Dist. 2.	St. Michaels	4 members.

for the purpose of nominating a Senator and other county ticket, a new State Central Committee for Talbot county and the transaction of such other business as may be properly brought before it.

M. M. HIGGINS, H. C. DODSON, GEO. H. TRAX, R. E. WELSH, — Republican State Central Committee for Talbot County.

THERE is one sense in which we are too familiar with the Bible. We are hardened to it. In my college days we were forced to attend preaching services on Sunday, and consequently upon my mind preaching made not the slightest impression.—The sound was too familiar—unpleasantly familiar. I knew the theme in one sense too well—in a real sense, not at all.—REV. THOMAS DIXON.

ATTEND the Republican Primaries to-day.

THE repeal of the Sherman Silver bill was voted on in the House on Monday and received a majority of 129 votes. What the Senate will do remains to be seen.

NOW is the time to load with good ammunition. A fairly good Republican ticket ought to win. The Democrats of Talbot are badly disrupted and notwithstanding the fact of their generally falling into line at election, it might be that they fail to rally sufficiently to defeat a good Republican ticket this time.

AT the November sitting of the Circuit Court last year it was decided unlawful to take oysters from the water before Sept. 15th. Under this decision the State's Attorney must act, although before the decision was rendered he may have expressed himself differently in regard to the meaning of the Code.

THE storm on Monday is furnishing columns of particulars to the press of the Atlantic coast. It visited this county in the shape of a violent wind but did no serious damage except stripping trees of their fruit, laying waste corn fields and on the rivers cutting banks of valuable farm land. The gale of wind was very high but owing to the dryness and firmness of the ground very few trees were overturned.

THE democratic oyster law is again giving trouble. That clause referring to dates of Sept. first and fifteenth seems to be as hard for attorneys to translate as for a ten year old school boy to digest the fine passages of Virgil. Some are working on one opinion rendered and some on another. The oysterman that did one thing last year under the same law is arrested for doing the like thing this year. The trouble is getting worse instead of better. One man was arrested for taking oysters off his own private bed on the first, and all are restricted from operating until the fifteenth.

THE readers of this paper who contemplate attending the World's Fair may find it to their advantage to seek some information relative to hotel rates in Chicago through the editor of this paper, as he will be in that city for a few days next week and will make special arrangement for discounts to those who stop through his recommendation. Further particulars will appear later. There are scores of business men in this vicinity as well as numbers of small parties from Talbot who will visit Chicago this fall and it is to these especially that liberal rates will be given, in consequence of the concentration anticipated. All may rest assured that the hotel selected will be one of the best and convenient to the gates.

MR. J. M. WOOTERS of this county has again been appointed special U. S. Agent of the Internal Revenue Department for the district of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia. Mr. Wooters served thirteen months under the former Cleveland administration and was considered one of the best officers in the Department. At the time of his resignation after the Harrison victory the Produce Exchange of Philadelphia with a strong delegation and petition, regardless of politics, went down to Washington to have him retained in the service, and without his knowledge have sought his reappointment this time. Mr. Wooters was especially successful in breaking up the illicit oleomargarine business in Pennsylvania that made him so popular with the Produce Exchange.

We congratulate him on his appointment and must say since a democrat it has to be, we are glad the service of Uncle Sam has one it can rely on for the faithful discharge of his duty.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, Aug. 28, 1893.

The all-absorbing silver fight has now been transferred to the Senate, the House having passed the Wilson bill for the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the silver law, as it has been plain for a week that it would do. The Wilson bill now goes to the Senate where it will be referred to the Finance committee never to be heard from again. The reason why this bill will be shelved by the Senate committee is that the majority of Senators who favor unconditional repeal prefer the Vorhees bill for the same purpose, with its tail-piece declaring it to be the policy of the government to maintain a bimetallic currency. As a matter of fact this declaration carries no weight without additional legislation, but it implies that there will be future legislation and that implication is relied upon to gain the votes of Senators who would otherwise not vote for unconditional repeal. Whether this will prove to be true only time can tell.

