—Dr. Andrew Stafford; a prominent citizen of Caroline Co., died at his home in Preston, on Friday of last week. He was a literary man of rare attainments, and a staunch republican.

The GAZETTE crew—in the absence of the editor—return thanks to Mr. Daniel Montague for the quart of luscious strawberries left at this office. They were of the Sharpless variety. These sixteen mammoth fan-tailed berries satiated the cravings of the 'four boys' who are holding up this end of the GAZETTE. We are "berry" thankful to Mr. Montague.

Mr. Leonard Swartz left his compliments at the GAZETTE office, in the shape of a quart of Bubach No. 5 strawberries—13 berries in all, shaped something like an elephant's boot. The "GAZETTERS" killed these mammoth berries on the spot, and all hands, at this writing, are in a comatose condition.

Berried alive. Scarcely had we recovered from the above attack when Mr. Wm. E. Willson kindly sent into this "aching void" a basket of elegant, large, Sharpless strawberries. We all thank him "utmostly" and after having placed ourselves comfortably on the outside of them—have resolved to gird up our loins and hold the fort, if possible, until the editor returns.

Lawn Mowers.—Shannahan & Wrightson Hardware Co. will sell you a first-class Lawn Mower at bottom price.

Half Fare to Chicago.—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad announces the sale of round-trip tickets from all stations to Chicago, June 16th to 20th inclusive at rate of one fare for the round trip, on the occasion of the National Democratic Convention, on June 21. Tickets will be valid for return journey until July 8th, inclusive. 28may3t

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by his motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. 25july

Deserving Praise.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. J. C. Henry & Bro., druggists.

Memorial Day.—Memorial day was fittingly observed in Easton. The Grand Army Post was assisted by the Sons of Veterans, Order of Red Men, Talbot Guards and M. E. and Southern Methodist S. S. and citizens generally. Impressive services were held in Spring Hill Cemetery. Commander Coburn gave an address of welcome to those who had assembled to honor the memory of the Nation's dead. Divine blessing was invoked by S. S. Thompson. Walter H. Thompson sang "Nearer My God to Thee," in which most of those present joined. J. C. Mullikin read orders from the National and State Commanders of the G. A. R. Dr. Buffett then delivered an oration, which is here appended. Rev. Mr. Avery of the M. E. Church followed in a well timed eulogy of the services rendered by the dead heroes. Then the graves of all the soldiers and sailors were decorated, those of the Confederate as well as the Union armies The old Revolutionary soldier, Dr. John Coates was not forgotten. It is noticeable that all over our country memorial day is becoming more each year, a holiday devoted to the dead. The graves of the cherished departed are strewn with the emblems of affection, by loving hands. It seems proper that the busy people of this great nation should devote one day each year to the visiting of the graves of the departed, to contemplate upon the virtues of those whose life battle is over, and meditate upon our own moral existance. We should give way to the refining influences of Memorial Day.

DR. BUFFETT'S ORATION.

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic and fellow citizens: Thirty one years ago was the commencement of that civil war, which came so near severing these United States, and to-day we are here to pay tribute to those that laid down their lives for their country. Many, Oh! how many left homes and loved ones, never to return again. The kiss that was given was the last kiss on earth. The wife was left, more than a widow, the mother more than childless.

The sacrafice of life was such that it is even now appalling to consider, familiar as we have tried to make ourselves with all that transpired during the four years of that deadly conflict. Only those that have borne the brunt of battle, only those that have bade a wife good-bye, only those that kissed the little ones, not knowing but that it was for the last time, as they were ordered to join their companies, can ever realize the sacrafice that was made by those we commemorate to-day. Heavy were the burdens they bore, sharp were the thorns they wore as they answered their country's call. Duty commanded and they marched forward, turning neither to the right nor to the left but onward, still onward through the storm and tempest, through sunshine and rain, with the cold ground as their beds, their knapsacks their pillows.

