It is not theory but fact—that Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the weak strong. A fair trial will convince you of its merit.

—Attention is called to the advertisement of Jarrell and Nichols who are determined to show their customers that they are leading the dry goods trade of Easton.

—What is life insurance? It is an investment made when one is in good health, by small annual instalments, payable at one's death to his heir. It is a form of laying up money. It is not, in any obnoxious sense, gambling or betting. It is investing when you are prosperous, a small capital for your own old age or for your wife or children when you are gone. No company or corporation has so largely emphasized this in its actual experience as the old Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York. All its policies are guarantees—no forfeiture, no lawsuits. Paid to dependent families $150,000 000. Paid to living policy holders in dividends and endowments nearly $200,000 000. Disbursing daily from forty to sixty thousand dollars. Assets, one hundred and sixty millions Send name, age and address to W. M. Coney, Easton, Md. for illustration of results. Take it now. tf

The Bone Returned.—The bone which was facetiously referred to a few weeks ago in these columns as having been stolen from Hubbard & Brother has been as carefully returned as it was removed. The perpetrator saw the call in the paper and began to repent with the result as shown. Mr. Hubbard believes in advertising as well as paying for them. Long may his factory flourish and honors thick and fast be heaped upon him.

Coughing Leads to Consumption.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles!

Symptoms—Moisture; intense itchin and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cts. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia

—Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage says:—"In this day God has mercifully allowed those of us who have a limited income to make provision for our families through the great Life Insurance Companies all over the land. By some self denial on our part, we can make this provision for those we shall leave behind us.—How a man, with no surplus of estate, but still enough money to pay the premium on a Life Insurance Policy, can refuse to do it, and then look his children in the face, and say his prayers at night on going to bed, expecting them to be answered, is a mystery to me I have never yet been able to fathom.—The utter indifference of many people on this important subject accounts for much of the crime and pauperism of our day."

You cannot afford to be longer indifferent. All the policies and plans of the Mutual Life provide equally as well for your own expected old age as for the dependent family and relatives. Every premium paid is a guaranteed interest investment to be paid you if living, your family if you should die. Do not longer delay this important matter—call and see or write us.

Mr. Editor:—Whilst our Easton fathers are becoming imbued with the progressive spirit in establishing a Board of Trade and encouraging manufacturing interests, would it not prove beneficial and add to her contemplated improvements if they would look well to her street's which are now in a miserable condition. Any of our enterprising citizens would act gratuitously as Street Commissioners, and by a wise and judicious management, give to us an attractive, clean, healthy town, worthy of being called the County Seat. Most respectfully, Longwoods. Edwin C. Allard.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Lurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in, and finally terminated in Consumption Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. Kings New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. C. Henry Bro.'s Drug store, regular size, 50c. and $1.00

W. C. T. U.

Women's Christian Temperance Union meets every Sabbath afternoon at 3.30 o'clock in its hall (second floor) corner of Washington and Dover streets; entrance on Dover St. An invitation is extended to all who wish to attend these meetings.

In the temperance work we have great reason to thank God and take courage. If this cause be of man, it will come to naught; if it be of God, you cannot overthrow it. We judge of the rightousness of our cause by the results and these are: The restoration of many drunkards to society, virtue and religion, the growing sentiment against social drinking, as a safeguard to the young, the increased opposition to the liquor trafic.

Therefore we will take courage and work on, leaving the final results in the hands of Him in whose hearts are the hearts of all men; working, praying, hoping and believing that, though we may no live to rejoice over the results, though we may see no green blade rising to bless our sight, we may in the better land welcome those who shall come laden with sheaves reaped upon the harvest field we have been permitted to sow and pray over, but of which we have not been permitted to gather in the increase.

John B. Gough.

THE LIQUOR TRAFIC.

SERMON BY REV. S. C. OHRUM.

"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him and maketh him drunken also"—Hab. 2: 15.

This curse of God is being felt more in the present day than ever before. Notice as an example, the growing.

