GRANDFATHER AND GRANDSON.

THOMAS COOK, the manager of the noted Cook Excursions over the world died last week.

SENATOR QUAY says Mr. Harrison will carry every State that he did in 1888, besides the new States and West Virginia.

"THE tariff did it!" How about free trade England, where there has been more riots and labor troubles of late years than this country ever heard of.

THE democrats endeavor to make capital against protection out of the Homestead strike. But the facts are that the McKinley bill reduced the protection heretofore maintained on iron and steel.

THE volume of business in the country is greater than it was last year, yet the number of business wrecks is much smaller. This is an argument in favor of the McKinley tariff which will have great influence with the voters.

WATER is a mineral. Who would have thought it! It is a mineral that melts at low temperature. Mercury is a mineral that melts at a still lower temperature. Because a thing is a liquid does not prevent it from being a mineral.

THE President nominated George Shiras, Jr., of Pittsburg, to be a Justice of the Supreme Court. Mr. Shiras stands high as a lawyer and has sterling qualities. The President had only a casual acquaintance with him and gave him the high position solely on account of his great legal attainments and personal integrity.

IT is no wonder the democrats hate the McKinley law. It has proved that every prediction they made was false. It has increased our export trade instead of decreasing it; increasing our free imports instead of "shutting out trade," and finally, it has cheapened prices and raised wages. The law is its own vindication.

CHARLES REILLY, who was convicted of murder in the second degree in New York last week for clubbing a non-union man to death, labored under that delusion, which dies so hard, that it is wrong for an outsider to apply for work while a strike is in progress. It is for this that Reilly killed the man. The right to pursue one's occupation must be maintained as fearlessly as the rights of liberty and property.

THE Charleston (S. C.) News last week advised the Homestead strikers to "vote as straight as they shot."—Since these rioters committed murder and shot straight against law and order, the advice to vote in the same way from a representative democratic journal of the South, would imply that that party is in sympathy with the law defying element of Homestead, and by voting the democratic ticket this fall this un-American mob would only be acting consistently with its present lawless course.

Such advice is largely in accord with the faith and teachings of the Democratic party, and the above appeal should not be in the least surprising. The republican party yet has a mighty work before it; and it will not have concluded its mission until all such editors are made to firmly understand that this is America, and citizenship under its flag means that private rights and private property will not only be protected, but the laws of the land be respected and obeyed.

President Harrison neither seeks nor desires to secure his re-election by appealing to the sympathies of a lawless, howling mob.

THOS. H. CARTER, ex-Congressman from Montana, who was unanimously chosen chairman of the National Republican Committee last Saturday week, has named Hon. Louis E. McComas, of Maryland, as Secretary.—This will require of Mr. McComas much work and responsibility, but he will be equal to the occasion—and his selection is a good one. Mr. Carter is one of the five men originally suggested by President Harrison for the position of chairman.

THE cigarette (or "coffin nail," more properly,) must be fully as bad as described. The Senate Committee on Epidemic Diseases pronounces it "decidedly injurious to youth," laments that Congress has not the constitutional power to stop the manufacture and sale of the deadly thing in the States; but does hope that importation of cigarettes may be prohibited. The moral effect of this broadside of expert testimony will be considerable. The cigarette must go. —N. Y. Mail and Express.

IT will hardly be safe for the public to rely implicitly on the Star for information concerning republican politics. In the last issue in one column it announces—

"It has been determined by the leading Republicans of West Virginia to run Secretary of War Stephen B. Elkins for Governor this fall."

In the same issue in another column in speaking of an "important conference of West Virginia Republican leaders," says:

"Secty. Elkins and Chairman Dawson, of the Republican State Committee, were among those present. It was decided that John W. Mason should receive the nomination for Governor."

WE hear a great deal about the rights of capital. Capital has no rights save the rights which every form of property has under the law. The dollar in the laborer's pocket is equally under the protection of law with the millions in a safe deposit company's vaults. The right in the one dollar is exactly the same as the right in the millions. An employer has no rights as an employer distinct from his rights as a citizen, and the same is true of the employe.

But there are moral obligations and moral claims which neither employer nor employe can afford to ignore.—These obligations and claims go back to the golden rule, to the Sermon on the Mount; they go back to the origin of humanity itself. The man or set of men that ignores those obligations may not incur any legal penalty or violate any law. But he does violate that sense of justice and of fairness implanted in the human heart which should guide and temper the administration of the law.

