SOME editorial correspondence from the editor of this paper, now in the World's Fair city, was received too late for publication in this issue. It will appear next week.

IT was a matter of considerable surprise to the people of Talbot, and of the State, at the resignation of Gen. Jos. B. Seth as Commander of the State Fishery Force. It was not known that the General had anticipated such a step previous to the tendering of his resignation, and it was therefore a great surprise to us. He has made a most efficient commander, in fact the best the service has ever known, and has made improvements that will be of lasting benefit to the oyster navy. In appointing a successor, it is hoped Gov. Brown will select a man who is capable of continuing and maintaining the reforms the General has made.

THE Brazilians are celebrating the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America with a bloody revolution and fierce fighting.

CYCLONES are skipping around over Oklahoma thick and lively. Perhaps they are giving the administration some idea of how readily they could open the strip if they had the administration's right to act.

SECRETARY CARLISLE is the most popular member of the administration with the rank and file of the democratic party, because he defies the mugwump alleged civil service reformers and openly gives as his excuse for asking for the resignation of republican employes that he wants their places for democrats.

THE warden of the Maryland penitentiary says that ex-State Treasurer Stevenson Archer, who was very sick for some time, has entirely regained his health and is able to perform his duties in the hospital. The warden adds, however, that since he has recovered Mr. Archer has grown more morose than ever and seldom has anything to say to any one.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has intimated that more haste will be made in the filling of public offices, and some of his secretaries have already given signs of increased activity.—The pace of the administration up to this time has been far from satisfactory to the spoils hunters and democrats in general, and the promised acceleration in the work gives evidence that the party managers have seen and spoken with emphasis to the President.

THE appointment of Jas. H. Blount as minister to the Hawaiian Islands gives rise to the belief that the President has decided not to annex those Pacific pearls. It is known that Mr. Blount was not in favor of annexation, as commissioner, and doubtless has so reported to the President, consequently his selection as minister is practical evidence that his position is upheld by the administration, and that annexation is off.

CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.

REGULAR WEEKLY LETTER FROM

W. D. B. AT FAIR GROUNDS.

Up to the present time the World's Fair has been comparatively a failure, and there has been no perceptible increase in the number of daily visitors. This is partly accounted for from the fact that the news had gone out that so much remains to be finished that those whose time and money are an object with them will delay their coming until some of the promises made early in the spring, that everything would be complete May 1, are liable to be fulfilled.

Those of our friends who contemplate taking "snap shots" with their kodaks, within the grounds, are not permitted to do so, unless they pay two dollars per day for this privilege. There is a possibility of this decree being modified later on.

As one strolls through the different buildings, notably that of the Manufacturers and Liberal Arts, and sees the many packing cases in all shapes and sizes, the thought naturally arises, "what is done with them, are they destroyed?" No. In many instances they have cost much time and money, some have been made specially to order, a number in foreign lands. Come with me to the south end of Jackson Park, and there you will see several large temporary storage houses, all divided into compartments, and where at the rate of 4½ cents per cubic foot these outside coverings are stored during the continuance of the Exposition, and so perfect is this system of storage, that any box or crate can be found in a few moments.

Just to the north of the Manufacturers building, as if to warn us that we could not get along without his help, stands the structure erected by "Uncle Sam." 'Tis said by some that taken in its entirety, it is one of the best, if not the best exhibit within the grounds. Only a hasty vist was made herein, but we must briefly mention the showing of the post office department. It is highly interesting and instructive, as it portrays the working of the postoffice, displaying the improvements in the service from its earliest stages to its present state of seeming perfection. Here can be seen a real live postoffice and postal car, with all its ramifications in full operation.

The terminal facilities as used by the different lines of railroads centering at the Fair, would seem to leave nothing to be desired. Arrangements have been made, so that passengers from a distance can be landed directly at the Fair, without the necessity of coming into the city first. This will no doubt become very popular with those who come on excursions with the intention of only spending the day at the Fair. The station erected for the reception of visitors is large and commodious, with a department of information in charge of competent railroad men, where it has been said, that up to date, no one has failed to receive a correct answer to his question in respect to the movements of trains, rates, distance, etc. In fact these men are walking encylcopedias in their department.

