The Kansas Cyclone.—According to announcement in the papers as well as by posters circulated, Van Bennett, popularly known as the Kansas Cyclone, a Prohibition orator, struck the village of Cordova on Thursday night last with terrific force. A large crowd of listeners had gathered to hear him, as his fame had preceded him many days. Many went from Easton and other points within driving distance. His eloquence is not exaggerated nor his arguments tiresome. He strikes hard and the opposite side enjoy it the more, for while so many do not take up the principles of the Third Party as a party, yet there are large numbers in the ranks of the old parties who endorse the sentiment of prohibition as a moral issue alone. It is no easy thing to talk on a hackneyed subject and rivet the attention of all, but the Cyclone does it.

Mr. Bennett spoke for more than two hours in the grove under a canopy of foliage, illuminated with lanterns. The air was still, the leaves hushed and even the night bugs and mosquitoes paid respect by keeping silent. His audience on the outskirts would once in a while become talkative but he soon quieted them by illuminating the picture he was painting in more vivid hues. He is truly a gifted enthusiast. Not especially oratorical nor even eloquent, but exceedingly entertaining. He had the happy faculty of hitting hard without offending. And he did not dwell on the liquor tarrift alone, he struck boldly at finance and monopolies.

He was due in Easton about the hour this paper went to press last evening, and therefore there can be no report of the great speech and the crowds that heard it, but it will not fall far short of the truth if it can be said in advance that no such temperance orator ever held an Easton audience before.

The engagements made for Mr. Bennett next week are Sunday 23 at Oxford, morning in tabernacle, evening M. P. Church; Monday 24 at Federalsburg; Tuesday 25 at Denton; Wednesday 26 at Wye Camp; Thursday 27 at St. Michaels, and Sunday 30 at Tilghmans.

Letter From Bishop Adams.

EASTON, July 19, 1893.

MY DEAR MR. HADDAWAY:

I see an article in the Sun of yesterday in which my name is mentioned in connection with a reported case of yellow fever in our neighborhood.

The way in which my name is brought in is perhaps misleading; it certainly puts me in a wrong position, unintentionally, I am sure. In the first place, Dr. Dunning did not say a word to me about yellow fever, nor, so far as I can recollect, express any opinion of the case save that he had not seen such a fever before in his practice. In the second place, there is nothing that could possibly induce me to pass any judgment at all, one way or another, upon such a matter; because it is one thing to see a man who has yellow fever, and another and very different thing to see the yellow fever.

When the last fearful epidemic broke out in Vicksburg the first case was pronounced yellow fever by two reputable physicians. Six or seven other physicians of equal reputation and skill and experience not only denied it, but ridiculed them. In three weeks it was all over the city. And it is so in nearly every epidemic. The first cases occasion conflict among the only men that are capable of judging.

So far, however, as this community is concerned, it does not, I think, make much difference whether it was or was not yellow fever. I have known eleven deaths from yellow fever, right in the heart of the most populous section of New Orleans, and it did not spread; nor did any take it save those who landed from an emigrant ship that stopped at the island of St. Thomas, and contracted it there.

Speech making will be indulged in. Parade starts at 7 o'clock.

John Mason, guardian of Alfred B. Mason, filed a petition renouncing his guardianship and asking that Walter H. Thompson be appointed in his stead. The petition was granted. Mr. Thompson filed an approved bond.

The court passed an order rescinding the order passing the distribution of the personal estate of James M. Parrot, Nov. 1st. 1892, and passing the distribution made in accordance with the opinion of Judge Robinson, filed in the case of Parrott vs. Chaplain, executor.

James C. Mullikin, solicitor for plaintiffs in the case of Clara Stevens, Ella Stevens, Mary Stevens, Addie Stevens and Edith Wilson vs. C. Thomas Stevens, executor of Annie M. Jump, entered an appeal to the Court of Appea's, in the matter of the distribution of the personal estate.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Board of County Commissioners met on Tuesday.

Receipts were:

Thos, A. Lloyd, collector, 1892. [illegible]

R. H. T. Councell, was granted the use of the Court House for a prohibition meeting.

The board calls the attention of tax-payers and tax-collectors to the following provisions of law as found in Article 81, Section 41 of the Code:

"Every collector receiving a copy of such (tax) assessment or rate shall within thirty days thereafter proceed to collect the same, and shall pay the county taxes to the County Commissioners or their order, within six months after receiving the copy aforesaid. If any such collector shall fail to perform his duties as directed in this section, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, in the discretion of the Court."