A remarkable change has come over the country in the last fifty years. Once it was about as popular to sell whiskey as sugar or coffee. Some of us remember when nearly every country store had it whiskey barrell in those days, both husbands and wives thought it as honorable to have their jug filled as to buy food and clothing. Many preachers, even encouraged the business. A man was not thought any the worse church member because he sold whiskey. But how different it is to-day. This resolution in public feeling is realized by the man who sells whiskey. He feels that public sentiment is against him. The best people with very few exceptions look down on him. They do not care to receive him into their homes. He knows that there attaches to his family the stigma of being a tavern keeper's wife and a rum seller's child.

This charge of public sentiment is one of the most encouraging signs of the times. It means that the church of Christ is learning more clearly its duty. It means that the people are beginning to realize the disgrace attaching to that business that has upon it the curse of God. It is one the influences that will do a noble part in sweeping the accursed trafic from our land. Let the tide rise higher! Give the whiskey seller no quarter while he is in the business. He deserves none. Tell me that he deserves respect, when his business makes him a thief and a robber—taking the hard earned money from the poor family, perhaps helpless children, without giving an honest equivalent in return. And what else but a murderer could you call a man from whose bar there goes forth that vile stuff that destroys health and life? It is not sufficient to say that the man who drinks the whiskey is responsible. If I were to sell a man a knife knowing that he would cut his throat with it who would not say that I was partly responsible for his death? But suppose he sent some one else to buy the knife, what difference would that make? I tell you no whiskey seller can conduct a decent business. It is the business itself that disgraces the man, no matter how carefully he may conduct it. Then let the tide rise on! I can pity a man who drinks whiskey, and can take him by the hand as his friend, to help him into a nobler life; but for the man who sell him the whiskey I have only the supremest contempt a loathing as for a foul and unclean thing. Let all good people continue to turn on the lights, until this business is driven into the extreme of unpopularity. Let men see it as God sees it. Then no man with the least particle of self respect, will longer endure the man who is a disgrace to any decent community.

But what should we think of the signers?

The men who write their names on the application for license? What is the moral difference between their acts of signing and the whiskey seller's act of selling? Without their names he could not sell. Their names permit his act and endorse him in it. Is not their act of signing just as bad as his act of selling? What whold be the difference between me and a murderer if I gave him money to buy a knife, and look on while he plunged it into the bosom of your child? How could I hope to escape the censure you would have for such a heartless fiend? The signer for liquor license puts that knife into the hand of your friends most cruel enemy. Shudder for that unfortunate man who dies in the horrors of delerium tremens, and pity the young man who is being ruined body and soul by drink; but then think that it is because someone puts his name to a paper for someone else to sell whiskey. You cannot put all the blame on the whiskey seller. The men who sign for his license deserve just as much of our censure, perhaps more. Which do you censure most, the vicious dog that bites you or the owner who turned him loose on the community? We cannot expect any more of the dog, because it is a dog; but we do expect more of the man, because he pretends to be a good citizen.

Here they are—the men who are responsible (holding up the Delta papers of January 22nd, 1892, containing the names of the signers.) Do you despise the whiskey business and look down on the man who sells it? Then let not the signer fancy that he is excused. God's judgement stops not alone on seller, but goes with equal force against the man who signs the paper. It will be seen and felt some day, unless there be a hurried change from evil ways. The names (holding up the papers,) teach us one important fact,—that some of our best citizens have learned that it is best not to sign a liquor license. It may be because they see the sinfulness of the act, or it may be on account of the unpopularity of the thing. Certain it is however that very few good citizens now sign the paper. Compare this list with the list of a few years ago. Some of the names are the same it is true,—rumsuckers, and men without respect for God or man, and men who expect to get their drinks without paying for them. But when you pick out our good citizens, how lonely they appear. They do not look well in such bad company. Some of the signers are my friends; men of whom we have a right to expect better things. I condemn their act, as also they are blamed by their best friends and all good thikking people, because it rests under the condemnation of God. I speak not with words of malice, but as a friend; for gladly would I welcome them all to my church.