THE Evening News of Baltimore publishes some of the prominent names mentioned for Congressional honors in this district, and yet there are others that paper does not mention whose names have been used.—Surely out of them all, the Republican party has abundance of good congressional timber. The News says:

"Among the candidates mentioned in the first district are Hon. M. M. Higgins and Col. J. C. Mullikin, of Talbot county; Col. Thos. S. Hodson, of Somerset county; Col. W. J. Vannort, of Kent; Mr. A. P. Barnes, of Worcester and Hon. Geo. M. Russum, of Caroline, who was the nominee two years ago and eight years ago."

To this last might be added, for they have been freely mentioned, Parlett, Barber and Dodson of Talbot, Smith and Goldsborough of Dorchester, Melvin of Worcester, Shotwell of Queen Anne, Wescott of Kent, and Graham of Salisbury.

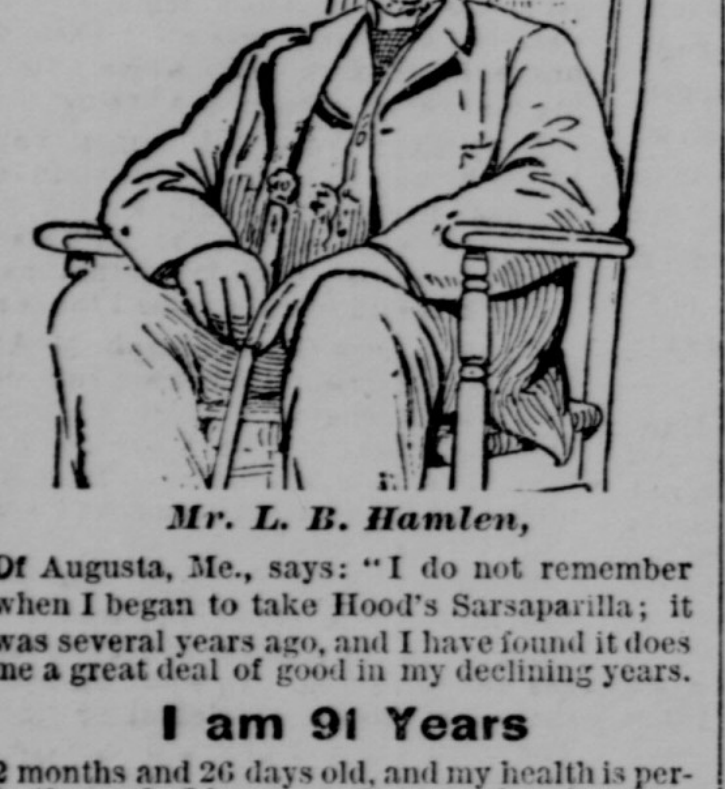
Any of these are worthy and would make a strong fight, if unity of action should prevail, and it undoubtedly would. The News adds:

Mr. Russum's friends claim that he is entitled to the nomination, and will make a vigorous fight in his behalf in the convention. It is the policy of both parties in the district to nominate the same men for two successive terms. Col. Hodson was the candidate twice against Mr. Gibson, and consequently, was referee for the district. Mr. Russum, they say, is entitled to the same consideration which Col. Hodson received. He is a man of ability, will poll the full party vote and some of his more enthusiastic friends claim that he will give Mr. Page a close call on election day.—However that may be, the Caroline county statesman and his friends are doing all in their power to secure his nomination, and as the State organization will back them, they will probably succeed.

THE Prohibition party in its National platform arraigns the Republican party for various imaginary wrongs, and says it no longer embodies the aspirations of the American people or invites "the confidence of enlightened progressive patriotism."

Since it "no longer" does this, we are pleased that the fanatic who penned that platform was sufficiently just to admit that it once did.

But the Republican party of the present day is represented by the present National administration, and we are surprised that the Prohibition platform—or its author, above referred to, in the light of reason and truth should assail the patriotism of President Harrison.



Mr. L. B. Hamlen,

Of Augusta, Me., says: "I do not remember when I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla; it was several years ago, and I have found it does me a great deal of good in my declining years.

I am 91 Years

2 months and 26 days old, and my health is perfectly good. I have no aches or pains about me.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

regulates my bowels, stimulates my appetite, and helps me to sleep well. I doubt if a preparation ever was made so well suited to the wants of old people." L. B. HAMLEN, Elm Street, Augusta, Me., Sept. 26, 1891.