This means that the taxes for 1893 must be paid within six months from June 13th, the day the collectors got their books.

The Epworth League entertainment came off last Tuesday evening as advertised and was greeted with a good attendance considering the threatening storm which did not come. This was the last seen of him alive. He was shortly afterward found dead near the wheel from which he went to throw the belt. It is supposed that in attempting to perform his task he lost his balance, and falling forward his clothing was caught by a set screw in the shaft of the pulley and he was whirled to his death.

No one connected with the management of the Columbian Exposition has made such a record as Hon. George V. The day was rarely beautiful. The place the typical Haven of Rest for wayworn and weary White Ribboners (whose paths lie not always amid "fresh fields and pastures new") and our initial Temperance Picnic a brilliant and glowing success. It will prove a pleasing result to his friends here if this voluntary notice of his resuming the Commission trade in his own name again will gain the favorable attention of the grain and fruit raieers in this country.

Suicide of a Horse.—A horse belonging to a gentleman near Chesterville, committed suicide one night last week by hanging himself from the crotch of an apple tree. Two or three nights prior to this rash act, the horse was mired in a meadow, but was extricated the next morning by its owner. The evening preceding the night of the suicide the animal seeming unwell was given a dose of medicine by its owner, and turned out in a field. Becoming tired of the troubles and afflictions of this life, the poor beast placed its head in the crotch of an apple tree which was in the field, and sitting down thus placing its weight on its neck, ended a life of despair and sadness. The horse while not a very valuable animal was quite a loss to its owner.—Chestertown Transcript.

Dangerous Drinking Water.—Dr. Ernest Hart, editor of the British Medical Journal, of London, and chairman of the National Health Society of England, who spent several weeks recently in Chicago, thinks the present state of the water supply in that city demonstrably dangerous. In an address on the subject delivered by him before the Chicago Medical Society, he stated that "the main source of danger is precisely that water which is supplied to the fashionable quarter of Chicago and the exposition grounds at Jackson Park. He proved by maps and figures to the society what had practically been tacitly admitted, although, perhaps, never so absolutely demonstrated—namely, that the recent epidemics of typhoid fever which have been so murderous in their results were wholly and entirely due to the sewage contamination of the drinking water." Dr. Hart added that the drinking water at Jackson Park is loaded with bacteria and that the tanks of "sterilized" water scattered through the grounds are little better than the ordinary lake water. He advises visitors to the fair to drink only pure spring water or natural mineral waters, or better still, water that has been boiled and filtered. Baltimore Sun.

The Cheap Funeral Directors and Furniture Men of Dover Street.

We wish to inform the public in general that they can either do arterial embalming, cavity embalming or embalm by the new method, and do guarantee that they can keep a body as long as any one who only uses arterial embalming. I will guarantee and can prove that I am the oldest embalmer in Easton, and have never made a failure either. Embalming costs but little, and we wish to give the public the benefit of it. Come and get our prices.

SAMUEL PATCHETT & SON.

DIED.

BARTLETT.—At his home near Easton on Monday, July 17, 1893, James Dixon Bartlett, eldest son of John C. and Matilda J. Bartlett, aged 27 years.

The death-change comes.
Death is another life. We bow our heads
At going out, we think, and enter straight
Another golden chamber of the king's
Larger than this we leave and lovelier.
And then in shadowy glimpses, disconnect,
The story, flower like, closes thus its leaves.
The will of God is all in all. He makes,
Destroys, remakes, for His own pleasure all.
—BAILEY.

The young life so full of promise, so replete with nature's richest gifts,—manliness, integrity, sobriety, earnestness of purpose, nobleness of character and grace of manners, has been taken from earth. There could fall no heavier blow, there could be garnered no fairer bloom than is presented by the untimely death of James D. Bartlett. A mother's pride, a father's joy, a brother's example, a sister's admiration and a friend's delight. He is mourned for his worth, and the page of his unfinished record is turned down at its most interesting passage to be continued only in eternity.