It is the duty of all good citizens to speak out on this great question. Explain to men who sign for liquor license the true nature of their act. Let it be known that to sign for the whiskey is just as bad as to sell it. Make the moral sentiment so strong that no man with a grain of respect for himself and community, could be persuaded to put his name to a paper that has upon it the curse of God and condemnation of man.

Sin.—The following paper was recently read by Miss Maggie Wilson before the Young People's Social Lyceum of the M. P. Church, of Easton. By special request she has kindly submitted the same for publication in this paper.

I will first ask you to look back with me to the time when this world of ours was fresh from the hand of God; when the maker of it pronounced it "good;" when never ending joy filled it; when the voice of God was heard talking with its inhabitants; when earth was paradise. Never a sorrow, never a fear, never an aching brow, never a still white face in all the world!

Why now the fading leaf and flower? Why now sorrow and suffering? Why now poverty and distress? Why now the bier and the shroud? One word will answer the question, Sin. Were there no sin on earth, it would still be paradise.

Sin has brought us all our woe,
Made countless bitter tears to flow,
Filled the world with want and wrong,
And doomed to death the mortal throng.

Sin in our hearts and in the world around us is a distressing fact. Men and women, too, have all sorts of ways of looking at sin; all kinds of theories about it; all sorts of conclusions in regard to personal responsibility concerning it. I was in a meeting a few years ago and this was the subject under discussion. I was astonished to hear so many theories concerning its entrance into the world. But all the time Rom. 5 12 was sounding in my ears, "By one man sin entered the world, and death by sin." I have no theories to offer to-night on a subject so dark and appalling, a subject that has baffled all theories and defied all human efforts to overcome its evil effects. Laying all else aside to-night, let us in our helplessness ask "What does God say of sin?" In the first place God tells us that we are all alike as to having a sinful nature. Rom 3 23, Rom. 5 10, 1 John 1 8, Eccles. 7-20, 1 John 1-10. I don't think it takes a very keen observation to see that "the tail of the serpent is over us all." God also says that sin is in the heart, and manifests itself in the outward act. Mark 7-21, 22, 23; Jer. 17-9, Prov. 4-23.

Sin in the heart is against God. He is a searcher of hearts and knoweth the inward thoughts and intentions. Men may not know your secret thoughts, perhaps some of them you would not wish your fellow man to know, but God knowth them everyone.—Psalms 90 8.

We have no need to pierce the veil that hides the future and peer curiously into the life beyond to see the evil consequences of sin.

There are plenty of witnesses around us to establish the fact that sin brings disaster and fearful loss. "Sin bringeth forth death" declares the word of God. Its direful consequences are everywhere apparent. Heart aches, sorrows untold, poverty, human wrecks are scattered the wide earth o'er. Go to our prison cells, our aims houses, our inebriate asylums, and there witness the fearful havoc that sin has wrought in a world at whose creation "the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy," and that God, its Maker, created 'good.' How eloquently wrecked lives appeal to us to hate the thing that has made such ruin in the world Were there no remedy, fearful beyond measure would be our condition. Men and women are trying various expedients and experiments for the cure of sin. Some are trying morality. "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God," says the word. Can morality cleanse the sinful heart and make it pure? Tell me, ye who have tried it. Others are trying philanthrophy; self culture; following the high ideal in the example of Christ. All of these are praiseworthy, but they have no power to cleanse from sin. God who knows the nature and consequences of sin has given us a remedy, absolute and perfect. Christ has come to make his blessings known far as the cure is found. Glad, good news! There is a fountain for sin and uncleanness, an open fountain, a freely flowing fountain.

"And sinners plunged beneath that flood, Lose all their guilty stains." Zech 13 1.

"The remedy is complete. Matt. 1 21, and hear John's testimony, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." and again he says, "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his son, cleanseth us from all sin."

