiring House officials were honored by the republicans with complimentary nominations.

The Speaker appointed the usual committee to join with a like committee from the Senate to personally notify the President that the Fifty-Second Congress was in session and ready to receive any message that he might send it. Then came what is always the most amusing thing about the opening of a new Congress—the drawing for seats. Preliminary to this proceeding all of the members were requested to stand up, beyond the brass railing which runs around the hall, just at the back of the last row of seats. Each member was then given a number, and as many marbles as there were members were correspondingly numbered and placed in a box. A blindfolded boy then appeared on the scene, and after the box had been well-shaken he drew out one marble. The member whose number corresponded with that on the marble drawn had the first choice of seat. This was repeated amid the laughter and cheers of the members and the crowded galleries until the members were all provided with seats. Some of the most prominent members of both parties, as usual, drew the poorest seats, but this was remedied by other members who were more fortunate trading with them. Two of the members—Holman of Indiana, on the democratic side, and O'Neil of Pennsylvania on the republican side, were in accordance with the usual, custom, as the oldest members of the House to select their seats before the drawing began. Owing to the preponderance of the democrats in the House, many of them are seated on the West side of the chamber, which is known as the republican side.

Vice President Morton, presided over the opening session of the Senate, which owing to the President having decided to withhold his annual message until Tuesday, was confined to the business of swearing in the new Senators, of whom there were sixteen, an unusually large number.

Commissioners from a large number of the British Colonies are here, and all of them confess to being on the anxious bench lest the President shall take advantage of the authority given him by the reciprocity clause of the McKinley tariff law to restore the duty upon their hides and sugar after January 1, next. They, one and all, wish to reciprocate with us sufficient to save themselves.

The Mills-Crisp dead-lock which existed in the democratic caucus from Saturday until to-day, is but a demonstration of the harmony that exists between the Cleveland and anti-Cleveland wings of that party in the House, and it may be added out of the House too. H.

The B. & O. South-Western Limited.

On November 20th, the B. & O. R. R. placed in service on its South-Western Limited Express train running from Baltimore and Washington to Cincinnati and St. Louis an entirely new equipment, built expressly for this train by the famous Pullman Company. The new cars embrace all the features that has rendered the Royal Blue Line trains so universally popular, and include the safety vestibule steam heat, Pintsch gas light, the anti-telescoping device, and convenient toilet accessories for men and women. The train leaves Baltimore daily at 2.30 p.m., arrives at Cincinnati next morning at 7.45, and St. Louis at 6.35 next evening. The entire train runs through from Baltimore to Cincinnati, and the sleeping cars run through to St. Louis. 3t
