FOR PRESIDENT
BENJAMIN HARRISON, OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT
WHITELAW REID, OF NEW YORK.

GOD give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking:
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking.
For while the rabble with their thumb-worm creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land and waiting justice sleeps. —— Selected.

PICKING UP GOLD.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

"All baggage must leave the room by eight o'clock," was the notice we received upon our return to the hotel for dinner at San Francisco on the evening of May 26th. As the hour was then seven, it made some of the party, who had spent more of their time in Chinatown than they had anything else to spend, move about as if they meant business for once. We were not so caught, for we had but little to make ready, and had not loaded ourselves down with wares from that famous shopping district, the aforesaid Chinatown. After making ready to leave, and checking some of our surplus baggage through to our eastern homes, we took the ferry to Oakland pier and boarded the sleepers, which had been side tracked awaiting us. The grinning porters were glad to welcome the wanderers home after so long an absence of three nights at the hotel, and had our apartments arranged in the latest fad of Pullman comfort. We retired to the same berths that had been our resting places for night after night on prairie, plain and desert, and while they did not present the elegance and convenience of the best accommodations of a first class hotel, yet there was a home feeling about the old cars and their appointments that made them very welcome to the editorial party who had spent a few nights luxuriating at the fine hostleries of San Francisco.

The next morning found us ready for breakfast at Woodland, the county seat of Yolo county, and a beautiful little town of three thousand industrious and intelligent citizens. But as we had not time to devote to this favored spot, our trains moved on to the next point of interest for dinner. This was to be at the famous Chico, one hundred miles to the north, and in the county of Butte. So our second meal from San Francisco was taken one hundred and eighty six miles from that city and under most pleasant circumstances. We did not pay any or very little attention to the beautiful village of Chico, with its handsome residences and magnificent drives but went direct to one of the most attractive groves we had ever seen, where tables laden with California's choicest luxuries, invitingly arranged under towering shade, clothed in whitest linen and overseen by lovely looking ladies who wore the white ribbon, all conspired to make seven hundred hungry, tired victims of the editorial party feel an inward smile too huge to reduce to facial expression. We were seated. We ate. We drank ice cold lemon ade and water, or fruit flavored drinks. We were entertained in a style not to be surpassed by any entertainment we had received. Music, speeches of welcome and crowds of people were all to be seen at that grove in Chico. In fact it was California there except her wines. These had been omitted, these were not needed. It proved to the newspaper men that her citizens did not pride themselves alone on the products of the vine, but that there was abundance and to spare and in every direction and every variety—regardless of the drinks that had made the state famous and some of her citizens millionaires.

The Sacramento valley in which we were spending a day or two, visiting the prominent points and enjoying the hospitality of its citizens, is a section of the state most beautiful. Here flourish in profusion and abundance all varieties of products, including certain favored lines that are absolute specialties in other countries. The views caught from the passing train are beautiful in extreme. Magnificent orchards adorned with palatial mansions, present a scene most suggestive of prosperity and comfort, which is strongly indicative of the beneficial results that are obtained from the influences surrounding the life of the energetic California farmer. It was in this valley we visited the largest vineyard in the world, containing nearly four thousand acres of vines in actual bearing and new acres being added each year. This means six square miles of vineyard, laid out in geometrical straight lines and under a high state of cultivation, most as level as a floor, and as pretty as a picture. But we leave the vine clad hills, the immense orchards, the thousands of acres of waving wheat, the hedge-bordered farms, the meadows dotted with livestock and the agricultural and fruit-bearing sections of the valley and go north and east almost to the Nevada line into Placer and Nevada counties. Morning breaks. The air is cooler, the scenery changed. We are on the Sieras, but not within their snowy confines.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

For Sale By J. S. GRIFFITH, and Leading Grocers of Easton.

Along the base of Sieras there is a warm belt of country, probably 15 miles in width, where the climate is especially adapted to the growth of semi-tropical fruits, and ripens them in advance of the country below the belt. This is one of the California paradoxes. We found many, such as water running (apparently) up hill, etc., but this is a case where to go up the mountain and approach the snow line to find warmer climate. The explanation is simple. As the sun sinks, the upper stratum of air is cooler, sinks lower on the valley and the warmer air rises, which aided by the oceanbreezes that find the interior late in the day, makes the nights of this section tempered and void of frost. We are in this paradoxical belt. We are at Dutch Flat for a miners' breakfast. It is not to see the fruits and the largest cherry tree in the State that produces two hundred dollars' worth of fruit annually, are we invited. It is to see hydraulic mining in operation.