Mr. Bartlett had for years been a faithful employe and salesman with the house of Dixon, Bartlett & Co., of Baltimore, wholesale dealers in shoes, and had been in the habit for a long time of looking after the Southern trade—making extended trips South. About three weeks ago he returned from one of these trips with severe fever, and was advised to go to his home for treatment· He soon became prostrated and no medical aid seemed capable of reducing the fever which raged with such unabated fury in veins that never before knew what disease meant. A trained nurse kept the most careful record of the case, and experienced physicians stated that all that was possible had been done. The young man had been a hard student, and graduated at the Maryland Law University just prior to his sickness.

The community deeply sympathize with the parents and relatives in this their sad loss. Interment took place at the Friends' burial ground on Tuesday last.

The following was received by the family from Baltimore:

At such a time as this, words seem weak indeed, but I must write and express my sympathies in this severe trial, and the hope that strength from our Heavenly Father may be given you in a degree, whereby you may be enabled to bear with fortitude the great blow. His many friends here are greatly saddened at the loss of one whom they held in such high esteem, and will miss him greatly. In his nine and a half years' residence among us, I think I can safely and truthfully say that he did not make one enemy.

He was a favorite with all, and those in the lower walks as well, felt his influence, and admired his high character, as the enclosed will show. Mr. Spencer, the foreman of our factory, came to me a few moments ago, and handed me the enclosed paper, and said that the men in his department all felt James' death greatly, and that as they all thought so much of him, they wished in some way to testify to same and had attached their signatures to the resolutions enclosed (which he had written) and hoped I would see that they were forwarded to you. Appreciating the motive that prompts this action and feeling that you will also, I herewith enclose same in this letter.

WHEREAS. It has pleased Almighty God in his Divine Providence, to remove from our midst our beloved, young, noble and generous friend and associate, James D. Bartlett, we, the employes of Dixon, Bartlett & Co., tender our heartfelt sympathy and condolence to the bereaved family of our esteemed and noble young friend. Noble—in that he lived to love his fellow man. Generous—in that he was always ready to assist and help the needy. Brilliant—having a peerless vision, saw the beautiful everywhere. He saw God and good through the open window of his love. Faithful—rectitude being the standard of his noble soul.

Resolved, That the above be engrossed, and a copy be forwarded to the bereaved family.

The while her maid, with deft and clever hands,
Adjusts and first the creamy gown of white
That is to take all hearts by storm tonight.

No pains are next to make her beauty shine:
She thinks she will be finest of the fine;
To three her train and see it sweep the floor
Delights her, so she does it o'er and o'er.

