THIS time it is from Gallipolis, O., that the news comes. The furniture company there, which was about to build a new factory, has altered its plans since the election, and will make no addition to its present plant.

THE grandson of Dom Pedro has brooded over an ambition to secure the Brazilian throne until he has become a howling lunatic strait-jacketed in a padded cell. Meanwhile the throne is in the garret, and the dust of passing seasons settles upon it fearless of being disturbed.

AT Ashland, Or., a thirteen-year-old boy who had not been permitted to go to the county fair looked calmly into the muzzle of an ancient musket while he pressed the trigger with his foot. It seems possible that the deceased had placed almost too high an estimate on the county fair.

OHIO goes Republican by almost exactly the same plurality that carried New York for Cleveland and elected him President in 1884. Harrison carries Ohio by 1,074; Cleveland carried New York by 1,047. One Harrison elector fell short in Ohio, however, and so Cleveland will get one vote from that State in the electoral college.

NO one seems to know just what the comet now sweeping through the skies means to do, whither its course tends, or whence its origin and destiny. Like the democrat party, it's a puzzler. We only know it's here.—What its purpose is, what the result of its purpose will be, Heaven only knows.

IN England farming is considered a business that must be learned as well as anything else. A man without experience would have difficulty in renting or leasing a good farm there, no matter how much capital be might have, and again, no matter what his experience, he could not lease unless he could show capital enough to stock and operate it properly. Here it is sometimes different.

THE proprietors of a new town site at the mouth of the Columbia, Oregon offered $100 for the best name for the future great city that is to eclipse Portland and all other cities on the coast. Two or three hundred names were suggested, out of which the owners finally adopted that of "Termania." If the word has any meaning at all it is that of "Thrice-madness," or "Three-times-mad."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, Nov. 21, 1892.

A great change has come over the spirit of the democrats. One hears no more about the immediate repeal of the McKinley Tariff and the beginning of an almost free trade era, which every democrat was advocating a few days ago. The same fellows are now talking about "moderation." "a gradual change" and the preservation of our "business interests." Protection is no longer unconstitutional in the eyes of the democrats, who are promising that instead of the repeal of the McKinley law, at the extra session, which it seems generally to be agreed among them is to be held in the fall of next year, if not before, they will merely lower some of the duties that are considered by conservative people, even in the republican party, entirely too high, and extend the free list a little in the line of raw material used by American manufacturers. In short, if the democrats who are doing the talking really represent those who are going to do the bossing when the newly elected Congress gets into power, the democratic party through its newly elected Congress and President will endorse the principle of protection to American industries, which is so vigorously abused and protested against in its National platform and through its newspapers and stump speakers, by enacting a protective tariff law, differing no whit nor tittle from the McKinley law in principle, but merely as to the extent to which the protective feature of our tariff shall be carried. Of course there may be no sincerity in this talk—there never was much in anything that eminated from the democratic party—which may be indulged in now by order of the bosses for the purpose of allaying the panicky feeling which so closely followed the democratic victory. It exists, and that is why it is chronicled: time will show whether the democrats were really fighting for the power to make radical changes in our tariff and financial policy, or merely for the offices.

If the democratic administration is to be as unfortunate as the Cleveland and Stevenson banner which hangs, when it is down, over Pennsylvania Avenue, it is indeed to be pitied.—This banner has been cut down once, supposed to have been done by a democrat who did not love the ticket—none such can be found now, but they will again be plentiful as soon as the distribution of pap gets under way—and has been blown down so often that its disappearance hardly excites any comment; and one man threatens to bring a suit for damage done to his vehicle by reason of his horse having become frightened and running away because he got tangled up in the ropes of the flag one dark night when it was down, lying in the middle of the street.

Secretary Charles Foster wishes it distinctly understood that all interviews purporting to have been held with him making him predict a deficit in the Treasury during the next fiscal year are out and out fakes. He has made no prediction concerning government finances beyond his own term of office and will make none, believing that it is not proper for him to do so. He says there will be no deficit during the current fiscal year and that is as much as he will say, for publication. His annual report will be made public at the same time as the President's annual message, and will give a detail resume of the finances of the nation, but will contain no recommendation for the future. If it were considered proper for a retiring Secretary to make suggestions to the new democratic administration Mr. Foster is not the sort of man who would furnish his political enemies with ideas to help them out of their trouble. The people have voted for the democrats to run the machine; let the democrats furnish the ideas too.

