THE TAX Convention has met, and —hush, don't mention it.

THESE are golden moments in more than one, as Treasury Secretary Foster will tell you.

CHOLERA is dying out in Germany in general, and there are great rejoicings just now over its disappearance in Halle in particular.

GOV. MCKINLEY signed one too many bills. All his property must go to pay the trustees of an insolvent company to which he lent his name as endorser.

RUSSIA herself is giving signs of the approach of the millennium. A special commission has positively prepared a bill for abolishing the corporal punishment of female exiles to Siberia.

MR. CLEVELAND says he would have taken every member of the Cabinet from the Empire State had he thought it necessary to the success of his Administration. Goat while yet young, wees widje every time.

THE completed Cabinet shows once more the remarkable self-confidence of the President elect, and is plain notice to the country that machine politics will have no help or encouragement from the Administration during the next four years.

ON the 22d, President-elect Cleveland completed his cabinet by the appointment of Richard Olney, of Boston, as Attorney General and Congressman Hilary A. Herbert, of Alabama, as Secretary of the Navy. For the full list of officers see first page of this paper.

CONGRATULATIONS to the Transcript at Chestertown which is now for the first time in its history printed by steam, and under conditions so entirely new and satisfactory that its continued success is already assured. The engines and presses have all been placed on solid brick foundations, and the machinery in its every part works with the precision and steadiness of clock-work.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, Feb. 20, 1893.

The President is as proud of the legislation which placed the finest ocean steamships in the world under the American flag as of any single accomplishment of his administration, and it is his intention, unless something occurs to prevent, to go over to New York on the 22nd in order to raise with his own hands the stars and stripes over the magnificent steamship New York. The President expects to be accompanied from this city by his entire cabinet and a number of prominent Congressmen and other officials. The U. S. cruiser Chicago, now in New York harbor will fire the national salute of twenty-one guns, as "old glory" reaches the mast head of the New York.

The treaty for the annexation of Hawaii, which was sent to the Senate last week, has been favorably reported from the committee on Foreign Relations, and although there is some opposition in both parties it is regarded as a certainty that more than the necessary two-thirds will vote for its ratification.

Both the President and Secretary Foster have become convinced that the recent and continued demand for gold is largely artificial, manufactured for the express purpose of trying to compel an issue of bonds, and for that reason they have both arrived at the conclusion that no bonds shall be issued during this administration.

Senator Sherman's amendment has been adopted by the Senate, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue $50,000,000 in 3 per cent. five year bonds whenever in his discretion it became necessary to keep up the Treasury gold reserve. The bonds could be issued under present laws, but they would have to bear 4 per cent interest and to run for a long period; hence this amendment.

The democrats in the House tried to cripple the federal supervision of Congressional elections by attaching an amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, prohibiting the payment of any expenses incurred by prosecution under the laws relating to the election of members of Congress. The Senate promptly struck out the amendment as soon as the bill was taken up. The gentlemen who are so anxious to put a stop to federal supervision of elections will have to wait until the next Congress gets together; this Senate will not sanction any of their schemes, no matter how cleverly they may be disguised.

The Pension laws will not be turned upside down at this session of Congress, although there was a strong effort towards that end made by the anti-soldier democrats, resulting in a free minute free fight on the floor of the House.

It is significant that Representative Compton, of Maryland, who is probably closer to Senator Gorman politically than any man living, should be the most outspoken man in Congress against the selections already made for the cabinet. A republican friend, joking Compton, said to him: "If you keep up your criticism you will have no place at the patronage trough." "I dont care," said Mr. Compton, "I am too old to change the habit of saying just what I think of public men's acts. I do not approve the appointment of Gresham and Hoke Smith, and I have no hesitation in saying so. While it might disappoint a few of my constituents it would relieve me of a great deal of bother should all Federal patronage be denied to me under the new administration."

Here is one reason for Judge Gresham's having voted the democratic ticket: Just before Justice Brown was appointed to the U. S. Supreme Court a delegation of Chicago lawyers came to Washington to urge the President to nominate Judge Gresham to the vacancy; they told him how magnanimous such a nomination would be and gave him to understand that they were here with Judge Gresham's knowledge and consent. The President heard all they had to say and then told them there were two reasons, either sufficient, why he would not nominate Judge Gresham. First the appointment did not belong to the section in which Judge Gresham lived; second, he would not put himself in the position to give people the right to say that he had used one of the highest appointments in his gift to placate a personal enemy. It was this refusal that determined Judge Gresham to withdraw from the republican party. How he coquetted with the Populist presidential nomination and finally announced his intention to vote the democratic ticket is know to all newspaper readers.

Democrats regard Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, as so far announced as being more personal than political in its make-up, and indicating that it is Mr. Cleveland and not the democratic party who is in control.

A Pathetic Death on Pike's Peak.

