THE new immigration regulations provide that if immigrants are unable to produce documents or information to show by whom their passage was paid, whether they were ever in prison or poor-house, or whether they are under contract to labor in this country, then the captain of the vessel bringing them here must pay $10 to the Collector of Customs or take them back. The friends of undesirable immigrants would be quite willing to pay the extra $10 to get rid of such men, and, as steamship companies are in business for all they can make, there is a loophole here for the landing of immigrants of every class. There is nothing to prevent $10 being paid to the companies in addition to the regular fare, Secretary Carlisle should amend the regulations so as to actually prohibit the landing of all who do not produce the required documents and information.

THE following from an able writer, Dr. E. P. Miller, in the American Economist of June 2, is worthy of perusal and thoughtful consideration:

"Every election that has taken place where the Tariff question has been an issue, or where a reduction of duties or a Free-Trade policy prevailed, a change in our foreign trade has taken place. It took place after the election of Cleveland at his first term, and the effect is already very marked since his election for the present term. There has been no change even in the McKinley bill since Mr. Cleveland's last election, but already there is a change of $80,000,000 in our balance of trade. Even where no change of laws has taken place the moral effect is to 'destroy confidence,' discourage manufacturers and injure trade. The business of this country to-day is in a sea of uncertainty, and there is no compass or pole star pointing the way out. Capital is timid and will not embark in new enterprises unless the owners are confident they will meet with success. In October of 1892, just previous to election the balance of trade was about $3,-000,000 in favor of this country. Late report show clearly that it has gone largely against us since that time.—Our exports have fallen off and our imports largely increased. Our foreign trade has always been better under a high Tariff than under a low one. Before election money was being sent here from abroad for investment, new factories were being built and new industries started; but since then reports of business failures are much more frequent. The vote of last November evidently indicated that Cleveland's party was in favor of a revenue Tariff or a Free-Trade policy, and the general effect is much the same as though they had already passed a bill reducing the duties on foreign imports.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, June 5, 1893.

The secret is out. If indeed, it ever could have been truly called a secret. Grover Cleveland wants to be a Presidential candidate for the fourth time, and his worshippers are already advancing the argument that the unwritten law against a third term for President does not apply to him, because his first and second terms were not consecutive. Surely this Cleveland worship must be a disease, for men whose other acts are those of sane people seem to lose their wits entirely when his name is mentioned; they appear to accept his much-talked of "consecration" as a fact which it is little short of treason to attempt to argue against. You may think this but a bit of summer madness, and so it may be, but I can assure you that it isn't your correspondent who is moon-struck. He is a candidate, and every member of his cabinet, with the possible exception of Gresham and Carlisle, both of whom have hopes of their own to nurse, is committed to his candidacy. He has dominated the democratic party so long that he feels certain of getting the nomination again. It will then be left with the people to decide whether he shall break down all precedents and upset cherished tradition by being again elected.

The gold reserve is again a source of worry to the administration, being today lower than ever and with all the indications pointing to still further reduction. The cabinet held a long session to day, devoting its entire time to this matter, but nothing official was given out, for the best of reasons, no conclusion having been reached as to what shall be done.—The sentiment of the cabinet is still against an issue of bonds.

Representative Wilson, of West Virginia, who is understood to have been slated some time ago by Mr. Cleveland for the chairmanship of the Ways and Means committee, and who is to be, according to democratic gossip, the personal and confidential representative of the President in the House, says the West and South favor an income tax and that he also favors it. He also says that the ten per cent tax on state bank currency will be repealed as a concession to secure votes for the repeal of the Sherman Silver law. Under the circumstances this is considered about as authorative a statement as if it came direct from the President himself, as to the legislation that will be urged by the administration when Congress gets together. Mr. Wilson when asked about the tariff programme would commit himself no further than to say that "a reduction of the present duties will be made."