Local democrats are now having a regular cat and dog fight, ostensibly over the management of the citizens committee that will make the arrangements for Mr. Cleveland's inauguration, but in reality over the snug District offices that will be at the disposal of the new President, as to be prominently connected with the inaugural committee has long been regarded in Washington as the best way to care for one's self under a new administration. The democratic National committee will have to arbitrate between the warring factions, and it is not certain that even that authority can make peace; it can only put one or the other faction on top.

No further proof was needed of the President's good will towards the republican National committee than his appointment of its secretary, ex-Congressman McComas, of Maryland, to a vacancy on the bench of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and his offering Chairman Carter his old place. Mr. McComas accepted, but Mr. Carter preferred to return to his law practice in Montana.

Senator Ingals Upon Mr. Harrison.

At Topeka Mr. Ingalls thus expressed his opinion of Mr. Harrison's character, ability and rank as President:

"I have never been an idolater of President Harrison. I am under no personal obligations or official obligations to him. In that great struggle I waged against the combined hosts of iniquity and disloyalty in this State, in which I went down, I had never even the assurance of personal sympathy from the Administration. Therefore, I have no occasion for idolatry. But I affirm that the administration of President Harrison, for the wisdom of his administration of the affairs of the nation at home and abroad, is without parallel or peer in the whole history of American citizenship. (Applause.) He is the only man who has sat in the Presidential chair for the last half century that could take every department himself and run it without assistance. (Applause.) He is an eminent lawyer and he was a gallant and heroic soldier. He has been an efficient and trained legislator. It is not often that a man grows after he is 50 years old. Ordinarily by that time a man is guaged and scrutinized and weighed, so that his specific gravity and cubic contents are known as they will continue to be to the end of time. President Harrison is distinctly greater in intellectual stature and in mental vigor since he has passed from the Senate than he was before, and he stands to-day immeasurably higher in the estimation of the American people than he did when he was first sworn into office nearly four years ago. (Applause.) The series of speeches that President Harrison made in the campaign preceding his election and the series of speeches that he has since made in his tours across the continent in response to the invitation of the people, and that he has made at various gatherings to his comrades upon various occasions, have never been surpassed at any time in political literature. I affirm that for versatility, for lofty patriotism, for beauty and grace of diction, force and vigor, they have never been excelled, and I believe he has no superior in the compass of political oratory, either ancient or modern. He is a courageous man, he is not afraid to do right; he is a patriotic man; he believes in the American people; and he spells the word 'nation' with the biggest letter N there is in the alphabet.

"The State paper that he wrote in reply to the objections of Lord Salisbury to the continuation of the modus vivendi, in the sealing difficulty with Great Britain, is, in my judgment, one of the finest and one of the ablest and one of the strongest State papers of this century. He wrote it himself. He had no Secretary of State, and he is just exactly as competent to conduct a negotiation with one of the foreign powers of Europe as he is competent and willing to look over the private papers in the case of a pensioner applying for a pension. (Applause.) And I hope I do not trench upon the proprieties of this time and this place and this occasion when I say I believe there is no American citizen, whatever may be his political affiliations, that does not feel, as he sits in the shadow of that most direful calamity that can darken the energies of a man's soul, that it is something to have in this day of tribulation and danger a Chief Magistrate who is neither afraid nor ashamed in this age of anarchy and communism, of materialism and agnosticism, who has faith and belief in that Supreme Being who is the arbiter alike of the destinies of nations and of the faith and fortunes of men. I know that in this presence his name can be relied upon with [illegible] ness and fidelity."

What Will Niagara Do.

They propose to furnish "by telegraph," as it were, all the power necessary to operate the machinery at the Chicago Exposition, 600 miles away; and if their experiment proves the complete success they think they will be prepared to furnish as much horse-power as may be needed by any factory in the United States. In other words, if the Niagara tunnel fulfills the expectation of the engineers who designed and have built it, it will revolutionize manufactures, do away with steam, render coal no longer an industrial necessity and greatly simplify and cheapen manufacturing.

Industrial Depression.