Several years ago, when the summit house on Pike's peak was used as a signal station, the occupants of the hut were a telegraph operator and a companion. Winter had set in with more than usual severity. Unexpectedly the telegraph operator was taken sick and failed so rapidly that the first day of his illness plunged him into delirium. The companion of the operator was not familiar with telegraphy. Their provisions were growing short.

The second night brought no relief. The sight of his raving, half starved comrade grew intolerable to the weary nurse, who one night went out on the mountain top. Scarcely had the door closed behind him than reason returned to the dying operator. With the little strength that he had retained he dragged himself to his instrument and flashed over the wire, down the mountain side, that his companion had been lost on the mountain and that he could live but a little while, but that they might yet be rescued if assistance started at once. Crawling back to his pallet the sender of the message died. The wanderer at length found his way back to the hut to have added to his cheerless surroundings the presence of death. At the sight of his lifeless comrade the last ray of hope faded, and he sank unconscious beside the dead operator.

With the first intimation that there was distress on the mountain top a party of willing men, mostly miners wintering at Colorado Springs, started for the summit. They reached the top after a day's weary travel, and just in time to resuscitate the still unconscious man, who in the end recovered.—Chicago Tribune.

Don't Drink Wine with Bananas.

The statement made in connection with the death of Colonel Gilmore that wine and banana juice combined made a deadly poison has caused much comment and much more comparing of notes. That to eat bananas and drink wine immediately afterward is to court certain death, as was stated by a gentleman of some experience, is not correct, or I would have died a score of deaths from poison before this, and the inhabitants of the West Indian islands would have been decimated time and again, for the combination is common among those who can secure wine.

It is possible that some particular wines are dangerous in combination with bananas, but the rule does not apply either to champagne or sherry. The suggestion, however, that bananas are injurious in connection with anything is rather a novel one to me, because there are few fruits which will preserve life and health like the banana. When properly ripened the fruit is at once delicious and nutritious.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Few Men Die of Overwork.

Dr. Pye Smith holds that there is no fear of the ordinary man using his brains too much for health, and he does not believe that mental labor or honest work of any kind interferes with health or shortens life a day. He maintains that excessive eating is the abuse that tends to the injury of brain workers more than any other cause.

Many active brain workers have suddenly broken down and fancied that it was due to brain fatigue, when, as a matter of fact, it was due to over stuffing their stomachs. The furnace connection with mental machinery became clogged up with ashes and carbon in various shapes and forms, and as a result disease came, and before the case was fully appreciated a demoralized condition of the nervous system was manifested and the prosaic cause for the collapse was suppressed under the euphemistic "mental overwork."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Swallowing Abilities of Snakes.

The jaws of the chicken snake are hung on hinges that can be taken apart or displaced for the time being, as the case may be, and an entire Texas cottontail rabbit can be persuaded to enter, head and all, with little effort, and the body being made of india rubberlike material and very stretchable the kicking little animal soon finds a lodgment in the stomach. His snakeship then carefully resets his jaws so that his mouth assumes its normal size and blissfully reposes for the succeeding six hours. The powerful gastric juice does the balance, and no Texan can testify that he ever heard of a chicken snake suffering from indigestion or chronic dyspepsia. The capture and digestion of chickens, song birds, turkey eggs and rats constitute simple pastime to the chicken snake and does not call for a six hour layoff in feeding time.—Port Lavacaen.

Rats in an English School.

In the summer holidays of 1858 the floor of Long chamber in Eton school was removed, and two large cartloads of bones, chiefly of necks of mutton, were taken from between the floor and the ceiling of the rooms below. How they came there was explained by Mr. Carter, then vice provost. He told the present writer that when the sixth form boys took their supper in "chamber" the rats were wont to come out of holes in the floor and wainscot to feed on the bones which were flung to them. When these animals from time to time became a nuisance by their numbers, a fag was sent round while the rats were feeding to insert long stockings in their holes, with the apertures carefully opened.

The modern sock was then unknown. When this was done an alarm was given. The rats on rushing to their holes were trapped in the stockings, which were then drawn out, and the rats were banged to death against the beds. "And you went into school next morning in the same stockings, sir?" "Of course, of course," was the reply; "we could not get clean stockings when we pleased."—Nineteenth Century.

Distilling Rose Perfumes.

We stopped before a hahn to look at a distillery and rose field and were welcomed by the proprietor, who was also landlord of the inn. Seats were put for us behind the brazier, where it was not a little warm, and soon miniature cups of coffee were presented to us by his rosy cheeked wife.

In front of a long shed six large chaldrons stood over the brazier, and into these vessels about a £100 worth of roses were put with warm water. The iron tubes through which the vapor escapes passed through a long tin receptacle shaped like a trough, which was filled with cold water, and below which large glass bottles stood to receive the first distillation. Three distillations are necessary before the oil of the rose appears.