There are many rumors of defections among Southern free coinage Senators, and the claim is boldly being made that a number of them will after making free coinage speeches, vote for unconditional repeal. Senators Call and Pasco, of Florida, are said to have made positive promises to that effect. So confident are the administration Senators that they can get enough votes from the South to pass the bill, if they can only get it to a vote, that a proposition has been made to republican Senators to try to get them to use their influence with the republican Senators who favor free coinage, not to vote for unconditional repeal, but merely agree to allow a vote to be taken. It was stated to them that if they would secure that agreement the democratic Senators would agree that the tariff should not be disturbed at this session of Congress. The proposition was declined. In making that proposition the administration men showed that they realize the difficulty in getting the bill through the Senate, even if they can get the promise of the votes of a majority of the Senators. Under the present rules of the Senate twenty Senators can, if so disposed, stave off indefinitely the taking of a vote on the bill, and that more than that number are at present so disposed there can be no doubt.—The outcome of this matter depends upon whether the men who now stand for free coinage or nothing can be persuaded or coerced into allowing a vote to be taken. Mr. Cleveland will return to Washington this week for the purpose of adding his personal influence to those already being brought to bear on the Southern Senators to vote for repeal.

Here is one good piece of news that ought to please every man interested in the welfare of the country. There will be no wild cat money authorized at this session of Congress, the House committee on Banking and Currency having a majority against the bill for the repeal of the tax on State bank currency. Whether knowingly or not does not matter, but Speaker Crisp certainly did the country a great service when he made up that committee by selecting a majority opposed to wild cat money.

One of the best as well as the most conservative of the speeches made in the House during the silver debate was that delivered by ex-Speaker Reed on Saturday. He was at his best and was as warmly congratulated at the close of his speech by democrats as by republicans.

The new rules of the House are much better than those used by the last House, but are not as good as the much abused Reed rules, which they follow to a certain extent.

The number of democratic Congressmen who do not agree with the administration in its treatment of pensioners is increasing, or, perhaps it would be more correct to say that the number of those who have the courage to express their opinion is growing larger. The latest case is that of General Dan Sickles, who represents one of the N. Y. city districts, the nomination having been given him by Tammany to prevent his bolting the Cleveland ticket. In a speech on the silver question Gen. Sickles advocated as one of the methods of temporarily relieving the money stringency that pension claims due Oct. 1st be paid at once. He said in that connection: "Why not pay out to this large mass of public creditors distributed all over the country, men and women and children who have the most touching claims upon public gratitude, $30,000,000 in small bills and silver? The money will go where it will do the most good; among the brave men who do not hoard their pittance from distrust of the government they saved, and who are to-day feeble and infirm, and unable to find employment to earn a living." Good as this suggestion is, there is little or no probability of its being adopted. The administration that pays each pension money grudgingly after it is due will not be likely to anticipate the payment of a dollar of it.

Half Rate Excursions to the World's Fair via Washington and the B. & O.

The Baltimore and Ohio R. R. will run a series of special excursion from Baltimore and Washington to the World's Fair at rate of $17.00 for the round trip. The trains will consist of first class day coaches, equipped with lavatories and toilet conveniences.—The trains will start from Camden Station, Baltimore, 9.30 a. m. and leave Washington, D. Tickets will be valid for outward journey only on the special trains, but will be good returning from Chicago in day coaches on any regular train within ten days, including day of sale. Stops will be made for meals at the dining stations on the line. A Tourist Agent and a Train Porter will accompany each train to look after the comfort of passenger. For more detailed information as to rates, etc., apply to Chas. O. Scull, Gen. Pass, Agt. Baltimore, Md. 116sept

A Pretty Party.

Many people expected that just as soon as Congress met, and just as soon as the President's message had been delivered, there would be an improvement in the financial and industrial condition of the country.—The free trade papers had blazoned forth in loud and blatant tones that Congress would afford relief, and that the words of wisdom from Mr. Cleveland's pen would be as oil upon the troubled waters. In fact, so far had these papers, and especially the democratic press of New York, become imbued with their own false prophecies that they actually believed that the President's message and the calling together of a Democratic Congress would be in the light of a second salvation of the world.

Interviews with bankers and merchants were heralded forth that this day of salvation had arrived. The President's message was praised by many who had not even read it carefully, but a more thorough digest of its contents showed that it contained not a word more than had been printed editorially, or as interviews for months past. It stated clearly, and perhaps forcibly, just what the situation was. It assigned a cause for this condition which subsequent events alone can prove to be right or wrong, but it gave not an iota of a suggestion as to how the condition might be improved, and this was what the people look for and had a right to expect from the administration.

That the President should even have taken the trouble to go to Washington at all is a matter of surprise to some. He might just as well have sent his address by mail for all the good his presence, or absence, has done. It reminds many of his experience in the days of the war, when discretion was the better part of valor. If there was ever a time when the actual Presidential form might be expected to carry weight, it would be at a time like this, with the country in the throes of financial disaster, for credit is not likely to become re-established by a vision of the head of the nation running away from office seekers. When Mr. Cleveland accepted the nomination he knew full well he would be surrounded by hordes of hungry politicians anxious to draw national pay. That goes with the Presidential salary. But it was not expected that he would leave the country in a deplorable condition and at the mercy of a "wild team."