"School days are past," she says, "no tasks I learn.
My brains I've four with books which now I spurn.
I've five and spelt and ciphered years away
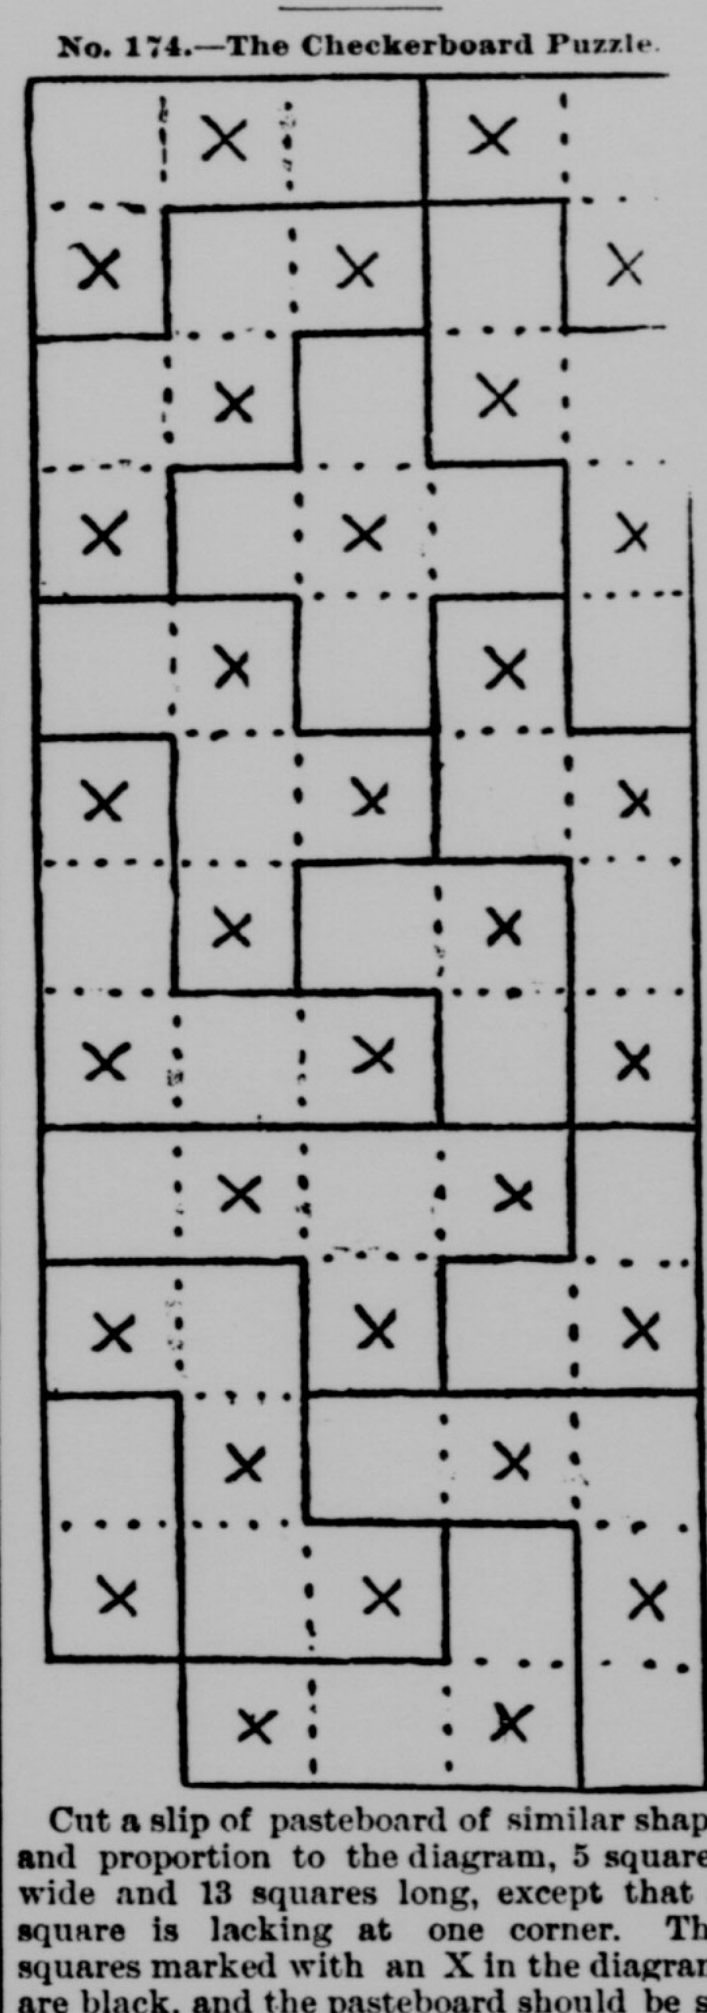
But now I will be happy, free and gay."

No. 174.—The Checkerboard Puzzle.



Cut a slip of pasteboard of similar shape and proportion to the diagram, 5 squares wide and 13 squares long, except that a square is lacking at one corner. The squares marked with an X in the diagram are black, and the pasteboard should be so colored or marked. Now cut the pasteboard into the 15 pieces of various shapes shown by the continuous lines in the cut. The puzzle is to put these 15 pieces together so that they will form a miniature checkerboard.

My fourth is in milk, but not in porter.
My fifth is in rose, but not in daisy.
My sixth is in work, but not in lazy.
My seventh is in roost, but not in hen.
My eighth is in eleven, and also in ten.
My whole is a pretty spring flower well known to all.

Mr. Smith had a nice plump sheep in his flock, but she ONE so much that he became disgusted with her, and as she was in such good condition physically he soon had her TWO in the dining room. Her fleece when THREE with many others was sent to the city, where it brought a good price. But the sheep was a favorite with Mr. S.'s little daughter, who was FOUR when her pet was removed. She said it was a FIVE naughty man who took Snowball away so she could not hear her any more.
