—The Fourth was a beautiful day, and many were the parties of twos and upwards that enjoyed it on land under shady bower, or on water skimming the gentle billow. No business was transacted in Easton and no accidents to report. Fireworks in private yards kept the sky illuminated with rocket or candle until a late bed time when the celebration of the day ended.

—Red is the popular fancy in bathing costumes at the really swell places this season. The skirts are often discarded, Trousers to the knee, black stockings, a blouse waist and cap seem to be the favorite wrinkle. A red cap, a red belt or even a red blouse, especially used in combination with blue, is much favored.

—If some people could only get their little minds off their little personal grievances and throw their influence in the scale for the benefit of all, they might do some good. The fellows who are standing by the wayside and calling to every passer by to stop and hear their complaint or the story of somebody's faults are naturally stunned. Nobody wants to listen to them. Few people really have the gift of effective, truthful and just criticism. A large majority of the grumblers are not worth the breath they waste in talking.

The magazine remains unchanged in size and each issue will be an advance upon its predecessors. —The Maryland State Temperance Alliance is doing a good work in combining temperance and patriotism in its Fourth of July celebrations and seeking to make these celebrations especially attractive to children. The deepest and most disinterested love of country springs from the healthiest and purest moral soil and temperance is a virtue which is likely to give strength and stability to all others. To teach children the importance of habits of temperance and self control and the danger of commencing a course of unwise self-indulgence in anything that may injure the body or the mind is to perform a valuable service not only to individuals, but to the general public, and is, therefore, peculiarly appropriate on the day which belongs so especially to the whole country. If the evil of intemperance woeful is to be met successfully, it must be met by depriving it of fresh material, by removing the untouched fuel out of the way of the fire. As the alliance circular points out, "it is a thousand times easier to form the character than to reform it," and its efforts to influence the young are likely to produce far greater and more permanent results than political crusades or extremist legislation.—Balto. Sun.

—Not the least interesting of the various congresses to be held in Chicago during the Columbian Exposition will be the approaching conference on aerial navigation. The subject was formerly left chiefly in the hands "of the more imaginative inventors," according to a circular sent out in connection with the conference, but has of late years attracted the attention of scientific men and engineers, a considerable number of whom are interested in the approaching meeting. The principal objects in view are to discuss the scientific problems involved in aerial navigation, to collate the results of the latest experiments, to stimulate investigation and promote concert of action. Among the exhibits at the congress will be photographs of the great military balloons of the European powers, China and Japan, and of the great flying machine of Mr. Hargrave, of Australia and of Messrs. Maxim and Phillips, of England.

—The official report of the Victoria disaster confirms the view put forth by the survivors of the Victoria that the collision with the Camperdown was due to an error of judgment of Vice-Admiral Sir George Tryon in trying a certain maneuver in a space too small for it. He persisted in his fatal order after it had been called into question, and after the collision made other errors, it is said, which increased the loss of his life. His going down with his ship resolutely, without effort to save himself, has been supposed to have been due to a perception of the serious and irreparable nature of the calamity he had brought on his ship and many of his crew.

The Easton Ice Plant started up this week and now keeps on hand the most beautiful blocks of ice that art can produce. A large block of 200 lbs. was on exhibition Monday, the first drawn, and in its centre was a beautiful bouquet. The ice is clear as crystal and cold as zero, and is so cheap that all can afford to buy it this warm weather. The plant is in conjunction with the water works.

Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club Regatta.—Great preparations were made for the eighth annual regatta of the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club, which was held in the Eastern Bay off Claiborne. It was a race among Chesapeake Bay canoes, not more than 37 feet long. There were entries from Talbot, Kent, Queen Annes and Dorchester counties and Baltimore city. The course was from an imaginary line drawn from the judges' boat off Claiborne's wharf to Bodkin's buoy thence to stake boat anchored above second Kent Point, Kent Island, thence rounding judges' boat off wharf at Claiborne, thence to Bodkin's buoy, and back to judges' boat —a distance of 12 nautical miles.

Sudden Death of an interesting little Child.—Mr. R. N. Larrimore, formerly of Easton, Md., moved his family to our town a few weeks ago in order to recuperate his health which for sometime had been gradually declining, and with his family was his three year-old son, Percy Hambleton—a very interesting little child for its age—and on this account had received the attachment of many of our citizens who had formed his acquaintance. On Wednesday last he was stricken down with brain trouble and died on Thurs day while seemingly enjoying excellent health, casting gloom and sadness over the family as well as his new acquaintances. Friends of the family are invited to attend the funeral from his father's residence on South street, Saturday (today) at 2 P. M.