Tongues cannot tell the hardships that were endured by our brave soldiers; words are indequate, even expressed by the most gifted of the land. The pen only gives a faint idea of the struggles and sufferings of the thousands as they went to the front and engaged in battle; knowing that they might meet death at the very instant, or they be wounded so that death would be a boon that they would even pray for. Husbands left their wives and babes and to the front they went with heavy hearts and soon these hearts had ceased to beat, their limbs were cold in death, the fatal bullet had done its work.

The son who had been the stay of the father in his old age and comfort of the gray-haired mother, never returned; the cannon's shell had mangled him. It is useless to attempt to give a just idea of the carnage that was wrought. The, painters with their skill, have failed to represent on canvas the battlefield in all its horrors. The groans and pains cannot be expressed by any skill art or science professed by man. The mind may perhaps, in a measure, conceive but cannot execute.

The cost of the war can be estimated as far as dollars are concerned, as to how much was spent for the navy, how much for the infantry. how much for the cavalry, how much for the artilery, but who can estimate the cost of that which is greater than money, human life, with its endearing associations of family ties broken in so many instances never to be united in this world.

Twenty-seven years have elapsed since the close of the war, yet there is mourning abroad in our land both north and south. Time is healing the wounds, yet the scars remain and always will remain. Future generations must not, cannot, and will not, forget the history written. May the records be made correct so that no false coloring no false impressions, no false statements, no prejudice, no sectional pride will be inscribed on its pages. Let truth in all its purity, with all its magic power, control and govern all that is transmitted. We would not blot out one single thing in regard to the great conflict but standing as they do, forever will they be a warning, a safeguard to our people and the nation will so securely stand that no internal strike will ever again threaten its safety. Differences will of necessity arise, but the sword, bayonet, powder and shell will not be the means used to battle these differences.

Our people have learned a lesson never to be forgotten; but will be handed down from one generation to another as long as we are a people on the face of the globe, as an heritage that will bind us together, as one true brother is to another, into one great grand brotherhood, which knows no north or south no east or west. With such a Union cemented together by loyalty, truth and justice, this nation is destined to be the nation of the world.

There may be a few who by acts, words and deeds, show not a true loyalty, but they are not the ones who fully know what war means. Those that have suffered most, those whose homes have been made desolate, those who have lost fathers, husbands, sons, brothers and all that was near and dear would and do prove to be the staunch supporters of the Union and with us would say, "Cursed be they who would dim a single star or take one stripe from our banner as it floats over this free land.

Members of the Grand Army you were engaged in this great struggle, you know what war means, some were more actively engaged than others and I feel assured that the prayers of hearts are that no such call will ever be made upon you, your children or your children's children. Age would prevent most of you again answering such a call; but you are leaving a heritage that would answer in your stead. Thanks to the great Ruler that controls, we feel assured that no such necessity will ever arise again. The penalty has been so great, the sacrafice so much, that peace, harmony, union, must forever be vouchsafed to these United States.

You are about to decorate the graves of your fallen comrades. They did not wield a coward's blade but were fearless and true. They are now at rest and theirs is a glorious rest. For liberty and justice they fought. As they kept their armor bright, so should we and strike for right and truth. Error must surely fall, the struggle may be severe but victory comes at last.

As you strew these flowers on all alike scatter them with gentle hands, as gentle as you would cover the wound of your comrade received in battle and may their beauty and perfume go up to Heaven as an offering for the peace and prosperity of all who live under the protection of the old flag.

Women's Christian Temperance Union meets every Sabbath afternoon at 3.30 o'clock in its hall (second floor) corner of Washington and Dover streets; entrance on Dover St. An invitation is extended to all who wish to attend these meetings.

The regular business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the usual place Wednesday, June 8th, at 3:30 o'clock P. M.

DEAR SISTERS:

In presenting to you my first report I wish to say that I know God will bless our efforts if we but do our part. I feel that the cause is advancing.

Our beautiful motto is "Our song is the song of the angels, our sword is the sword of the spirit, our march is the march of peace."

The full name of our department is "Peace and International Arbitration." One of the objects is to assist in preventing war in all its forms between nations by international courts of arbitration, or by the selecting of disinterested persons as arbitrators to settle such differences whenever they arise, as has been done frequently within the last few years.