Secretary Carlisle has been very harshly criticised for one act of his, and he deserves it too. He has demanded the resignation of Major M. J. Bunnell, of New York, chief of a division in the Treasury Department. Under ordinary circumstances the average republican has had no complaint to make because of the forced resignation of republicans in the departments; it was to more than they expected and no more than has always taken place after every change of administration. But this is an extraordinary circumstance; hence the adverse criticism. Major Bunnell was a gallant Union soldier and lost both of his legs in action. Some years ago he had a position under the Senate, but it being very painful to him to move around he was made chief of a divison in the Treasury, a position he held during Cleveland's first administration. This making war upon a crippled soldier certainly is not creditable to either Sec. Carlisle or the administration, and is strongly at variance with these words from Cleveland's last letter of acceptance: 'The American people are generous and grateful, and they impressed these characteristics upon their government. Therefore all patriotic and just citizens must commend liberal consideration for our worthy soldiers." If compelling the resignation of a worthy veteran who gave his legs to his country in its hour of need be a specimen of Mr. Cleveland's idea of being 'generous and grateful' and of 'liberal consideration for our worthy veterans soldiers' then God help the wounded veterans whose families are dependent upon salaries paid by the Government.

Senator Lodge, of Mass., is in town. He believes with the most of the people here that attemps at financial legislation will be the most interesting part of the next session of Congress, and that the administration will have little difficulty in controlling the House but may be constantly antagonized by a majority of the Senate.

WORLD'S FAIR LETTER.

The fair has been opened Sunday and the whirlwind of fire which was to sweep over the grounds, as predicted by Boston evangelistic extremists, did not materialize.

The fair has been opened Sunday although the day was perfect, scarcely a third of the number expected by the officials to visit the grounds appeared.

And there you are.

The Almighty did not show his displeasure and on the other hand His family, or that portion of it in Chicago, did not to any extent show that they wanted to see the fair on His day.

The readers of this paper are left to draw their own inferences.

Decoration day at the World's Fair was a stunner; 190,000 people paid to see the big show. With "deadheads," of whom, by the way, there are an immense army, there must have been toward 225,000 people inside the gates of Jackson Park. And yet there was room. A million people would not be particularly crowded. People who have not visited the fair can have no conception of the magnificent distances, the grand roominess of everything. It must be seen and even then complete comprehension is impossible.

Talking of interesting exhibits, the visitor to Chicago, and especially the Yankee, should not fail to see the French nation's display of historical relics and curios of the revolutionary war, handed down to the heirs of Lafayette. There are chairs, desks and bureaus from Lafayette's library; caskets containing rings enclosing locks of hair from the heads of George and Martha Washington; the sword of honor presented to Lafayette by congress in 1779; a series of historical paintings including the reunion of the French and American generals after the surrender of Yorktown; busts of Washington and Lafayette; a piece of tapestry worked by Martha Washington at the age of 30; a pair of pistols worn by Washington and bequeathed by him to his French colleague; Washington's umbrella; plans of battlefields, letters and many other things equally interesting. The general public is not admitted but on application. Commissioner Krantz will issue cards by which admission may be obtained. Make an extra effort to view the the collection for it is worth it.

Speaking of the Columbian guard brings up the question, what are they for anyhow? A good part of them do little but draw salary against the size of which they are continually kicking. The remainder stand around and look pretty, varying the monotony occasionally by arresting persons who have had the audacity to be robbed or who have allowed themselves to be amused by the antics of the tin soldier brigade. There's a screw loose somewhere. Judging by the size of the police force which keeps order in Chicago 300 Columbian police would be plenty. Instead there are nearly 2 500, and the question again rises: What are they for?

This query is not hard to answer. Every functionary connected with the exposition has several to run his errands; every restaurant has a row at its front entrance for the Lord knows what; several scores proclaim in thunder tones that this is the right way to the electric launches, where one can ride a few rods for 50 cents—and so it goes. Guards should be stationed behind each guest at the restaurants to see that he does not eat pie with his knife; others should be placed at the peristyle to keep the waves from Lake Michigan from running into the lagoon; a corps should be detailed to keep the flies off the statue of the Republic and the farce would be complete.