The train stopped at a spot where a small shade tree or two is the only depot seen. The sun is intensely hot. It is yet early morn, and the breakfast tables are arranged some half-mile below and are reached by a circuitous path, or miner's trail. The fastidious ones of our party had long since discontinued toilet aestheticism and donned the ways of the western specimen. So dusty, hot, careless we arrived at the tables at the foot of golden hill, where the powerful hydraulic jet was cutting out golden dirt by the ton. The whole surroundings had been worked, In fact we were upon a vast leveled mountain, as free from vegetation as a newly plowed field. The nearest approach to timber was the petrified remains of huge trees that had been washed out in wonderful state of perfection. Portions of these were taken as glittering, crystalized relics of the visit.

We were told by the speaker at the table after we had all been seated and the young girls were passing the viands consisting of coffee, roast beans, and sand-witches, that those mines had been closed for thirteen years by an act of Congress. That the acquaducts and gulches had fallen into decay, that the very soil on which we stood had yielded sixty million dollars' worth of gold and that there were at least one hundred million more in the hill which could be operated on by that plant. To get this was the desire of the company, and that they had spent ten thousand dollars and run a risk of being prosecuted to open up that mine for a few hours to show the editors just what hydraulic mining meant. We did see. We thoroughly understood it. We felt like miners ourselves when we left that place. The five methods of washing the soil were shown, and operatives were busy taking out the metal at each operation. The four earlier methods did not bother the Government because they were slow and harmless. Shovels full of earth were carefully washed, strained and the gold sediments collected. But as the gattling gun had superceded the old flint and steel, or as the reaper had taken place of the sycle, so has the hydraulic engine taken place of the pick and spade. It cuts the mountain down with its tremendous power. It reduces it to a level as though it were an ice berg against the moulten breath of Vesuvius. This rushing river of soil and metal tears down the mountain sides with the impetuousity of a hurricane, the madness of a Conemaugh. It lays waste the fertile valleys, it stops not until it fills the channels of the highway and ships obey its command to halt. This is why the Government put a stop to this wholesale leveling of the mountain for the sake of that root of all evil. But those people have found a way to use this method and at the same time prevent the washed soil from playing such havoc among other industries, and they want the editors to favor the passing of a bill by congress to permit these hydraulic methods of obtaining gold. It will be done. The editors have promised that the hydraulic companies can have what they want, so the ten thousand dollars expended together with what gold they took from the soil before our very eyes will be but a small consideration for the benefit they will receive when Congress permits them to go ahead with their squirting.

Some of the party took the trouble to shovel up unwashed soil, wash it and pocket two or three dollars' worth of gold crumbs for the half-hour's labor.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 20, '92.

Republican enthusiasm is plentiful around Washington to-day. The committee appointed by the National Convention, headed by Gov. McKinley, called at the White House at noon for the purpose of officially notifying the President of his nomination for the Presidency. The President, surrounded by the members of his Cabinet and other prominent republicans received the committee in the East room of the White House. Gov. McKinley made the notifying speech, which was a model address of its kind, not too long, not too short, not too gushing, not too stiff. In short, it was just the right speech for the occasion, and earned for the Governor the applause and congratulations of all who were fortunate enough to have heard it.

The President's reply was, like all the rest of his speeches, in choice language and perfect good taste; he indulged in no bragging or blustering, he is incapable of that sort of thing, but there was a ring in his voice and a look in his eye which left his hearers no doubt as to his feelings about the result of the election. He is confident of winning, but those who talk with him soon find out that he fully realizes the obstacle to be overcome, and does not expect to win without a hard fight, and the aid of every republican; and the knowledge that he has conscientiously performed his duty and given the country an administration that every patriotic American is proud of, makes him confident that no republican will withhold his aid or vote.

Washington has already held a number of ratification meetings since the nominations were made, several by the State Republican Association and one by the Knights of Reciprocity, and to-night there is to be another one, the principal speakers being Gov. McKinley and other prominent members of the notification commitee When it is remembered that the weather has been extremely hot here ever since the Minneapolis convention was held, that is a remarkable showing, and it gives the lie to democratic statements that republicans are indifferent to Harrison and Reid.