"Hard times," as we Americans call it—is getting England in a bad way. Poverty and idleness there point directly to socialism of the abhorrent type; and the movement on the part of the London unemployed to pay no rent is a very serious matter. One speaker at a demonstration in London Sunday boasted that he had paid no rent for seven years, most of which time he had lived on the same street. —N. Y. Mail.

Reciprocity.

(By Rev. J. Harriss of Lincoln Lodge, No. 7, Knights of Reciprocity.)

That's so, mankind is selfish, it's human nature's way
When e'er a job of work is done to look out for the pay.
To keep on giving all the time and getting nothing back
Will make a willing horse grow tired, and drop the traces slack.
So if you'll give attention it's only fair for me
To tell you, in a few plain words, why reciprocity
Is just the thing this country needs to keep it on the move
And hold the nation's wheels right in progression's upward groove.
Our family is spreading out—East, West, and North and South—
And every unit that's brought in just means another mouth;
And so to meet increased demand it's well for us to try
Our level best to bring about a more increased supply.
A man who's worth the name of man; and does not duty shirk
Is happiest when he's busy with remunerative work.
Now if our work is sent abroad our money goes there too,
And as a natural result we'll have no work to do.
Then we shall find out to our cost, in this as other lands,
That Satan waits, with his old jobs, to take on extra hands.
Prevention better is than cure and so we knights agree
To stand by the broad principles of Reciprocity.
'Tis no new thing, as may be found if you will only trace
The hidden springs that surely move our common human race.
Just take the babe that's come to fill the parents' heart with bliss,
You pet her she reciprocates with such a loving kiss.
You strive to fill your children's minds with knowledge good and true
And their reciprocation comes, in honor, back to you.
How rough would be our daily life without love's hallowing leaven!
Reciprocation makes the home just like a little heaven.
And so in jostling through life's crowds, we've got this much to learn,
The man who sticks his elbows out gets elbowed in his turn.
There's Julius Cæsar Johnson Jones gets hammered till he's sick;
And he, in turn reciprocates, although 'tis with a brick.
You spend your evenings at the bar by the old temper led
And he'll reciprocate next day, with aching heart and head.
Mark well my words, you'll find it so, while on this earth you live,
Reciprocation is the rule, you get just what you give
The nation gives protective care to home and church and state;
And so with loyal service we, in turn, reciprocate.
The older nations grind the poor, 'neath fierce oppression's heel,
And capital, with grasping claw, the workman's wage doth steal.
Democracy may want the goods by pauper labor made;
We want Protection's ample shield thrown o'er each honest trade.
What matter if the solid South for 'Free-Trade' wildly cry,
Calm reason will regain her throne in the wiser by and by.
We are open for a level deal with Canadian, Turk or Russ.
We'll buy with them and call it square, if they will buy of us.
And banded thus together we join in willing heart and heand
To hail the gladsome day that now is breaking o'er the land
When our fair flag on distant seas to every wind's unfurled
And freedom's home becomes likewise the workshop of the world.

Always Equal to Its Task.

From N. Y. Press.

The history of the United States for the past thirty-two years is the history of the Republican party. When the Republicans took charge of the national government a third of a century ago the country was on the verge of ruin by the practical application of the Democratic dogmas of free trade, cheap money and cheap labor. The Federal government had no credit abroad and no strength at home. The treasury was bankrupt, the finances disorganized, the flag dishonored by slavery and menaced by treason. The country abounding in all the resources of wealth, was impoverished and dependent upon European capitalists for its manufactured products.

Besides the tremendous task of suppressing the mightiest rebellion of history, the Republican party found itself confronted with the necessity of reconstructing the financial interests of the nation. All the world knows how successfully the work was accomplished. A material advancement that is without precedent in human annals, a nationality so compact that nothing can shatter it, financial credit that the proudest monarchy of the Old World cannot surpass, a prestige abroad that commands the profound respect of foreign governments, industrial independence, a superb navy, a sound currency, a new system of commercial alliance with the richest nations of Latin America—these are some of the results of Republican rule. Never before have the masses of the people been so prosperous, never have wages been so high or the necessities of life so low in price as they are to-day.

Cleveland's administration, be it remembered, was powerless to reverse Republican legislation or to check the tide of national progress and prosperity. Republicanism, firmly intrenched in the Senate, was able to bid defiance to Democratic schemes and to protect American industries from the assaults of Southern Bourbons and Northern free traders.