One Sunday our lesson was about the woman who touched the hem of Christ's garment and was made whole. I was trying to teach it to the little folks in the infant room. One of the lesson truths was "Christ Jesus can make thee whole." I wondered if the children knew what that meant, so I asked, "Can any one tell what that means 'Christ Jesus can make thee whole?'" Never shall I forget the answer given by a little seven year old girl. "Why," said she, "it means Jesus can take all the sin away." Could the wisest theologian have given a simpler, clearer, truer, more beautiful answer than that? There is cleansing in his blood. It washes whiter than snow. Isaiah 1-18, Ps. 51-7. Far away in the northland, where the earth is forever wrapped in a mantle of snow, an arctic explorer lies buried. On his tomb are these words, "Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." What a beautiful thought to carve them there where the snow forever lies in dazzling whiteness!

When the portals of heaven swung open and John beheld before the throne that great white robed multitude of all nations and peoples and kindreds and tongues, and what was the answer to the inquiry, "Who are these?" "These are they which have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Let me be as moral as it is possible to be, let me fill my days and hours with good deeds let me grow daily more and more like Christ, my ideal, still I must sing

"Could my tears forever flow,
Could my zeal no languor know,
All for sin could not atone,
Thou must save, and Thou alone,
In my hand no price I bring,
Simply to thy cross I cling."

And now, unto Him that is able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the throne of his glory with exceeding joy, unto Him be glory and power and dominion now and forever. Amen.

An Old Dwelling House.—Workmen are now engaged in taking down the old dwelling house on the farm known as "The Isthmus," in Bopkin's Neck. This is one of the most ancient buildings in the county and with its demolition will pass away one of the most venerable land marks of Talbot. It is a frame building with massive brick gables built of English brick, one story high with hip roof. Every piece of timber and board in it was sawed and dressed by man power, and all the nails, of which there are a great many sizes, are hand made. The first coat of plaster is pure clay with a large percentage of hair, over which is two thick coats of white mortar.—The lower rooms are panneled from floor to ceiling, and the weather boarding on front is carved in blocks to represent bricks. The chimneys look strong enough to withstand a bombardment from one of our modern iron clads. The location of this old homestead is one of the many beautiful building sites to be found in our county. It is on the upper bank of Plaindealing Creek near its mouth, on a point formed by a cove and the creek. The southern view is very extended, taking in the ancient town of Oxford, many picturesque points on the Tread Aven, and across the great Choptank River to the shores of Dorchester county.

This estate is a part of a large tract taken up under a grant from Lord Baltimore, by the Hopkins family about the middle of the seventeenth century. Quite a number of the descendants of the family reside in the vicinity of Skipton and Wye Mills and in Philadelphia. It passed from the Hopkins, by intermarriage, to the Bannings, in colonial times, who retained possession of it for more than a century. It was purchased by Jas. H. Easter, of Baltimore, in 1868 who resided there about twenty years. It is now owned by Thornton Rollins, of Baltimore, who is having the old structure removed, for the purpose of erecting a modern cottage on the original foundation.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by his motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. 26july

FARM AND GARDEN

THE CARE OF HIDES.

How to Take Off and Cure Beeves' Hides with Greatest Profit.

Beef is low in price, and it should be the aim of every farmer who kills beeves for home use, or to sell in their nearest town as dressed beef, to get out of each animal all that is in it. To do this, says The Farm, Field and Stockman—from which the following cuts are a reprint—we must begin with the hide.

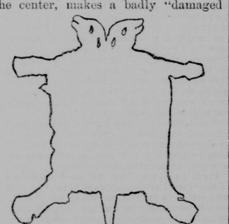

IN POSITION FOR TAKING OFF THE HIDE.

If a hide is taken off and properly cared for it will often bring a fifth or fourth as much as the dressed carcass. If taken off improperly and neglected it will bring very little. A hide ought to more than pay for taking it off. After the animal is dead turn it up on its back and run a sharp knife along the carcass as indicated by the dotted line in Fig. 1.

To do this, thrust in the knife, point foremost and edge up, and run the slit the entire length of the carcass, from the chin over the breast in the line of the navel to the tail. Then slit the skin of each leg from the cleft of the foot to the central slit. If these lines are followed the hide will be the right shape to care for when removed. The horns do not go with the hide, nor does the tail bone, the tail and ears do.