The presence of Hon. Chauncy M. Depew in Washington as the guest of Secretary Elkins has revived and given strength to the rumor connecting Mr. Depew's name with the cabinet vacancy, although some will have it that he comes only in an advisory capacity. Should Mr. Depew enter the cabinet it is regarded as probable that Secretary Tracy will be given the vacancy on the Supreme Court as the President would hardly care to have two members of his cabinet from New York, although there are plenty of precedents for his doing so if he feels so inclined. It is almost certain that Mr. Depew has been asked to become Secretary of State, and it is believed that he has not given a decisive answer because he wishes to consider the matter and consult his friends before doing so.

The democrats of the House nearly all wanted to go to Chicago to see the fight to the death between Cleveland and Tammany, and not desiring to present such a spectacle to the country as holding session with all empty seats on the side of the House to which two-thirds of the members belong they adjourned from Saturday until Wednesday, with the understanding that another adjournment for three days would be taken on that day, and the republican members good naturedly acquiesced. To-day democratic congessmen are rare birds in Washington, consequently there is not so much talk about the Chicago convention around the Capitol as there has been.

Before the House adjourned, Saturday, Representative Kilgore of Texas presented the passage of a bill by unanimous consent, allowing all G. A. R. men in the employ of the Government in this city with seven days leave with pay duing the National encampment in September. Mr. Kilgore enjoys nothing better than rapping the old Union Soldiers over the knuckels every opportunity.

The democratic members of the House committee on Reform in the Civil Service have signed report censuring Postmaster-General Wannmaker because he did not dismiss certain employes of the Baltimore Post-office recommended for dismissal by the Civil Service Commission. It is probable the republicans on the committee will present a minority report, upholding Mr. Wannamaker for not dismissing the men on such flimsy evidence, when he had a report contradicting even that, made by post-office inspectors.

The President and other prominent officials have been invited to attend the launching of the big battle-ship, Texas, at the Norfolk Naval yard on the 28th inst. This is the vessel about the plans of which there was such a controvercy early in the present administration. It was contended by some naval official, that the plans were radically wrong, and that the vessel would never float if it were built according to those plans. There were some changes made in them under a direction of naval officers, and she is now probably all right. It is expected that a large crowd will go from here to see the launching, as it will make a pleasant trip down the Patomac at this season of the year.

WOMAN AND HOME.

A WAY TO MAKE RUGS OF THINGS USUALLY THROWN AWAY.

Regularity in Nursing—Something to Be Thankful For—What Dr. Lemon Will Do—Where Some Mothers Fail—Many Things of Interest to Wives and Mothers.

I have made six rugs during the past six years—I make one every year since I learned the way—the plan of which I may claim to have invented; at least I have never seen any like them in the material used, and if some one else has the same idea I insist that it is original with me, in that I thought it out for myself. However, I do not intend to patent it, and now present it for approval to such housekeepers as dislike to waste anything.

In every family there are more or less knitted garments which are constantly being cast aside as past wearing—mittens, stockings, hoods, caps, scarfs, shoulder capes. I never put anything into the rag bag that I can ravel, woolen or cotton. As opportunity serves, I ravel and wind into balls any such castoff articles. It is work that children can do, if the mothers haven't much time. Anything strong enough to wind will do; and even short pieces may be used if the knots are neatly tied—a "weaver's knot" is best. Then, when a number of large balls have accumulated, wind them together, about four threaded. There is a chance for the exercise of taste in this particular. A thread each of black, white and red—three colors one will be most likely to have—and one of hit-or-miss—odds and ends wound together—will make a pretty rug. If one thread is cotton throughout, the work will be all the more durable.

Having prepared the yarn, one is ready to make the rug, which is crocheted "slipper stitch" with a medium sized bone hook and in a round or oblong shape, as may be preferred. I like the oblong style. It is shaped by crocheting a chain three-fourths of a yard long and working around it in single crochet, taking up the outside loop of the stitch each time. Widen at the corners and center of each end by making an extra stitch in one loop each time around. It will make three radiating points if correctly done. When it is large enough to suit, fringe with the same material by cutting the threads in any desired length and hooking them double into every stitch of the last row, drawing the ends through the loop. This gives a rug which is serviceable, pretty, easily made and costs nothing but an occasional leisure hour.—Agnes Rosenkrans in Good Housekeeping.

Regularity in Nursing.

The best time to give the child the breast is when it awakes out of sleep, and on its hunger being appeased it will generally again fall asleep without further trouble. The practice which some have of allowing the child to fall asleep with the nipple in its mouth before putting it into its cot is one to be avoided. A practice of this kind very soon becomes a habit with the child, and the mother herself may be astonished to find how great a hold it has taken upon it, and how difficult is the task, even in a short time, of getting the child to fall asleep without the nipple in its mouth.