The Republican party will not change its beliefs. It will not retreat from its advocacy of high wages for labor, honest currency, liberal pensions to veterans and fair elections in every State in the Union. It will continue to demand the maintnance of American honor and the protection of American rights in every part of the world. And it will take charge of the government of the country and proceed once more to carry forward the work of developing its resources and increasing the welfare of its people when the unpatriotic and incapable Democracy is hurled in disgrace from power in 1896.

A Doctrine of the States in Rebellion

United States Senator Wm. B. Allison of Iowa, writes to the New York Press: "Listening to the arguments of our opponents, one not familiar with our history would suppose that such a revision of the tariff, discriminating in favor of our own producers, was a new departure. The truth is that, with the exception of the laws of 1846 and 1857, such discrimination has been the uniform rule from the foundation of our government, and has had the sanction of all the great men who, since the foundation of our government, have added to its greatness and glory. Every statesman from George Washington to Andrew Jackson, including the patron saint of the Democrat party, favored this policy.

"The Democrat party this year makes a radical departure from this policy of its successful founders.—There is no evasion or double dealing in its platform. It not only promises the repeal of the McKinley law, but it declares that every shred and remnant of Protection, incidental or otherwise, shall be torn up root and branch. Nothing is to remain, no matter what the effect upon labor, or property, or upon industry. The Democratic party calls for Free-Trade pure and simple, not on economic grounds only, but on constitutional grounds.

"When did this become a fundamental principle of the Democratic party? I have made careful examinations of their platforms, and I affirm that no such utterance was ever made before in any national platform of the party. The only political party that ever enunciated such a doctrine before was the convention of the Confederate States when in rebellion.—The men who framed the Confederate Constitution in 1861, and the men who adopted its tariff plank for the Democratic national platform of 1892 were of the same mind."

A Shocking Disclosure.

A German woman has created a sensation in Berlin by publishing a book giving the result of her fourteen weeks' experience among the poorest classes of female factory hands in Germany. She shows a shocking state of misery and immorality, and has stirred up the government into the appointment of a commission to inquire into the abuses.

Cheap wages and cheap goods have done this for the workingwomen of Germany. And the democratic party proposes to try this experiment of cheapness and nastiness in the United States.—Express.

To the Prohibition Voters of Talbot County.—It is with a grateful heart that I, in behalf of the county central committee and the great cause we represent, tende to you our heartfelt thanks for the courage and manliness you exhibited at the ballot box on the 8th of this month, in protesting against the great political evils of the day. The greatest of them all is the saloon—the cesspool of all evil, the place where all political corruption is conceived, where drunkards are made of our boys and then ends a life of shame in drunkard's grave. And still they are craving for more to take their place to fill its filthy maw. But these evils are being weighed by the ballots of the Christians and good people at the polls, as is seen by the increase in our vote, both State and National.—The loud demonstrations which one of the corrupt old parties is making over the defeat of the other is, in the language of the wise man, like "a sweeping rain which leaves no food;" but we have cause to rejoice in that the cause of right—our cause, the cause of God—our cause, the cause of home—our cause is surely and steadily on the increase. The liquor saloons, under Mr. Cleveland's previous administration, increased 20,000. We do not know what will be the result of the coming one, but trust and pray that the enemy to the saloon will increase a thousand fold. We exhort you, therefore, to stand firm in the cause of right and in due season we shall reap our reward if we faint not. Yours in the fight,

R. H. T. COUNCELL,
Talbot Co. Chairman Prohibition Party.

J. H. Gossage, of Trappe, was given permit to occupy Talbot County's bed in the Maryland General Hospital.

He Drinks Coal Oil.—When Billie Smith crawled out of his bunk one morning lately he was consumed with a raging thirst for liquor, but like the majority of his species he was minus the price. After carefully overhauling his wardrobe in the hope of finding a stray coin, but without success, he set out in search of a friend. He made the rounds of the Clay, Montgomery and Leidesnorff streets resorts without discovering a good samaritan or anything to drink more tempting than water. At last, made desperate by the fire raging within him, Smith went into a Clay street printing office, removed the top from a coal oil can, poured out nearly half a pint and gulped the liquid at a draught.