It is not all strange that the fisheries building is most popular among visitors to the exposition. The salt water acquariums of course attract the greater share of attention, especially among islanders. The display is fine and has recently been improved in several ways. Two sand sharks are vie-ed with great curiosity and the three foot catfish draws forth exclamations of wonder from people who have been accustomed to catching nothing larger than three inch bull-heads. Curious people go into ecstasies of wonder over the crabs, sea horses, sea plants that are half animal and the like and crowd before the glass cases in such numbers that Columbian guards stationed in the fisheries building sweat in their tight fitting, pretty tin soldier uniforms until they are ready to drop.

There is one thing at least that calls for commendation this week. That is the music, or rather, the outdoor portion of it. It is not denied that Thomas' concert plays harmonously, in tune and all that, but the average visitor doesn't appreciate it. He wants something besides rips and tears, tweedles and turns and chromatic runs and he makes a break out of music hall straight for the administration plaza, pays 10 cents for a chair if no bench is empty, and sits down and drinks his fill of the melody rolling out from the pagoda which holds Sousa's band. And such a band! It is simply magnificent and people who have the least liking for music concede that its concerts are worth the price of admission to the whole show. There are other bands of course, but Sousa's is incomparable. And best of all, it's American.

The Sunday opening-Sunday closing fight is on in all its twists and turnings and no doubt before this is placed before your readers will have been settled one way or the other. An Illinois state judge has granted an injunction restraining the directors from closing Sunday and the Sunday closers are striving hard for an injunction to restrain the directors from opening the gates. If the injunction be granted we shall in all probabilities see a conflict between government and state officials which will be rather interesting.

A party stood viewing the Arizona exhibits of petrified woods the other day. Among them were a man and woman who appeared extremely interested in the beautifully marked and polished specimens. Finally, looking up at her companion the woman exclaimed, "They petrify that stuff just as they want to use it, don't they?" The rest of the party slowly faded away.

Ingeasoll's Eulogy on Whiskey.

"I send you some of the most wonderful whiskey that ever drove the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes in the brain of man. It is the mingled souls of wheat and corn. In it you will find the sunshine and shadow that chased each other over the billowy fields, the breath of June, the carol of the lark, the dew of night, the wealth of summer and autumn's rich content, all golden with imprisoned light. Drink it and you will hear the voice of men and maidens singing the "Harvest Home" mingled with the laughter of children. Drink it, and you will feel within your blood the star-led dawns, the dreamy, tawny dusks of perfect days. For forty years this liquid joy has been within staves of oak, longing to touch the lips of man.

Reply by Dr. Buckley.

I send you some of the most wonderful whiskey that ever brought a skeleton into a closet or painted scenes of lust or bloodshed in the brain of man. It is the ghosts of wheat and corn crazed by the loss of their natural bodies. In it you will find a transient sunshine chased by a shadow cold as an arctic midnight in which the breath of June grows icy and the carol of the lark gives place to the foreboding cry of the raven.

"Drink it and you shall have 'woe', 'sorrow', 'babbling', and 'wounds without cause,' 'your eyes will behold strange women' and 'your heart shall utter perverse things' Drink it deep and you shall hear the voices of demons shrieking, women wailing, and worse than orphaned children mourning the loss of a father who yet lives. Drink it deep, and long, and serpents [illegible] ears, coil themselves around your [illegible] seize you with their fangs [illegible] biteth like a serpent, and [illegible] adder.' No. 128.—A Riddle.

Your friend I am, your foe may be;
So strangely I'm employed
That many lives are saved by me,
And many more destroyed.

I aid your pleasures and your cares;
I'm at your table found;
I drop upon you unawares,
And then we both look round.

I'm always ready for a run,
A frolic or a revel;
Yet, 'mid my overflowing fun,
I seek my proper level.

So fill your glass, for I am "wet,"
Now drink to me and tell
The purest truth that ever yet