In close proximity to the terminal depot is the Transportation building and at both the north and south entrances thereto, is a long, wide balcony, the balustrade of which is surmounted by life-sized statues of men who have long been identified in some way with transportation, among them being Scott, Stephenson, Garrett, Watt and Vanderbilt.

There are very many interesting and old time relics in this building, such as old engines and cars both from England and American, many of them having quite a history, notably the engines used in the days of the "late unpleasantness" on the W. & A. railroad, between Atlanta, Ga, and Chattanooga, Tenn.

Apropos of transportation, there was seen being carried about the grounds a sedan chair, with a lady peeping from behind its silken curtains. It looked curious to see this means of locomotion, especially as the power employed was two savage-looking Turks, clad in Turkish garb, and harnessed both fore and aft, between the shafts of this peculiar carriage. The lady seemed to enjoy it, perhaps though, it was because of the attention she was attracting, more than the comfort.

The grass in many parts of the grounds looks as if it had been growing for years, while in others the sod has not been laid, but by the time the June roses lend their fragrance to the beauteous scenes, so much will have been accomplished toward the ultimate completion that even we who are accustomed to watch its growth will be astonished. Don't borrow any trouble about getting lost, for you can't turn around without running against someone in uniform competent to direct you.

Then one fee of fifty cents admits you to the fair grounds proper, and also to the avenue which has been christened Midway plaisance. Along this latter artery, the villages of the different nations are situate. The entrance fee to these special village attractions or side shows varied from twenty-five to fifty cents each, and the reason for this extra charge is that they are concessions to private individuals, who furnish their own capital to run them. Of course there is a charge in the grounds for the use of the boats, rolling chairs, etc., but the general admission of fifty cents gives you license to go where you will inside the grounds and buildings and to remain from eight in the morning until eleven at night.

Next week we will try and give our readers an idea of the grounds and buildings as see at night, when myrads of electric lights are endeavoring to turn darkness into day.

CAROLINE DEPARTMENT.

Edited by Edward E. Rogers.

IS IT JUSTICE ?

The electrocution of Carlyle Harris recently for the alleged murder of his wife, and the circumstances attending his trial, has given rise to considerable discussion among newspapers and has been the object of no little adverse criticism from men who "sit in judgment" over other men's lives: the doubts expressed or implied by these criticisms and discussions brings before us a question of grave importance. Should capital punishment be justifiable upon purely circumstantial evidence? In our humble opinion the institution of capital punishment was not tempered by proper restrictions or made subject to modifications commensurate with apparent facts in cases where circumstances alone established guilt. One of this country's most able lawyers, Mr. Voorhees, says that it is as easy to manufacture circumstantial evidence as any other, and sometimes easier. This being the case it would seem that, where a human life is at stake, the prisoner should be given the benefit of the doubt, and his sentence modified to imprisonment. Where any doubt exists in a case of this kind a less stern enactment of civil law would, it seems to us, be simple justice, be more ennobling to us as a nation, and ought to satisfy the utmost cravings of our natures for "law and order." There is something so abhorrent in the thought of an innocent man being deprived of life through a series of circumstances over which he had no control, and by a judge and jury who, no doubt, would gladly have rendered a more merciful sentence had the circumstances justified such, that our hearts quail before the moral obligation thus broken and the aim of justice thus defeated. We have all heard or read of instances of the hanging of supposed murderers after a trial in which the evidence was carefully weighed by a just judge and an unprejudiced jury, whose only clue was a chain of circumstances, but so cleverly wrought that any other sentence would seem an insult to society; and when all was over facts would come to light through some dying man's confession, establishing the executed man's innocence beyond a doubt. Defeated justice is a mild term for such a case. But what is to be done? Crime must be punished—outraged society avenged. Must we revoke a law because it has been wrongly applied? No. Enlarge the law if we must have it; make it more elastic. Avoid the necessity of making our tribunal an inquisitorial tragedy, and while professionally convinced of the prisoner's guilt by the chain of circumstantial evidence in the case, acknowledge the moral doubt by pronouncing life sentence to prison and thus let time and an All-Wise Providence reveal the real facts, while the consciences of judge and jury are light in the knowledge that their justice was tempered with mercy.

