THE Equinox was not attended with bluster but simply a quiet dampness, dense enough to require an umbrella.

AT the meeting of the Talbot County Road League, held last Saturday, a permanent organization was effected. The constitution drafted will be found in another column.

SOME of the farmers are breaking ground in the lighter soils. Many are engaged in clearing and fencing.—Hauling still continues bad on public roads. Prospects for an active spring are good—the packers have contracted for more acres of canning products than ever before in the history of the county, and all in all, Talbot has a magnificent out-look towards a prosperous year.

THE World's Fair School exhibit from Talbot county still moves. The GAZETTE published a list of fifteen dollars subscribed last week, to which is now added

Prof. Chaplain.....$10.
Prof. Murdaugh.....10.

Let us hear from others before Talbot is compelled to be chagrined for the lack of $200.

EDITOR RODGERS of the late Preston Times has engaged his services to the GAZETTE and will conduct a Caroline Department. Our Caroline friends are solicited to give him due consideration and entrust their orders to his care. We hope his department will not only be an advantage to the paper but profitable to him. Remember he will contract for job work and advertising, and will write up the news of his neighborhood in as spicy and entertaining a manner as it is possible to do.

THE song of the mating bird is sweet. There is music in the budding bow, and echoes of delight in the heart attuned to appreciate the blessings, we as a nation enjoy. No pestilence stalks abroad, and is not likely to with the vigilance committee keenly on the watch. The bickerings of politics are hushed, save where momentary contentions for reserved seats prevail. The country is prosperous, the people contented, trustful and happy. Churches are springing up, and millions are being spared to aid in building those of other climes. Schools are flourishing—factories are booming—in fact, the wheels of commerce are spinning. What a glorious Columbian year!

BANKERS are not enemies to the laborer. They are not a set of sharks who lie in wait for the hard earnings of the poor man. They are less the friends of the rich many times than of those less favored with ready means. A poor man gets the same protection from a bank that the rich man gets. His deposits are just as carefully guarded, his accounts as strictly kept. It costs nothing—absolutely nothing to deposit money in the bank, and it is no more expensive to take it out than it is to put it in. The depositor's money is a thousand times more safe there than in a box or bag hidden between the beds or in a hole in the floor of a dwelling. If one is too ignorant to keep his own bank account the bank officials are reliable and correct. Laborers, fishermen, working women, if you have a few extra dollars deposit them beyond the reach of fire or thieves in a good banking house—the friend in time of fire or burglary.

OMNIVOROUS man! The carnivorous epicure—the dainty being who feasts on flesh, delights in the juices of the vegetable kingdom, and freely partakes of mineral sustinance. He scorns the food of dead flesh save where life has been forced from it.—All meats must be slain before it can tempt him. The fowl, the cud-chewing ruminant, the wild game of the forest, the squealing pachyderm, the scavenger crab, even the helpless oyster must be killed before eaten. To eat an oyster that has died between the shells, to tempt the palate with a canvass back found floating in the reeds, to ask the epicure to sample the diamond back product of the Chesapeake that had sickened and died would be disgusting in the extreme. All flesh to be good must have life extracted and not have the blood die within its veins. All? All but one. This complexity and dainty being, man, delights in fish—loves to eat the silver meat of the finny tribe. This flesh that is never killed, never bled, but allowed to sicken and die out of its natural element, flounder in pain on the sunny shore, gasping its life-giving principles, ac ually dying the same as though an air breathing animal were to drown, we eat. But we love fish, we patronize the fish market and actually take fish on subscription to the paper. Who'll bring the first shad?

TO THE LADIES.

MR. EDITOR:—Will some one please write me what will remove grease spots from carpets? I have a nice carpet nearly ruined by grease.

I have peaches, berries, grapes and pears over a year old, as natural as when picked. I use the "California Cold Process." You neither cook nor seal the fruit. It cost one cent a quart to preserve it. If any of your readers wish, I will send them a little sample of berries by mail, and tell them how to put them up. It is much nicer than canned fruit and less expense and trouble. You can put up a bushel of berries in ten minutes.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, March. 20, 1893.