It is doubtful, though, whether Mr. Cleveland or any member of his cabinet could devise means of relief to the nation. Not one of them is a business man or a financier, unless it be Secretary Lamont, who has had more real business experience with his New York car lines than all the rest of the cabinet combined. The President and Postmaster General are lawyers, Mr. Morton is a farmer, Mr. Gresham and Mr. Carlisle have been politicians all their lives, while Hoke Smith's business wisdom is limited to depriving maimed and crippled veterans of their well earned pensions. As for actual business experience or knowledge of financiering, the whole team is lamentably deficient. Perhaps, therefore, it is well that they have not attempted to add to the existing Congressional muddle and thus make confusion worse confounded.—Of a truth, the first gathering of a free trade Congress has not been calculated to inspire confidence among the people, unless indeed they are purblind. The next political Ides of March should effectually obliterate the party.—American Economist.

If Ben had Pressed the Button.

J. W. C. Springton, correspondent American Protective Tariff League writes as follows to the editor of the American Economist:

A retrospect of the last few months suggests some things for serious reflection.

It was a great event in the annals of this country when Grover Cleveland "pressed the button," on May 1 last, which set in motion the grandest display of mechanical ingenuity the world ever saw.

So far as the great engines were concerned, it made no difference whose finger "pressed the button," but the people begin to realize that, so far as the financial success of the fair is concerned, it makes a vast difference who "pressed the button." "If Ben had pressed the button" it would have been worth at least $6,000,000 more to the fair than is in sight now.

"If Ben had pressed the button" prosperity would have continued, and the country would have been better off by at least $500,000,000 which is a low estimate of what we have already lost through distrust and a lack of confidence in the party of the man who did "press the button."

Add to this the further losses that must accrue through meddlesome tariff tinkering and it is hard to estimate what we would have saved "if Ben had pressed the button." Illinois with her Altgeld and Chicago with her fair a financial failure begin to realize what they would have saved in money and reputation "if Ben had pressed the button."

Laboring people, a large majority of whom were lured away by demagogues last fall to vote against their interests begin to realize that they might have saved some money to see the World's Fair and procure the necessaries of life "if Ben had pressed the button." They begin to wish that he could press the button now that would let loose the life giving current of prosperity and start the dead wheels of our languishing industries. But they voted for Grover to "press the button" and they have their reward in loss of employment, with grim-visaged want dogging their footsteps.

The farmer who wanted a change might now be getting at least 70 cents a bushel for his wheat instead of 35 cents, "if Ben had pressed the button."

The old soldier might now be feeling secure in the pension given him by a grateful country through the Republican party "if Ben had pressed the button."

Hundreds of bankers who voted for Grover are reaping their reward in broken banks and shrinking assets, which would have been worth millions more than they are "if Ben had pressed the button."

Debtors who had excellent prospects before them for liquidation or easy terms of extension of their obligations find every avenue of escape closed which might have remained open "if Ben had pressed the button."

American manufacturing enterprises would have remained open, giving employment to American workmen, instead of to foreigners, "if Ben had pressed the button."

English manufacturing enterprises would not have started up so promptly as they have "if Ben had pressed the button."

The balance of trade would not be so enormously against us "if Ben had pressed the button."

The wool growers who were caught with the chaff of David A. Wells and the N. Y. World showing how free wool would bring the farmer more and at the same time cost the manufacturer less, would not now be taking 30 to 40 per cent. less for their wool and kicking themselves for a lot of blankety-blank idiots "if Ben had pressed the button."

To make a long story short, we would know "where we are at" "if Ben had pressed the button."

Confidence and prosperity will return only when William McKinley "presses the button" and starts the wheels of progress.

To the World's Fair via B. & O.

The B. & O. R. R. offers a more complete and varied train service to Chicago than is offered by any other line. It has two daily express trains running via Cumberland and Pittsburg, two running via Deer Park, Oakland and Bellaire and two running via Cincinnati and Indianapolis. Round trip excursion tickets at $26 are sold for all these trains, and passengers can go one way and return the other. Tickets at the same rate are good going via Niagara Falls.—These excursion tickets will be honored on all B. & O. trains, without exception and without extra fare, until the close of the Exposition and they are good for stop over privileges at Deer Park, Oakland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Niagara Falls.