War is dueling on a large scale. The time is not long past when any man was considered a coward who would receive an insult calmly or refuse to fight a duel when challenged.—Now, a duelist is an outlaw condemned by God and man. Can we, dear sisters, do otherwise than condemn national dueling? It is our duty as Christian women to advocate peace principles and to distribute peace literature whenever and wherever we can.

Another object of the department is to assist in abolishing capital punishment, or the taking of human life in any way. We are shocked at murder committed at dead of night in a lonely spot, but calmly contemplate a human body swinging at the end of a rope and an unprepared soul hurled into eternity before its time. One is legal murder and the other is illegal.

Punishment for crime should be to reform the criminal as well as to protect the citizen, not the taking of God's work in human hands. Capital punishment is degrading, inhuman and unchristian.

But much of our work is among the children; instilling into their minds peace principles, teaching them that it is wrong to disagree and quarrel among themselves. Teach them the Golden Rule and help them to live up to it. Have them subscribe for peace papers and give them tracts and leaflets on the subject.

Our national organ is the PACIFIC BANNER, price 25 cents per year. In clubs of ten 20cts. The paper for children is THE ACORN, price 12 cents. In clubs of ten 10 cents.

[Here followed a report of the work done in the county, which is only of local interest.]

And now, dear sisters, in conclusion I will say: "Every tree is known by its fruit. We do not gather grapes of thorns nor figs of thistles." On first thought this may be considered a self evident truth, but we find ourselves and others attempting to gather certain kinds of fruit from the wrong tree. We sow to the wind but do not expect to reap the whirlwind. We sow tares and expect to reap good grain. But it is a delusion. If we sow to the spirit we will reap life everlasting.

"The fruits of the spirit are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, against such there is no law." Then, if we sow to the spirit we must sow the seeds of the fruits of the spirit. Can we plant hate and reap love? Without hate there will be no contention. We cannot sow malice and reap joy. Joy seems to me to be a pure spiritual rejoicing; the bubbling over of a regenerated soul. Not the malicious gloating over a physical enemy, but the rejoicing over a spiritual victory won.

Can we sow discord and cultivate it through life and then pluck peace from its branches? Never. "As ye sow so shall ye reap." And so it is with every fruit of the spirit—long-suffering, not retaliation; gentleness, not self-defense; goodness not wickedness; faith—in what? In God, not in our own strength; meekness, not self-conceit; temperance, not revelings.

Now, if we are born of the spirit we will bear the fruits of the spirit. Not a part of them but all of them, and against them there is no law.

Friends, are we bearing the fruits of the spirit if we advocate war, retaliation, vengeance? Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord. If we are bearing the fruits of the spirit ourselves are we doing our whole duty if we do not try to cultivate them in others? Are we not requested as Peter was to "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep"?

Preston B. Spring vs. The B. & E. S. R. R. Co.—The decision in this case made by the Circuit Court last week made the probable conclusion of the contest between a few tax payers and the above named corporation, though after a five years contest for a varying sum of money, the final beneficiaries of the $25,000 in dispute were to be sundry citizens of Talbot Co., creditors of said Railroad, and the President of the Road, if any sum remained over after paying their debts.

The claim of the projectors of the Railroad since the first act was passed for its benefit in 1886 was that they started the Road in good faith believing that both Baltimore City and the various counties would aid them; that they had gone on relying on said aid and completed the road, that they had changed the contract with Talbot Co., from an endorsement of bonds for $50,000 to a subscription of $25,000 of stock and considered that subscription a contract from which the county should not, and could not escape. That the people had twice voted to give them aid, so that the good name and and credit of the county was bound to carry out the intention of the voters. The question why money voted to aid a Railroad should be voted to aid a Railroad should by act of the Legislature be transferred to the pockets of sundry individuals although raised by the the contestants was not touched either by the lawyers for the Railroad, nor by the judges in their opinion.