CAROLINE FARMERS HAPPY.

At the present writing the prospect for a large crop of peaches is very flattering, and our farmers are correspondingly happy. A good crop of fruit means a great deal to us. It bespeaks a change from a diet of corn bread and salt herring, irksome because of its regularity, to one more modern and favorable to corpulency. We would like to live as do our Talbot neighbors, if possible, but if we can't we intend to live as best we can.

BOUND TO BE ON TOP.

We hear rumors of a plan for the building of a hotel at Choptank. Well, why not? Some of our people have aimed their shafts of scorn at that vigorous embryo river town, but they have all fallen short of the mark. The contrast is so strong that the shafts become boomerangs. Choptank is being fostered by a spirit of enterprise which, if no great calamity occurs to cripple its effectiveness will eventually put to shame half a dozen other towns proud in their own conceit, but unnoticed by non-residents. Choptank is now being talked about to an extent which no other Eastern Shore town, with one exception, can boast of, and the building of an hotel there will be but a realization of the unprejudiced observer's expectations

It would seem that a boarding house is needed there now, as we are informed that the employees necessary to operate all the machines in the shirt factory cannot all find accommodations, while every family in the town has from two to seven boarders.

"Woman's Sphere" was the subject of Miss Smith's essay read at the Teacher's meeting in the Preston Academy on Friday of last week. The essayist has received many compliments for the masterly manner in which she handled her subject. Miss Smith maintains that woman's place is in the home—her duty, to train men for life's battles. Among other pointed ideas she said that the display of the products of woman's skill and handiwork, her genius and talents at the World's Fair, as compared with that of man would make but little showing; and that if all these be blotted out not one wheel of our great machinery as a progressive nation would stop; but if those of man's inventions be taken away, our nation would be thrown into anarchy and primitiveness: but it was thro' the fostering care and judicious discipline of fond mothers that these things were made possible and woman should receive more than a mediocrity of the honor and praise.

An Interesting Statement from a Big Clothing House.

If you let it cost you a cent for railroad fare to and from the city to buy your Spring Clothes the fault is your own. Your neighbors let us pay the fare, and they make money by it.

So announces the best and greatest of Clothing Stores—Oak Hall.

The best and greatest Clothing store is the Store that makes the goods it sells in quantities big enough to get the inside track of prices for cloths and everything else that goes into the Clothing. We do it. We make more than most wholesale houses that sell to stores to sell again—as much as any of them, without exception.

Good Clothing is one result—good making is another. There's a fearful lot of hidden bad work and stuff in much Clothing. There's no way to be rid of it but the one—doing one's own manufacturing. Still another important result of our manufacturing—low prices—the lowest of prices. There's a fearful expense slice slips away uselessly to pay the profit to the intermediate, who just sells the Clothing. We put our goods on our counters at the prices stores pay for them. We sell you a single suit at the rate stores pay for twenty or fifty. We don't sell without a profit. We don't add two profits, that's all. But that's a good deal to you.

By that you'll understand how we may pay railroad fare and still sell at the lowest prices, and give you better qualities.

A good $10 suit instead of a cheap stuff for $10.
A good $12 suit instead of a $10 suit sold for $12.
A good $15 suit—good enough to be $18 or $20 elsewhere.

The sun never shone on a finer stock of Clothing than we have this Spring.

Wanamaker & Brown,
Sixth and Market, Philadelphia.

For Example, we pay Railroad Excursion Fare from Easton if you purchase $40 worth.