The Crocodiles.—There is but one Crocodile Club in the world and that is in Easton. It took its third annual outing to the city by the ocean recently. A special car was provided—buffet in one end—drawing room in the other, tables, easy chairs and lounges made the trip delightful. Reading, singing, the social deck, the sallies of wit by the frivolous, the placid arguments by the elders, the exchange of comment on the topics of the day, passing scenery, etc., conspired to render the time most enjoyable to the participants. A group of cattle lounging under a shady tree, brought forth much merriment and opened up the discussion of stock exchange, beef packing and kindred subjects, Editor Haddaway and Wilfred Bateman taking active part. Col. Hughlett added dignity to the occasion, he is a most enjoyable companion when he goes out with the young fellows on a pleasure trip Mr. B. F. Parlett, the Crocodilide Biforcatus of the gang, was chief saurian. He provided all the delicacies and made all arrangements At the ocean fresh oysters in shell were at the disposal of the Crocodilidæ Vulgaris, and how they opened their jaws—the oysters' jaws. Atlantic Hotel at Ocean City entertained the company. Mr. Addison B. M. Wilson was the life of the occasion and was the only Croc. who could sing, while the others shed crocodile tears. His favorite song was frequently encored and produced rounds of applause. Mr. A. L. Tharp addressed the company on apples, greatly to the amusement of all. There were about twenty members, who not only enjoyed the bathing, but every other feature connected with the outing.

To Those Attending the World's Fair.—Mrs. E. S. Tilghman, formerly of Talbot county desires her friends to know that she will accommodate guests at Drexel Cottage No 18, 47th Court, between Drexel Boulevard and Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, for $1.50 per day, furnishing them with every modern comfort in their rooms and providing breakfast. (Lunch and dinner not included.) Convenient to grounds, a quiet and beautiful neighborhood. The above terms are for July and a parties of ten preferred. 3t

The Summer School Closes.—After a very pleasant and instructive course of lectures, studies and exercises, the Easton Summer School closed yesterday. Those who had been on duty daily, aiding and instructing, are Prof. Chaplain who ably filled the chair of Psychology and kindred topics, He is undoubtedly one of the best read instructors on his specialty to be found, and he imparted much valuable knowledge to the teachers of Talbot county. Prof. Murdaugh of the Easton High School gave practical talks on English and Mathematics and instructed classes daily. The Professor is one of those indefatigable workers who knows no such word as fail. Prof. Crouse of St. Michaels Academy also assisted in mathematics and instructed on the constitution of the U. S. His bearing as a teacher is such that will commend him to any class composed of school teachers. Prof. D. M. Long gave his matchless lessons on the History of Maryland. He knows just a little more of that subject, and some others, than does the average teacher. Miss D. P. Mussey of Washington gave instruction in drawing and painting as adapted to school work. She is exceptionally fine in her department and soon had all the space on the walls filled with specimens of her own work and that of her adult and minor pupils of the summer school. Miss Mary Ossire of Washington instructed in music and was able to draw out the musical talent of the most deficient. She presented the rudiments of music with the aid of the black board in such a clear manner that the teachers felt they would be able to teach their pupils of the district school how to sing by note. Lastly, but by far not the least, was Prof. Wm. C. A. Hammel of the Md. State Normal School, a young man of wonderful ability to impart the elements of rudimentary science and to show the teachers how to contrive their own experiments with ease and with no great outlay. A few assorted glass tubes, bottles and corks, string paper and rubber, insulated wires and a horse shoe magnet, pliant rubber tubes and a lens or two, with a few common articles found in any country shop, and the Professor was able to show nearly if not all the laws of science laid down in the text book, with a great deal of accuracy and entertaining results. The teachers were busy at spare times making their own apparatus under the instructions of the Professor and will open the fall campaign in Talbot county with a better selected lot of ammunition when they teach the young idea how to shoot. The experiments with the heliostat and soap film were exceedingly beautiful and highly instructive. This instrument the professor made from the design of a very expensive one patented in Germany and is the only one in Baltimore city. It is so simple in its construction that a boy could make one. Such practical and simple devices have enthused the teachers with a greater delight for that most difficult of branches to impart —natural science, when one has to deal with the laws of nature almost entirely in the abstract. The teachers in attendance were T. S. Pattison, Emily C. Nutt, Wm. M. McIntosh, Margaret P. Robinson, Mary K. Gibson, Annie H. Smith, Mary Ann Hardcastle, M. Virginia Townsend, C. Emily Pratt, S. May Sheehan, Willie May Valliant, Alice McDaniel, M. Edith Richards, Natalie M. Robinson, Bessie Phillips, H. Lou Anthony, H. Lena Mellier, Ardie A. Barnes, Mary L. Norris, S. Elizabeth Hambleton, E. Alexander Weedon, W. Mason Shehan, Rosa V. Caulk, Mattie McDonald, Claud B. Dawson, Josephine N. Collins, Alice Hardcastle, Mary B. Williams, Sallie A. Wollaston, Addie M. Dean E. Imogene Caulk, Addie C. Keithley, Edw. H. Freeland, Hennie M. Merrick, Anna E. Ewing, Carrie B. Smith, Anna R. Denny, Ida V. Wood, Annie V. Leonard, Katie P. Jump, Zenobia Miles, Mamie H. Jackson, M. Estelle Sherwood, John W. Gibson, Anna L. Bryan, Emma Lelia Bailey, Etta S. Barnes, Effie May, Laura R. Sullivan and Castella Reynolds all of Talbot county, Myrtie L. Gootee of Caroline, and Katie Brown of Charles county.

