CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.

REGULAR WEEKLY LETTER FROM W. D. B. AT FAIR GROUNDS.

Savage rites of savage men chilled the blood of 10,000 persons on the eastern bank of the south pond Thursday night. Four Quackahl Indians on a float fifty feet from the bank went through a performance which will last as long as memory in the minds of those who witnessed it. The Indians, with heavy twine strings fastened through slits in their bare backs, raced around the narrow platform driven by two other Indians who seemed to take a wild pleasure in the act. Little rivulets of blood trickled from the cuts down the bronzed backs. Around and around they ran, leaping, twisting and diving till it seemed to the horror spectators that each instant would see the flesh torn from the body. Then came the acme of savage enjoyment. Two sturdy natives stepped out from the crowd that borded the edge of the float. Advancing, each siezed one of the men who had been subjected to torture. The drivers braced themselves for a strain. Great ridges of flesh stood out on the backs of the Indians. Fresh jets of blood spurted in red streaks. The flickering red light cast an unearthly shadow on the grewsome scene. Women on the shore shut their eyes while men turned away their heads.

Then came another sharp pull from the drivers and another wrench by the men who were holding their comrades. It was more than even an Indian's stoical nature could stand and a low moan escaped the lips of the tortured. Meanwhile a circle of old women and medicine men surrounded the wreathing, struggling four. The steady drone of the tomtoms, the shrill rattle of gourds and the monotonous chant which told of valliant deeds in war and the chase incited the braves to further effort. At last it was done. One final tear and the cords gave way while the released flesh fell back into its normal position.

Freed from the torture, one of the men seemed to go wild. A heavy native rope was twined under his arms and about his shoulders, and he continued the dance. Ever with him one of his friends held the thongs which bound him. At times he would make desperate efforts to free himself. Grinding his teeth and emitting guttural growls, he sprung at everything within reach. Then another friend came to help hold the fanatic, who by this time was beside himself. The combined strength of his captors sufficed to keep him quiet for a time, but he was only husbanding his strength for a last effort. His opportunity came soon. Seizing a favorable moment he broke away and with a single bound reached the interpreter, George Hunt, who was standing at one side. Before the Quackahl could be restrained he had sunk his teeth deep into Hunt's arm. He held on until a number of Indians pulled him away. This act seemed to pacify the dancer and he became quiet.

The torture or sun dance was originally devised to test the courage of young braves who desired to go on the war path. It is to be regretted however, that the World's Fair directors permit such barbarous performances to be given within the fair's enclosure. Torture dances are given every night on the plaisance and should be stopped at once.

For the first time since the fair was opened the south side of the grounds Thursday night had its share of illumination. Thousands of gay-colored chinese lanterns swung from trees and posts around the anthropological building. The caravels kept open house. From every part of their rigging hung many colored lights. The yard arms and short masts were resplendent with brightness and a band stationed near at hand discoursed music during the evening. Illuminated launches floated in the south pond and on either side were life and color. Every Thursday evening hereafter the south side will be illuminated, and it is the purpose of Mr. Millet and his associates to make the "back yard" of the grounds as attractive as any other portion of Jackson park.

An interesting feature of last Thursday evening's entertainment was a Soudanese sword dance. Five Bedouins from the desert of Sahara took part in it. They were led by an old sheik, Prince Meeroali Haafoosh, who in his own country is the ruler of a large tribe. Mock duels were given with some brilliant passages at arms. The weapons were Arabian cimeters. With lightning rapidity the Bedouins whirled their swords above their heads and around their bodies until the burnished steel appeared as a circle of light. In one of the performances the Sheik defended himself against the combined attacks of his four companions. Beset on all sides and with only his rawhide shield as a guard, he easily kept his assailants at bay and finally beat them back, defeated. Another new feature introduced was a series of plantation melodies sung by the J. Augustus Caroline Jubilee society, consisting of ten colored performers. Their music was appreciated by the crowd and they were frequently encored.

Suggestions Contained in the Popular Summer Guide Book of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Complimented by the press and indorsed by tourists and practical travelers, the Summer Excursion book of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company of this year's issue has become, in consequence of these recommendations and its own real worth, a most highly-prized compilation. The many and diversified routes, including every road of prominence within the great summer belt of Eastern United States, offer those contemplating an early fall trip an opportunity of choosing new and interesting means of reaching their destinations. A list of hotels is appended to each resort, which it is self evident adds materially to the value.

The month of September being probably the finest month in the year in which to travel, an increased demand for this graphic production has become noticeable, and that all may avail themselves of the manifold advantages to be derived from an inspection of its plain and concise yet elegant and complete descriptions of a thousand places within a radius of a thousand miles, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's Passenger Department will mail the book mentioned to any address upon receipt of 20 cents in stamps. A nominal sum merely, with cost of postage added. Copies may also be obtained from Ticket Agents of the company.

A Puzzler.

A man walks around a pole on which is a monkey. As the man moves the monkey turns round on the top of the pole so as still to keep face to face with the man. Query—When the man has gone round the pole, has he or has he not gone round the monkey?

The answer which will occur at first sight to most persons is that the man has not gone round the monkey, since he has never been behind it. The correct answer, however, is that the man has gone round the monkey in going round the pole.

We want a boy in every town in the United States to sell single copies of the SATURDAY BLADE and CHICAGO LEDGER. The papers are readily sold in every shop, store, factory, on the street, to farmers, at home, and to strangers who are in town. Any hustling boy can start out and sell these bright illustrated papers to almost any one, and can get regular customers to buy every number as fast as it is received. They are the easiest selling papers published, as agents testify.

The papers sell for 5 cents a copy. The boy sends us 3 cents for each copy he sells, and keeps the other 2 cents for himself. It costs nothing for the boy to start in business, and he runs no risk of having papers left on his hands, as we take back all unsold copies. Not only boys make good agents, but girls, and invalids, or those who cannot do hard work—Every one who wishes to make money should apply for an agency. To any one who will secure us an agent to handle the papers regularly, we will give a copy free as long as the agent thus obtained sells the paper in the town for which he was appointed. There is a boy in every town who would be glad of the opportunity to make money in this way, and we ask those interested in boys to send in the name of some bright hustling lad who will agree to take hold of the business. The SATURDAY BLADE is dated and sold on SATURDAY, and the CHICAGO LEDGER on Wednesday. The BLADE is a newspaper, fully illustrated. The LEDGER is a family story paper, also fully illustrated by our own artists. The great popularity of these papers is fully attested by their immense circulation. The average weekly circulation of the SATURDAY BLADE is 275,000 copies, and that of the CHICAGO LEDGER 140,000 copies. Certainly no stronger proof of their selling qualities could be asked; and nearly all these hundreds of thousands of copies are sold by boys. The BLADE is the wonder of the newspaper world, and the LEDGER is close after it.