A secret conference of democratic Senators was held at the residence of one of their number within the last fourty-eight hours and it may prove the first step towards a war between the President and the Senate as bitter and relentless as that which was a part of President Andrew Johnson's administration. The most notable thing about the secret conference was the absence of such pronounced opponents of the administration as Senators Hill, Murphy and Pugh. Although absent these Senators are in sympathy with the objects of the conference, and it is believed that they kept away purposely, in order that certain Senators disposed to be conservative might be induced to attend. What was stated to have been the immediate cause of the calling of the conference was the notice served upon Senators and the entire state delegation in the House. In other words, that Congressional influence would not count unless the bearer of it was otherwise satisfactory to the appointing power. That was the last straw. "This man intends to humiliate us and to break down our power at home," said indignant democratic Senators to each other, "and unless we intend to retire at the end of our terms we must fight." Nothing definite was determined at the conference, which was held for a free interchange of opinion as to what ought to be done, but a majority favored sending Mr. Cleveland word in unmistakable language that unless he would agree to allow the Senators to exercise their old time privilege of controlling, when acting in concert with the Representatives from their states, the Federal patronage of their respective states, they propose to make war on him by rejecting his nominations to office. Although no formal resolution to that effect was adopted by the conference the talk of those who took part, about twenty Senators, has been fully reported to Mr. Cleveland, and the few who are in the secret are anxiously waiting to see which side will first show the white feather. If Mr. Cleveland does it will be the first time he has allowed himself to be whipped without a fight.

See'y Hoke Smith is ambitious of becoming known to fame as a headsman. In addition to accepting the resignation of Gen. Raum, as Commissioner of Pensions, in advance of the appointment of his successor, he has asked for the resignation of all the division chiefs in the General Land Office. That's going at a much more rapid pace than the rest of the Cabinet have yet struck.

Republican officials seem to enjoy the confidence of this administration to a marked extent. For two days last week the War and Navy Departments were in charge of Assistant Secretaries Grant and Soley, respectively, while Secretaries Lamont and Herbert were out of the city.

Uncle Jerry Rusk has been taking advantage of his vacation to do a little sight seeing in Washington, which he never had an opportunity to do during the four years he was Sec'y of Agriculture. Although his office was within a stone's throw of the Washington Monument he never enjoyed the view from the top until he was promoted to be a private citizen.

The administration is trying to be very mysterious about its policy towards Hawaii, but it can be stated on good authority that it has had two separate and distinct policies within a week. The first of last week ex-Congressman Blount, of Georgia, who while he was chairman of the House committee on Foreign Affairs was an out-spoken opponent of annexation, was started for Hawaii with authority and instructions to repudiate the protectorate established by minister Stevens and to haul down the American flag, in order to see whether the provisional government was strong enough to stand alone while negotiating with this government. Later information was received by the administration to the effect that Great Britain's officials were prepared the moment the protection of the United States was officially withdrawn to restore the deposed Queen to the throne under a British protectorate. A cabinet meeting was at once called and its members made the fact very plain to the President that if he allowed Great Britain to get peaceable control of Hawaii his administration would be denounced from the Atlantic to the Pacific for such an un-American policy. So an entire set of new instructions were prepared and sent by telegraph to intercept Mr. Blount at San Francisco. In these new instructions he was told to recognize the existing protectorate, while he scours Hawaii for reasons against annexation. As he sails from San Francisco to-day or tomorrow his instructions cannot again be changed even if the administration should take another somersault.

Every train that goes out of Washington is loaded with disappointed office seekers, but as every train which arrives is also loaded with office seekers there is little or no dimunition in the crowd which daily besieges the White House and the Departments.