HOOD'S PILLS are a mild, gentle, painless, safe and efficient cathartic. Always reliable.

We were under the impression the record of the present Republican administration, like its predecessors, is the embodiment of patriotism. And while it is too decidedly progressive for our foreign-idead Democratic friends, the free traders, yet notwithstanding the idle vituperations of editors and speakers, this party has not dared assail the lack of patriotism of the Harrison administration, but upon the contrary have been compelled to admit that it is sound and safe.

A safe Government is not only a patriotic government but it invites "confidence" from the American standpoint if not from that of the Prohibitionist. And if our many good friends of that party will truly assist in the cause of patriotism this fall, they will not throw their votes on a hopeless idol and thus help indirectly to elect Mr. Cleveland, the most modern American champion of an un-American policy, but will vote straight and sure for Benjamin Harrison for the next President of this great country.

UNDER the caption "O'Donnell's Grievances," the Philadelphia Press thus forcibly states one of the fundamentals of the Homestead trouble:

"Mr. Hugh O'Donnell is the recognized leader of the Homestead strikers. It was he who was Chairman of their Advisory Committee. It was he who visited the Governor on their behalf. It was he who undertook to gag the press and muzzle the law.—There was no act of the strikers, from the rejection of the scale to the bloody riot, in which he was not at their head. What is Mr. O'Donnell's grievance? He himself told the Congressional Committee on Wednesday. He testified that his wages averaged $144 per month, eight hours work a day, under the old scale, and that the proposed new scale would not affect them! That is, O'Donnell as a worker in the Homestead mill earned about $1,800 a year—more than nine-tenths of all the clergymen in the State earn. More than nine-tenths of all the teachers. More than half of all the lawyers. Twice as much as most of the farmers. Six times as much as most of the ordinary farm laborers. Yet even O'Donnell was not one of the best paid at Homestead. The testimony showed that some of the workmen received $250 to $280 a month; that is, $3,060 to $3,360 a year! But O'Donnell was not starved. He was paid $1,800 a year, and the scale he refused didn't cut him down! And that is the grievance which brought strike, riot and murder!"

This compact and unanswerable statement goes to the very root of the matter. Where in the world are workingmen treated and rewarded as in the United States? The English, German, French, Russian, or Sweedish iron worker, knowing of the facts which the Press crushingly advances, would regard their contemporaries of Homestead as capitalists rather than laborers. Capitalists, indeed! What else is any man who lays money by, either in great or small amount, from his sufficient earnings? It is simply a matter of proportion. Many of these well paid Homesteaders are far better off than struggling employers who, while presumably "their own men" as the phrase goes, pay over their whole income in wages. There are thousands and thousands of such cases; every business man knows it. The men who as the Press shows are better paid than the average of professional people have all the comforts and a reasonable share of the luxuries of life, have many of them established as comfortable homes as are to be found anywhere, being materially helped therein by the company which they are now attempting to ruin, and have the whole field as open to them as it was to Mr. Carnegie or Mr. Frick, who were once poorer than the poorest of the strikers. Such ingratitude is hateful; it makes one despair of the race.—Phila. Evening Telegram.

Uncle George Interviewed.

We publish below an interview with "Uncle George Colton," which appeared in Sunday's Baltimore News of July 10th. It is full of spice.

"Where have you been for the past few weeks," asked a News reporter of the venerable politician, Mr. Colton, whom he met at the Carrollton Hotel on Tuesday last; "I did not see you at the convention, although I knew you felt a deep interest in its proceedings."

"I might answer your question by quoting a portion of an old song," said the veteran, "and say, 'I've been roaming, I've been roaming.' I did not go to Chicago for several reasons. I have traveled extensively, West and North, and ascertained fully that Cleveland's friends had a large majority of the convention, and were led by men of character and brains, who determined that he should not be cheated; and further that Maryland, from the false position of her delegates, would not be a fraction in the nomination of candidates."

"What do you think of the course of Senator Gorman and the result of the convention's actions?" asked the reporter.

"Well," said Uncle George, with that peculiar twinkle in his eye, "with your permission I will take the humorous part of this subject first and discuss the matter seriously afterward."