"There," he remarked, smacking his lips, "that's better than nothing." Smith says that coal oil isn't a bad drink when you get used to it. The worst trouble is in getting over it, and the next morning after a coal-oil debauch his mouth tastes like a hot box. On more than one occasion Smith declares that he has screwed off the top of the lamp for an eye-opener before getting out of bed. But there is more twang to the oil taken direct from the can, which seems to strike the right spot several minutes in advance of the other. If Smith persists in drinking this peculiar tipple, he might turn the taste to advantage by swallowing a yard of wicking with each drink and hiring himself out as an incandescent light, or pose as a horrible example enlightening the world.—San Francisco Call.

FOR SALE.

One of the Best Estates on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

'CHESTNUT RIDGE.'

located on Skipton Creek, will be sold at Public Auction on

The 26th day of November, '92.
AT EASTON, MD.

BETWEEN THE HOURS OF 2 AND 4 O'CLOCK P. M. THIS ESTATE CONTAINS

407 1-2 ACRES,

about 275 of which are in cultivation. The character of the land is gently rolling finely watered, alluvial soil with red clay sub soil, and well adapted to the growth of all grains and fruits. It is a fine wheat farm and one of the best for peach culture on the peninsula.—The estate is divided by a public road, making it susceptible of being used as two farms, each portion of which would have orchards and buildings.

THE IMPROVEMENTS
ARE TWO GOOD RESIDENCES,

Barns with storage for 60 tons of hay, and good stabling and granary.

THREE
TENEMENT HOUSES,
AND GOOD CHESTNUT FENCING.

Produce from the farm can be shipped by vessels from the wharf on the premises, and as the farm is less than 60 miles from Baltimore by water, and less than 100 miles to Philadelphia by rail, it is convenient to our best markets. Much of the timber is valuable chestnut. Springs of water abound and a good quality of marl on the premises. The climate is mild, winters comparatively short and the springs and autumns long. Society is good, churches and schools convenient.—Fish, oysters and water-foul abound, and it is seldom a farm is offered for sale possessing so many advantages.

This is located 8 miles from Easton and 2 miles from Longwood, in Talbot county, Md. and will be sold subject to a mortgage incumberance of $11,000, with interest at 6 per cent. since March 1st of this year, and the taxes for 1891 and 1892, amounting to about $270. Woodland station on the D. & C. R. R. is within three miles of the premeses.

TERMS.—$100 to be paid at time of sale, and the balance when the title papers are delivered.

WONDERFUL

The cures which are being effected by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuralgia, Bronchitis, Rheumatism, and all chronic diseases, by their Compound Oxygen Treatment, are indeed marvelous. ⁂

If you are a sufferer from any disease which your physician has failed to cure, write for information about this treatment, and their book of 200 pages, giving a history of Compound Oxygen, its nature and effects, with numerous testimonials from patients, to whom you may refer for still further information, will be promptly sent, without charge.

This book, aside from its great merit as a medical work, giving, as it does, the result of years of study and experience, you will find a very interesting one.

E. T. NICOLS.

A Great Woolen Industry
Started up again for the Winter.

All through Eastern Pennsylvania, South and Middle New Jersey, Delaware and the Maryland Peninsula, the demand for first-class All-Wool Clothing is larger than ever. We feel the pressure of it already. Good crops, the early laying in of winter supplies, the trading going on at local centres in our neighborhood all point in the same direction. There's a general feeling that the winter will be early and hard.

Under our standing compact—it has almost the force of a signed contract with the people—we have provided Clothing by the ton, Overcoats and Suits by the thousand.

There are too many for description. Under the old fashioned name—Beavers—are some of the nicest, dressiest Overcoats of the season. Kerseys and Venetions—their smooth, handsome finish you know. They are fixed in the likings of young men—the colors are so attractive; they line so elegantly. These Overcoats are $10, $15, $18 to $35 and $45.

Ten choices in the pattern of a Suit for one in Overcoats. Black Cheviots and Silk Mixtures, fancy check and plain colors from $10 to $25; in Dress Suits from $15 to $30.

The cloths are scientifically tested, the making is done under our own hands, the selling is direct from our workshops to your backs. The difference that makes to you is about 20 to 25 per cent.—the Clothing is that much better.

Above all—All-Wool. You'll not freeze in our Clothing.