Geneva Grapes.—The Rural New Yorker of Feb. 4th 1893, desires that all of its readers who are interested in grape growing may try the Geneva Grape. It is one of the few varieties of partly Vinifera origin that thrive in the trying climate of Rural Grounds. As we have several times stated a vine was sent there by R. G. Chase & Co., of Geneva, N. Y., six years ago and it has borne fruit for the past three seasons. The berries possess characteristics which once noted would enable any one to identify the Geneva if seen among a collection of all the white grapes in cultivation. They are translucent—almost transparent, since the seeds of those raised in bags may be distinctly seen. The skin has little bloom; it is thin, of a firm texture, and of a peculiar lustrous surface that is close upon what we know in china and glassware as iridescent. The berry is quite large and often obovate; that is the lower portion is larger than the stem portion. There is scarcely any pulp; the seeds, usually but two, part freely from the flesh, which is pure in quality, sprightly and agreeable. The berries adhere firmly to the stems, which are small. It ripens with us early, a week or more before the Concord, though earliness is not one of its excellencies claimed by those who offer the variety for sale. The vine has proven hardy thus far and free of mildew.

Worthington's Illustrated Magazine comes to hand with a generous supply of good things for the entertainment of its rapidly growing circle of readers. The April number of this vigorous young magazine is the best that has yet been published, its table of contents showing great diversity of material and a most excellent list of contributors. The interest and value of its leading articles, the exceptional literary quality of its stories, poems, and Department matter, are admirably supplemented by the fine press work and artistic illustrations which make this number as attractive as it is readable.

An Epoch in Journalism.—On Sunday, March 12th, The New York Tress started a feature that will mark an epoch in American Journalism. It consists of an Art Cover, in which the paper when folded to the quarter size is incased, and it has created an unprecedented demand for the Sunday Press among all classes of people.

The front page of the last Art Cover was a beautiful reproduction of the German master piece "St Cecilia" and for the four Sundays in April it will present an original water color design with an art calendar, an original painting in the original colors by an eminent American artist, and two reproductions of famous paintings, admitted masterpieces. The inside pages of the Art Cover will always contain exquisite half-tone portraits and illustrations of people and topics of the then current week.

Every copy of the Art Cover of any issue of the Sunday Press would command in any art store at least $1.00.

CAROLINE DEPARTMENT.

Edited by Edward E. Rogers.

SALUTATORY.

The true journal is the argosy of not only the intelligence of current events, but also that of the best and noblest thoughts of its contributors, whose purpose it should invariably be to elevate the minds of fellow men to a status of intellectuality, morality and purity, of religious and political opinions worthy of the age in which we live. The newspaper then, whether in the country town or in the large city, should be and is speedily becoming not a chronicle of "news" and "moulder of public political opinions" alone but an efficient and faithful instructor in all branches of knowledge. The young seeker after practical ideas scans the columns of the newspaper and reads with interest its well selected and diversified matter. To this class of readers the wisely edited journal is a veritable rode mecum, and for the very reason that it is such to the young of our land, its tone should be moral, its sentiments noble, its miscellany enticing and the whole possessing elements delegated to the elevation of the human mind. Another class of readers, young men and women look to the newspaper for knowledge of social events—parties, balls, weddings, etc. Still another class, those advanced in years read the entire paper with avidity; to this class the home paper has a peculiar interest because of their wide acquaintance with people, places and past histories. To me the modern journal is an evidence of future possibilities, to me it shows all sides of human nature, to me it is an adinture of pathos, humor, intelligence and wisdom, to me it is a solace in sorrow and a welcome companion.

I don't purpose in this department to advocate any political or religious opinions, I propose to record such items of "news" as may reach my ear and that will be in my judgment of interest to the general reader, to contribute articles from time to time whose interest will be to amuse, instruct or will be an incentive to serious contemplation of some worthy theme.

I extend a cordial greeting to the many readers of the GAZETTE, as I shall endeavor to merit your good will in this work. To my Caroline friends I will simply say, You have seen me before,—to my Caroline enemies, if I have such, through any inadvertance during my short journalistic career here, I extend the hand of friendship and solicit their forbearance in this, their second affliction.

Death again visited the town of Preston on Friday morning of last week. While standing in front of his store conversing with a friend, Mr. James Jones dropped dead, of heart failure. His remains were interred in the cemetery on Saturday March 18th at 2.30 o'clock.

While Mr. Chas. Dukes of Beulah, Md. was working about the machinery in the grist mill one day last week his arm was caught by a pulley and broken so badly that it was thought that amputation would be necessary. He was taken to Baltimore.

Our canners are contracting for a large acreage of tomatoes and a large pack will follow a favorable season.