"The first mistake that Gorman made was his interview with 'Gath,' which, no doubt, he believed would assist his presidential aspiration; but really, although he could not see it, it was a severe set back to them.—You see, when his next friend, Senator Gibson, wrote the A. B. C. edition of Gorman's life, he facetiously dwelt upon his superstitions, told of his carrying a nutmeg around his neck to keep off neuralgia, and how he wore a horse chestnut in his pocket to guard against rheumatism, but neglected the most important thing, which was the nailing of a horse shoe over his library door. I blame Gibson very much for that, because he knew the importance of enchantments and charms, had been told in folklore how the English would throw an old shoe after and sprinkle rice for a newly married couple to insure good luck, and how the Swiss peasants would pull their male children through the split of a hickory sapling to make them strong, and carry them up the garret to make them high-minded, and many other specimens of incantations, in which of course I fully believe, and he ought to have insisted on Gorman placing the safeguard over his library entrance. It was truly unfortunate. The cackling of a goose saved Rome, and the placing of a horseshoe over Gorman's library door would have saved him from becoming victim to 'Gath's' intrusion, and perhaps made him president. What momentous consequenses hang on little things!"

"But now to be serious. There can be no doubt that Gorman's head was completely turned. Always a small man he could not realize the real position he occupied. We had gotten up a gift enterprise for him in the shape of a silver service, although it taxed some of us very heavily—we had given him credit for the part he took in the force bill matter, which really would not have passed if Gorman had never lived; these demonstrations to his weak mind were more than he could stand. All these shortcomings and weaknesses, however, the people could look over, but the dastardly course he pursued at the head of the Maryland delegation in betraying his trust and placing his state in a false position before the country is something the people cannot and ought not ever to forget.

"But I am not at all disappointed in him. I have known him for more than twenty years and a portion of that time intimately, and what I say is not to injure him. Indeed I care nothing about him, but I do so that the people of the State may see him in his true color. His whole history from the time he entered politics with men who extended the warm hand of friendship to him to the present time, has been one continued course of falsehood, deceit and treachery to friends. But as all these matters are succinctly described in my book, 'Thirty Years in Maryland Politics,' which will shortly appear, I shall only touch upon a few of them now.

"His first act of treachery to friends was to Robert Fowler, who was Treasurer of Maryland when Gorman first entered politics, and who befriended him financially and otherwise and who was repaid for his kindness with base ingratitude. Next comes his conduct to Gov. Whyte, who appointed him president of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and upon whom he turned his back after the most solemn protestations of friendship,—Then came his break with me, who, for nearly three years, had gone around the State quietly working up his boom for United States Senator, and I give the following little incident which may amuse the readers of the News, if nothing more:

"The night he was elected Senator for the first term he was stopping at the Maryland Hotel, Annapolis, and I at the City hotel. When the ballot was announced and he elected, he hurried to my room where I was talking with our mutual friend, Jesse K. Hines, to whom he was also greatly indebted. He got on his knees before me and vowed that he would never rest until he had made Hines and myself rich. The sequel has shown, however, that while Gorman has become rich Hines died in poverty, and as for myself I am glad to say that he has'nt made me rich yet, for which I ought to and do feel truly thankful. I have trouble enough in being poor, and if I were rich I don't know what would become of me.

"The next link in this treacherous chain was his course towards the party in what is known as the old judge fight. We had nominated the regular ticket with Gov. Whyte's brother as one of the candidates, and while all true democrats were working for its success, I have it from one of the most truthful men in Baltimore that Gorman secretly was doing all he could to defeat it. But, as my book of chronicles contains these matters with days and dates, I shall only say further, that with the exception of his perfidity at Chicago where he tried to practice his double dealing, perhaps his treatment of Governor Jackson was the basest of all. He promised him, when he appointed Gibson Senator, that he would take off his coat and work for Jackson when the legislature met. What he did is too well known to the governor and his friends.

"Yes, I know that it was Gorman's right to aspire to the presidency—of course it was. 'It's the right of a frog to aspire to the dimensions of an ox, but he always bursts in the attempt.

"His treachery at Chicago was only exceeded by his cowardice. He reminds me very much of one of my chickens, who is of a game breed and ought to have pluck, but whenever I enter him in a main he is sure to be sick. Just so with Gorman. Whenever there is a fight on hand he always has the political roup. The truth is he is a dunghill politician—nothing more.

"You have been around the country a good deal," said the reporter, "what ni your judgment, are the chances for Cleveland's election?"

"I am satisfied," said the veteran, "he will go through the country like a streak of lightning through a hay stack. Its in the air I believe, besides New York which he is certain to have, he will carry Illinois and Indiana, with a good prospect for Iowa and Kansas."