We were shown a small bottle into which the essence just distilled had been poured. The color is a rich, deep gold, and the smell is strong, subtle and penetrating—pleasant for the first instant, but soon producing a sense of giddiness and oppression in the head. It affects everything near it, and the perfume clings tenaciously even in the open air.

The proprietors are secured from being cheated, as the peasants cannot endure the perfume they themselves manufacture and make no use of it whatever. It is sealed up in leaden bottles and sent to the great perfume emporiums in London and Paris, and a thousand different scents each have as their essence a few drops of this rich, thick oil.—Blackwood's Magazine.

The Philadelphia Ledger, the great Republican journal of which George William Childs is the proprietor, is not very well pleased with President Harrison's recommendation of a nonpartisan commission to devise some scheme for national elections, and it reminds him that "the principle of it was most offensively presented to congress and the country in the so called force bill, which congress wisely defeated, and the defeat of which the country rejoiced in."

THE TYPEWRITER IN SCHOOL.

"A No 2 Remington Standard Typewriter, the most perfect and durable writing machine in the world, has just been placed in the school, to be used for educational purposes. This machine was chosen after a long and severe trial on various kinds of work by the side of other machines.

"The ability to use the Typewriter is coming to be looked upon as a necessary part of a practical education, and in thousands of cases this knowledge is the means of earning a living. But valuable as a knowledge of this machine is to a person seeking a clerical position, the general use of it as an educational means is destined to make it of far greater value to the public schools. There is no doubt but that these machines will be used in the near future for their educational value alone in all High Schools and Grammar grades in the country. It is the testimony of educators who have tried it that no other device in the hands of the pupil contributes so much towards a knowledge of correct business English. Its use calls into date attention to correct forms in the correct use of capitals, to correct spelling, to neatness, to accuracy of expression—in short, to everything that would characterize English composition. But it is much more worth any thing? A gentleman from a distant city, who often finds business errands for young people, recently asked a merchant if he could secure suitable places for a number of young men and young women at $15 per week, if having at command these and other good English and spelt correctly."

"The habits of neatness, accuracy and skill necessary to successful manipulation of the typewriter cannot be developed and made up of the pupil and reappear in whatever he may undertake to do. One of the most obvious advantages of such a mechanism as the Typewriter, the student must give attention not only to spelling, capitalizing, punctuating and the making of paragraphing, but also to the work in hand, in manuscript and style. Poverty of ideas and deficiencies of style are more apparent on a printed page than when disguised in poor chirography or veneered with elegant penmanship."—Education, January, 1887.

A CONSCIENTIOUS VERDICT.

The Opinion of a Live Baltimorean on an Important Subject.

While paying a business visit a day or so ago at the offices of Matthew Robson's Son & Co., the well known shipping agents on Baltimore St., a reporter of the BALTIMORE AMERICAN found Mr. Arthur W. Robson, the active head of the firm, engaged in talking to one of the never-to-be repulsed typewriters representatives.

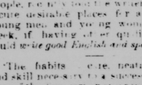

"The Remington! Yes, sir, this is a No. 2 Remington Machine, which I have in my private office for personal use; you will find another just on the outside of the partition, used by our assistants. . . . What do I think of the Remington? Why, my good friend, there is no other typewriter. I have gone through the experimental period; tried them all; and spent dollars and dollars upon these much vaunted typewriters; but a few months of this sort of nonsense convinced me of the folly of experimenting for the benefit of typewriter manufacturers, so I simply sold these 'most perfect' and 'improved' typewriters, bought two Remingtons with their cabinets and now nothing but a Remington 'goes' in this office.

"Our young man ventured to refer to the accepted improvements made by the other typewriter companies.

"'Improvements!' Mr. Robson exclaimed. "Do you think that the Remington people are going to stand to one side, and allow their well earned success to wane? No, sir, they are live men and every practical improvement, after being thoroughly tested, is added to the Remington, so that it is ever the most modern machine. Why, look around you, to confirm what I say. And as to the durability of the Remington, it was only recently that I sent the manager of the business here, who allowed me to read a letter received from the Ellicott Machine Co., one of the largest firms manufacturing machinery in the State. In the course of the letter they said: 'One of our Remingtons has been in constant use for perhaps five years, and we as machinists cannot understand why it does not wear out.' You may consider now somewhat a crank on the typewriter question, but I have had enough costly experience to entitle me to rank as a connoisseur, and I would strongly advise, if you desire to economize your time, and keep yourself in perfect good humor, whether in writing your letters yourself, or dictating to an amanuensis, profit by experience and invest in a Remington Standard Typewriter."

Pondering over these words of wisdom, the "Methodist" young man left Mr. Robson's office, in company with the typewriter representative, the latter remarking: "This is the way we are repulsed at every turn. I tell you it is hard work selling typewriters, when in the face of evidence, such as we have just heard, you have to practically admit that the Remington is head and shoulders over the machine we competitors try to sell."—Methodist, Sept. 24th, 1891.