Mr. B. Wright is now engaged in sawing cord wood for the Baltimore market a tract of timber on the Frazier farm estimated to contain 1200 cords.

The machinery in the Linchester roller mill has undergone a decided metamorphose with Mr. John Farley as miller. Customers will henceforth be supplied with a high grade of flour.

The officers of the Preston Conclave I. O. H. were installed recently by A. W. Gaslie D. S. A., of Cambridge.

ADVANTAGES OF SMALL FARMS.

Conscientious Agriculturists Do Their Best Work With Them.

A farm of forty to fifty acres properly worked can be made to grow two crops on half of the acres every year, making a fifty acre farm equal in value to seventy-five acres. The most prosperous farmers by the past census were found to be the small farmers, are, those farming from twenty to forty acres. In the Tribune of a recent date, this fact is fully drawn out: Farmers who grasp more land than they can properly cultivate use its available plant food, and then leave it to posterity so depleted of fertility that it will not pay cost of cultivation, are robbers. Those who succeed them must go to work and restore the lost fertility, at consiterable expense, before they can expect to raise remunerative crops. On the other hand, the farmer who becomes legally possessed of as much land as he can cultivate well restores in some form the plant food carried off in his crops, and passes his fields down to posterity with value unimpaired, is a benefactor of his kind, and, instead of causing poverty, increases the public wealth. A large majority of the world's laborers can earn their bread more easily in other employments than agriculture. It is for their interest that the soil be cultivated and owned by those best qualified by nature and training for producing food, for each can produce the cheapest food.

My ideal farm, says P. C. Reynolds, is a small one under high cultivation. Few farmers are qualified to cultivate more than 100 acres, as they ought to be cultivated, and at the same time give proper attention to making the home and its surroundings what they should be. Rural homes should have ample ornamental grounds around the dwelling with the best representatives of tree, shrub, vine and flowering plant, hardy in our climate and open spaces covered with the greenest sward. They should have all desirable fruits and vegetables, so that the family may be enabled to enjoy all those luxuries produced from the soil that the ordinary day laborers in towns and cities now have in abundance. The small farmer may produce these luxuries without being worked to death or causing his wife to be overworked in cooking, cleaning and providing for numerous hired men with our labor-saving implements and machinery one man, with the assistance of a smart boy, can better work fifty or one hundred acres than three men could fifty years ago with the means then in use.

The main objection that can be urged against small farms that our most costly machinery cannot be used with greatest economy on them, that the annual use of such machinery would not equal the interest on cost and deterioration may be overcome by copying the example of other intelligent business men namely, combine their capital, organize joint stock companies to purchase and own such machinery; as as such seed, or animals of improved stock is cannot be owned with economy by single farmers. This can be done satisfactorily, I am confident, if done in a business way, every man in the company receiving what justly belongs to him, and no more. It may be argued that machinery cannot be used to advantage on the small fields into which small farms are generally divided. But the small fields may be enlarged by removal of expensive division fences, and growing the different crops on longer and narrower plats. Movable fences, to fence in animals at pasture, can be used, and most of the fences now in use dispensed with.

THE TITAN OF CHASMS.

A Mile Deep, 13 Miles Wide, 2-7 Miles Long, and Painted Like a Flower.

The Grand Canon of the Colorado River in Arizona, is now for the first time easily accessible to tourists. A regular stage line has been established from Flagstaff, Arizona, on the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad, making the trip from Flagstaff to the most imposing part of the Canon in less than 2 hours. The stage fare for the round trip is only $30.00, and meals and comfortable lodgings are provided throughout the trip at a reasonable price. The view of the Grand Canon afforded at the terminus of the stage route is the most stupendous panorama known in nature. There is also a train at this point leading down the Canon wall, more than 6000 feet vertically, to the river below. The descent of the trail is a grander experience than climbing the Alps, for in the bottom of this terrific and sublime chasm are hundreds of mountains greater than any of the Alpine range.

A book describing the trip to the Grand Canon, illustrated by many full-page engravings from special photographs, and furnishing all needful information, may be obtained free upon application to Jno. J. Byrne, 723 Monadnock Block, Chicago, Ill.