"I suppose if Cleveland is elected," said the reporter, "you'll be an applicant for some good position?"

"Yes," said Uncle George, "I certainly will, but I don't know what the result will be. I thought when Baby Brown was made governor, I would have nothing to do but name the position I wanted; but as soon as elected he fell into the hands of the enemy, who have been wet-nursing him ever since, and will do so until the Board of Public Works make all their appointments."

"Did you hear that the anti-Cleveland men met in Gov. Brown's room in Chicago, and that he believed that Gorman would be made President and he take Gorman's place in the Senate?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Colton, "but I know nothing of its truthfulness, but if they did put any such notions in his head, I'm satisfied he would be silly enough to believe them."

"Isn't this a bad year for machine politics?" querried the reporter.

"Indeed it is," said the veteran, "neither Hill with his threshing machine from New York, with Tammany to back him, nor Gorman with his little automatic sewing machine from Maryland, had the slightest show, they were confronted with gentlemen, statesmen and men of brains.

When the original Maryland ring worked together," said the reporter, "did they make any such blunders as those at Chicago?"

"Not a bit of it," quickly replied Uncle George, "there were seven of us originally, and I used to term them the 'Secret Order of the Seven,' and when we matured a plan, there were no mistakes. But now there are but three of us left, Rasin, Gorman and myself, and I am so ashamed of our failure that I shall ask to have a receiver appointed, and as Gorman is practically demented, he would not do, and as I have no aspirations to special leadership it won't suit me, but as Rasin is best fitted for it I shall name him for the position. I think this will do until I send you a few chapters from my forthcoming book."

The 'Force Bill"

What is the particular infamy of the "Force Bill" which the democrats are howling about? It simply provides that each party should be represented at the registration offices and at the polling places by one national supervisor, who should witness the proceedings, and, in case of subsequent dispute, be able to report or testify for his side of the case. This and a few clauses against bribery and fraudulent returns were all that the "Force Bill" contained. It absolutely made no provision whatever for the use of force. It did, undoubtedly, aim to give a Republican in Mississippi something like the same chance to vote and have his vote counted, as a Democrat has in New York. It was probably not adequate for the purpose, but that was its purpose.—State Sentinel.

Important Typewriter Decision.

Judge Lacombe, sitting in the U. S. Circuit Court, has, on the motion of the Remington Typewriter Company, granted an injunction against the agents of the Franklin, restraining the sale of that machine on account of infringement of Remington patents. The decision is an important one, as it proves the control of the fundamental patents, and may affect other makers of typewriters. The Remington people have heretofore been quite passive, but it is stated on good authority that they are now likely to proceed against all other typewriter manufacturing companies. In some cases purchasers of machines which infringe Remington patents may also be proceeded against for infringement.—N. Y. Tribune. tf

They are made by the most reliable manufacturers in this country and are offered on their merit. They are full Leather, and when you examine them,—you will find the price both captivating and catching. We have also just received the largest stock of

FINE CARRIAGE HARNESS, LEATHER FLY NETS, AND LAP DUSTERS,

On the market. You can be the judge, after examining all the points. Don't buy a

FARM WAGON,

Because of its cheapness. It will finally make wrinkles on your face, spoil your disposition, and make you a kicker. Buy the other kind. We have them, and they satisfy. More of them on the road than all others combined. Why? We still sell

What are you
Going to do about
Clothes this Summer?

[But, first, the item about Railroad Fare at the bottom of this advertisement. Be sure to read it.]

You know this famous Old Corner for Good Clothing isn't in the cotton business; nor gushing over job lots of Clothing bought for a song; nor selling Clothing made by miserably paid work-people.

There's only one way to Good Clothing at Low Prices—the manufacturer selling to the wearer. That puts the dealer's profit out of joint. That it saves money to you we needn't tell you. It shows on its face. Besides it lets us make just the Clothing that is popular, the styles you ask for oftenest, the goods you like best.

There's more money for us in selling thousands of suits at a small profit than hundreds at a high one. What prices? Well, for $10, $12, $13.50, $15 and up. That's two or three dollars under usual city prices.

Very nice Dress Suits for $15. This is the greatest store in existence for Dress Suits.

Business increasing every season. Value for your dollars increasing.

For example, we pay Railroad Excursion Fare from Easton if you purchase $40 worth.