Regularity in nursing is necessary during the first month, and it must be maintained in all its strictness until the appearance of teeth. The frequency, however, with which the child is fed need not now be so great as up to this time it has been. During the day the breast should not be given more frequently than once every two and a half or three hours, and during the night it should not be given oftener than once every three or four hours. As the child grows older the time which is allowed to intervene between each meal should be increased.

If such directions are attended to it will soon be found that the child will sleep four or five hours without awaking, and the mother will thus be enabled to obtain that amount of sleep which is so necessary for her at this time, but if, instead, her nights are broken and disturbed she will speedily suffer in health.

Till the appearance of the first milk teeth the child should be fed exclusively upon the breast milk; after that, which is nature's indication that the stomach has become fit to digest other substances, the child may be given rusks, tops and bottoms and a little of the prepared food. It may be that several of these foods may have to be tried ere one is found that will agree with the child, but when one that is suitable has been got, it should be at once adopted and should not be readily given up.—Manley Tempest, M. D., in New York Commercial Advertiser.

Women Should Be Thankful.

Talk about women being vain! Bless your heart, they don't begin with the men! What a blessing it is that a man's predilections for fine dress are circumscribed by the limitations of long prevailing fashion? If it is hard to get along with our Isaac and our Abraham now, when they are held in check by severe and practical modes of raiment, what would it be if they were allowed to deck themselves in knee breeches, silver buckles and plumed chapeaux as in days of old? Imagine a scrap with one's own husband bedecked in strawberry colored trousers, a purple velvet mantle and a three cornered gold lace hat! Any woman would go down before such splendor.

Imagine, if you can, the street car conductor skipping around after fares in abbreviated trousers and ribbon cockades! Wouldn't his lordly ways be harder to put up with than they now are? Or if the fat hotel clerk who already crushes what little spirit the wayfaring guest may have twinkled down the long corridor in azure kilts and knee pants! Would we have even the spirit we now possess to resent his airs and graces? Or if the policeman tripped lightly to and fro over the thronged crossways in buff breeches ending in silken ruffles at his knee.

I tell you, my dear, we don't begin to know what we have to be thankful for, that man's egregious vanity is somewhat held in check by long continued and ugly fashions. It is hard enough, goodness knows, to submit to his tricks of superiority and his masterful ways now, but what would become of us timid, weak and defenseless women that we are if these vain and haughty lords were permitted to carry out their predilection for dress and blaze forth like planets in an evening sky, with the full splendor of doublets, silken hose, jeweled garters and satin breeches slashed at the knee!—Chicago Herald.

Household Pests.

For certain of the commoner pests, such as the bedbug, the carpet beetle, the clothes moths, benzine applied in a fine spray by means of a hand atomizer, is recommended by Professor Riley to be the best remedy, as in most cases it destroys the insect in all stages, including the egg. In using benzine, however, care must be taken that no fire or artificial light is in the room at the same time, the vapor of benzine being highly explosive.

For cockroaches, bristle tails or fish moths and fleas the professor recommends a liberal use of pyrethrum powder, in the form of either Persian or Dalmatian powder, or buhach.

Fleas are generally introduced into houses by dogs or cats, and the presence of bedbugs is not always a sign of uncleanliness, as they have been found under the bark of trees in the woods, and in country houses may sometimes be traced to this source. Keeping premises clean and dry is said to be in general a good preventive of insect pests.—Boston Advertiser.

A pretty idea for covering a pincushion is to make the top of two contrasting shades of ribbon, weaving them as children weave paper for May baskets. The cushion is finished with a frill of lace and a bow.

What are you Going to do about Clothes this Summer?

[But, first, the item about Railroad Fare at the bottom of this advertisement. Be sure to read it.]

You know this famous Old Corner for Good Clothing isn't in the cotton business; nor gushing over job lots of Clothing bought for a song; nor selling Clothing made by miserably paid work-people.

There's only one way to Good Clothing at Low Prices—the manufacturer selling to the wearer. That puts the dealer's profit out of joint. That it saves money to you we needn't tell you. It shows on its face. Besides it lets us make just the Clothing that is popular, the styles you ask for oftenest, the goods you like best.

There's more money for us in selling thousands of suits at a small profit than hundreds at a high one. What prices? Well, for $10, $12, $13.50, $15 and up. That's two or three dollars under usual city prices.

Very nice Dress Suits for $15. This is the greatest store in existence for Dress Suits.

Business increasing every season. Value for your dollars increasing.