After the hide is removed spread it out as in Fig. 2. Cut off all pieces of fat and flesh (for if you are not an adept you will probably either have some such pieces on the hide or some holes in it, and it is better to have meat than holes, as very slight cuts, especially at or near the center, makes a badly "damaged hide," and it likewise damages the price badly), and sprinkle the flesh side with salt. Fold the hide flesh side in and put where it will not freeze.

Hatching Eggs and Breaking Up Sitters.

From the poultry department of the experimental farms, Ottawa, comes a report of the hatching results from eggs set on dry boards and on damp ground. Both of these methods have their advocates. The contention on one side is that eggs to hatch out well must be placed on damp ground or on some substance calculated to retain moisture, and the opposite on the other side. It appears from the report under consideration that the fertility of the eggs had more to do with the result than the location of the sitter. Manager Gilbert hazards the opinion, however, that it is quite possible that early in the season, when the weather is yet cold, the dry floor may be the best, because it is likely to be warmer. In the hot season the cool, damp cellar would be preferable. This opinion is substantiated in part at least by experiences of the writer, who has found nests near or on the ground more advantageous in warm, dry climates than nests placed on a dry floor.

In his report Manager Gilbert tells how to break up a sitter when it is desirable to get her to laying again as soon as possible. He says: "The best way to accomplish this is to put the broody hen in a coop or compartment without a nest, where she cannot sit, feed her generously, and in a few days she will cease to be broody, and if the good feeding is kept on will soon be laying again. The practice of ducking the broody hens in water, tying them to a stake, swinging them by their legs, is simply cruel and unnecessary. Some hens, Wyandottes, for instance, are much more easily broken up than others. A broody member of the Spanish family should not be used as a sitter. Occasionally an exception may be found, but as a general rule, although very fussy, they are not trustworthy."

Partly Exhausted Lands.

Much partly exhausted land is far richer than is commonly supposed. What it has lost is the humus or vegetable matter that by decomposing furnishes heat and helps make mineral fertility available. In all heavy soils especially there are stores of plant food that the roots cannot get at unless they have the apparent stimulus of a little nitrogenous fertilizer to set them loose. This explains why light dressings of composted manure or of commercial fertilizers often produce astounding results. Their fertility is at once available. They give the plants a start, and once started they are able to find all they need. —American Cultivator.

Incubators.

The hen is undoubtedly the best incubator for a limited number of eggs and as far as she goes, but her capacity is limited and her willingness to set cannot be relied on. Hence the necessity of a machine to do her work without grumbling—hence the incubator. More than half the $150,000,000 worth of poultry consumed in France every year is hatched artificially. For hatching large broods the incubator is the thing. We cannot recommend any particular one.

Dancing Killed Him at Seventy-nine.

James McCarty, of Gaskill township, one of the most unique characters of Jefferson county, and perhaps of the state, died Friday, aged seventy-nine years. His death was caused by overheating himself dancing in the open air, for old as he was McCarty could still keep step to a tune in a very lively fashion. He would often play the violin and dance to the music for half an hour at a time, greatly to the amusement of the onlookers. For years his occupation has been hunting. Up to the time of his last illness he was remarkably active.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

A Train of Elevator Cars.

From an elevator point of view the new Masonic temple building in Chicago will be the most important in the world. It will have twenty-four cars built in a circular shaft having a 250 foot rise. There will be express elevators, way and freight trains. The first will go to the top floor without stopping, while the others will stop either at every floor, or at the fifth, tenth, fifteenth and so on. They will not run at full speed, probably because passengers do not like the sensation of flying.—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

A Solid Silver Dinner Service.

Probably the most magnificent complimentary present ever received by a European sovereign is the emperor of Austria's silver wedding gift to the czar. It consists of a dinner service of solid silver, superbly wrought and chased, each piece bearing an imperial eagle. The service is for twenty-four persons, and there are 280 pieces.—London Truth.

Cotton Seed Oil Generates Fire.

The recent losses by fire in the cargo of ships carrying cotton has shown that cotton seed oil, when held in the cotton on the outside of the bale, rapidly oxidizes and generates spontaneous combustion.