The contesting tax-payers have from the first contented and have repeatedly warned the Railroad to that effect, that in all its steps the Representatives of the Corporation must comply with the provision of the constitution designed in the interest of good government for the protection of the people from their own hasty or venal votes, and that outside of said constitution no power resided either by a popular vote or a legislative act to give away public funds. That all principles of public morality and decency required the County Commissioners of Talbot Co., to refuse to pay said money or lend said credit till they were sure that the provisions of the Constitution had been complied with and that if they so far forgot the duties of their office as to intend to create a county debt against law or not caring what the law might be, it was the duty of any good citizen to apply to the court for relief. They further claimed that in addition to the fact that the Railroad Company had from the start ignored the plain provisions of the constitution, neither being willing to carry out the provision of the act of 1886, (but causing it to be ratified in an illegal and deceptive manner which if unopposed would have been to the injury of Talbot Co.,) nor treating the act of 1890 as a new grant to the Railroad ratified accordingly, but endeavoring to hold Talbot Co., to a "so called" perpetual contract; that said corporation acted in bad faith and had no claim whatsoever on Talbot County.

That in the beginning of the construction of the road they were fully aware that the city of Baltimore had refused to endorse their bonds and that by the act of 1886 the counties became entitled to a first mortgage bond, that with that knowledge they went on with the building of the road issuing first mortgage bonds to a trust Company in Baltimore and having by their own action rendered it impossible for the counties to endorse their bonds; they had no claim in equity for any further aid.

That in endeavoring to treat the act of 1890 as a mere carrying out of the previous acts, and not advertising it for the information of the voters, they endeavored to evade a plain duty as directed by the constitution and made it impossible for the voters to know before the election of members to the Legislature, their intention to ask for the passage of any act which should compel Talbot Co., to subscribe to their stock.

Wm. H. Adkins, Esq. sole counsel for the tax-payers presented their case in an able argument which took broad and comprehensive views of the entire case from the first act of 1886 till the present injunction was asked for. He was opposed by numerous lawyers representing the interest of the road, the county and various creditors, the chief argument being presented by Joseph B. Seth, Esq.

The dicision of the court in favor of the tax-payers while said to be founded on the omission of the railroad to perform its duty in advertising the law before the election of 1890, carries with it by logical inference the destruction of Mr Seth's theory that the acts of 1886 and 1888 formed a binding obligation on the part of Talbot Co., and once more vindicate the rights of the minority to protection from the oppression of careless or indifferent voters, or still worse, the creation of improper and illegal laws by our intilligent legislatures.

Resp'y Yours, INSIDER.

The Easton Creamery.—A visit to our Creamery will entertain anyone who is interested in the productive and industrial progress of our farmers and Easton as well. Do we fully appreciate the fact that we are surrounded by a general purpose country? We are gradually emerging from old methods and time honored practices. It is not necessary in our agricultural progress, to discard old established productions, such as wheat and corn; but others can be added thereto. A diversity of produce from the farm, especially one like milk which brings in the cash every month in the year, must be of great benefit to our farmer.

Many can remember when our county was not regarded as being adapted to the dairy interest—"not naturally a grass section," it was said. Formerly little hay was made. This is not the case now, we produce good hay in great abundance. Grazing improves each year since the old rotation of "Corn, wheat and nothing" has been abandoned. Through the efforts of Dr. Earle and others, a number of farmers of this vicinity organized a stock company and erected a cremery building which is a model in plan and appointments. It possesses the capacity for handling double the quantity of milk which our farmers are prepared to supply. Within a radius of five or six miles, milk enough should be profitably produced to run this creamery at its full capacity.

Should not the farmers keep more cows and give more attention to the production of milk? With the usual corn fodder, hay and straw, together with soiling crops and ensilage this could be done without materially reducing the area of corn and wheat. Mr. Harrington, secretary, has furnished figures showing that the creamery company has received, in round numbers, two million pounds of milk during the twenty-two months which have elapsed since opening. At present schedule prices, which average one dollar per hundred pounds, the amount paid for milk would be over ten thousand dollars per annum. Yet the creamery business is only in its infancy. Our farmers in looking for a home market for their produce, should not neglect this interest. Why not build silos and reduce the cost and at the same time increase the flow of winter milk. While we are seeking new outlets and languishing for new industries, let us also support those already established.