In the evening the service was peculiarly interesting to non-catholics who were edified by the recitation of the rosary, a sermon from the Bishop upon the holiness of the Blessed Virgin followed by the Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. Iced Tea and Coffee.—The secret of delicious summer beverages is their iciness, writes Florence Wilson in an article on "Summer Beverages" in the June Ladies' Home Journal. They may be unwholesome in their frigidity, but in this way only their true virtue lies Iced tea and coffee are probably the least injurious of summer drinks. To prepare the former pour a cup of freshly-boiled and boiling water over three teaspoonfuls of tea, set to steep, when add one quart of freshly-boiled water. Five minutes later strain into an earthen jug, and when cool-not lukewarm —add one or two large pices of ice. Serve with a large quantity of finely chopped ice, granulated sugar and thin slices of lemon. If iced coffee be desired make a fresh pot of very strong coffee, and when cold serve with large quantitids of ice and sugar; cream is but seldom used.

A Mechanical Wonder.—The gigantic Ferris wheel is the mechanical wonder of the exposition. It is in smooth running order now and carries from 6,000 to 8,000 persons 264 feet into the air every day. Thirty-six cars, each almost the size of a street car, are suspended from the inside of the wheel, and as it revolves the heavy iron work on the bottom of the cars keep them in a level position. A guard in each car. As the wheel turns you rise slowly until, when you reach the greatest height, the throng of people on the Midway look like so many midgets. Through the windows of the car you get a wide view of the fair grounds and the surrounding country You are glad when your car nears the earth and you begin to wonder why the owner of the concern ever thought of charging 50 cts. for two round trips." One trip is enough for you, but as the other passengers are feeling the same way and nobody cares to make a start to get out, you take a long breath and another trip. Suddenly the car jolts and sways. You gulp down your sensation and turn inquiringly toward the guard, who smiles complacently and says that's nothing —we've stopped to take on some passengers down below." You breathe freely once more and try to appear unconserned so that the ladies in the car will feel reassured. Finally your car reaches earth again, your face brightens, you remark carelessly to one of your fellow passengers, "Wonderful view, glorious sensation," and as you walk proudly away, the tired spectators near by gaze at you with awe and admiration. The Ferris wheel cost $200,000. When the Fair is over the wheel will be re erected at some summer resort.

Caroline Politics.—A correspondent to the Baltimore News of July 3, gives a full discussion of affairs in the political pot of Caroline. He thinks the regulars and fusionists will war to the knife. Regarding the Senatorship he says:

In Denton, as in the other county villages of the six districts, knots of men gather daily to discuss the situation. All talk veers to the Senatorial nomination. Senator John F. Dawson is generally thought to be a candidate for renomination. He has had a good record at Annapolis, and is a man of the purest public and private life. Opposition to him has developed because of his advocacy of certain measures affecting the financial tone of the county—measures he was pledged before the people to support, and which militated, politically, against the fusionists.

It is stated authoritatively to your correspondent that, under present conditions, Mr. Dawson's friends will decline to allow his name to go before the convention. He has expressed himself as being willing to accept only a unanimous nomination, for the reason that he is opposed to imperilling the future or success of the democratic party in Caroline for personal ends. Pressure has been brought to bear upon Senator Dawson to go before the voters, some of his advisers being confident that he is the most available candidate. It is unlikely, however, that the Senator will countenance any action inconsistent with the course he regards as calculated to promote party success. On the other hand, Senator Dawson has signified an intention to aid in nominating as his successor a man acceptable in every way to the entire democracy.

Three other candidates are spoken of: Henry R. Lewis, Thomas A. Smith and Edward E. Goslin. Mr. Lewis comes from the Third, or Denton district, is a law partner of the Hon. George Mitchell Russum of celebrated candidature, and was defeated for a re-election as State's Attorney in 1891. He is a brother of Dr. Beniah L. Lewis, a prominent Delaware politician, and is, apparently, acceptable to the kickers.

THE PUZZLER

No. 159.—A Letter Puzzle.

Look back through many eventful years
To a scene for sympathizing tears;
Behold two warriors in arms of death—
Heroes both to their latest breath.
One joys for the land he died to save,
One grieves to fill a surrendered grave;
Both are honored alike by nations twain.
These letters will name the warriors slain:
An F, two O's, two L's and C,
Two M's, an N, an A and E.
These, with one T and W,
Spell the names of the gallant two.