THE PUZZLER

No. 155.—Riddle Me Ree.

My first is in pen, but not in ink.
My second in aster, but not in pink.
My third is in play, but not in fun.
My fourth is in cannon, but not in gun.
My fifth is in coffee, but not in tea.
My sixth is in ocean, but not in sea.
My seventh in speak, but not in word.
My whole is a very beautiful bird.

No. 156.—Small Boys, Take Warning.

A small boy went to a menagerie without an escort, and the strange sights and sounds affected him so much that he lost his head completely and then became a public newspaper announcement, as the hurry scurry business men of America call it "for short."

One of the animals found the head the boy had lost, and he (the animal) became so turned about and confused that he made first a loud noise, then a jump and at last looked very white and sick.

Moral: Small boys should not go to such places without some one to look after them.

No. 157.—Puzzles in Figures.

A person having about him a certain number of dollars said, "If the third, fourth and sixth of them were added together they would make seventy-two, how many had he?"

A man divided his fortune among his four children in the following manner: To the first he gave one-seventh; to the second, half of the remainder; to the third, two-thirds of what was then left, and to the fourth $2,000. What was his fortune?

Divide $33,248 by 256, and place the figures of the quotient in such a manner that it shall be equal to 34.

No. 158.—A Numerical Rhyme.

A vagabond, or a sort of a tramp,
Got himself in trouble today;
He first drank a great deal of 6, 8, 9,
And then stole a 7, 6, 8, 9 of hay.

He soon dropped that, when he found he was watched,
Then took a 5, 6, 7, 8, 9,
Which, though small, was inlaid in elegant style;
No doubt he thought it was fine.

In a large 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9
He next secured a shelter;
But soon found out that he was spied,
And left there "helter-skelter."

He jumped 2, 3 a 1, 6, 7, 8, 9 car
(That was his last resort);
But was captured there by the town
COMPLETE,
Who gave me this full report.

No. 161.—Metagram.

My first is coming after the usual time.
Change my head and I am a companion.
Again, and I am what is on the calendar.
Again, and I am destiny.
Again, and I am a girl's name.
Again, and I am the top of the head.
Again, and I am something for closing an entrance.
Again, and I am to appraise.

An Interruption.

He kissed her once, he kissed her twice;
He was a man of men:
I think he would have kissed her thrice
If papa hadn't come just then.

No. 151.—Ungathered Mayflowers:

All about the softening air
Of newborn sweetness tells,
And the ungathered mayflowers wear
The tints of ocean shells.
The old, assuring miracle
Is fresh as heretofore,
And earth takes up its parable
Of life from death once more.

No. 152.—A Mysterious Inscription: Begin with the bottom line and read upward, as—

Do not covet all you see, for he who covets all he sees often wants more than he sees.

Do not tell all you hear, for he who tells all he hears often tells more than he hears.

Do not spend all you have, for he who spends all he has often spends more than he has.

Do not say all you know, for he who says all he knows often says more than he knows.

Model Locomotive Engines.—The B. & O. R. R. has just placed in service on its Chicago Division three new passenger engines built at the Baldwin Locomotive Works, after new designs furnished by the Gen'l Superintendent of the motive power of the B. & O. Company. The engines 113,000 pounds, have driving wheels six feet six inches in diameter, cylinder 19x24 inches, and are without doubt the finest passenger locomotives running to the city of Chicago to-day. Companions of these new engines have devolved wonderful power and speed in hauling the famous Royal Blue Line trains, which run between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, over the Philadelphia Devision of the B. & O. Railroad. The B. & O. has added over forty, new high class engines, to its motive power equippment within the last sixty days, and others are under construction. While constantly adding engines of approved designs and of highest grades to its motive power, and passenger coaches of Pullman standard to its rolling stock. The B. & O. is also expending large amounts for second and third tracks and sidings, and improved facilities at terminal points. By the time the World's Fair is open for the reception of visitors the B. & O. will be well equipped to handle expeditiously, the large volume of passenger trafic which will naturally seek this picturesque route from the Atlantic sea-board to Chicago. 2t
