From The Baltimore American.

CLEVELAND AND JACKSON.

When Mr. Cleveland was nominated at Chicago, The American expressed the opinion that it would result in the disorganization of the Democratic party. This view was reiterated many times during the campaign and after the election of the President, and some of the leading journals in other cities are confirming it. Among the latter are papers which have given the most ardent support to the President. They concede, with great reluctance, that the Democratic party after a great victory, is on the verge of dissolution, and they might add if they could analyze themselves, that they have contributed materially to its undoing. Whatever may be the President's qualifications as a statesman, he is not now, and never has been, in touch with the bulk of his party on the most important of all public questions, and he has lately attempted to impose his will upon the party in a manner which has created a feeling of deep resentment.

There are two ways of dominating or domineering, but only one of these is likely to be successful. Cleveland has often been compared to Andrew Jackson, but there is really no more likeness between the two men than there is between a racehorse and a percheron. Jackson was a popular military hero, who had hewn his way to distinction with his naked sword. He was domineering, but he was as open as the daylight, and bluff and companionable, while Cleveland lives within himself more than any president who has occupied the White House. He conveys the impression to his party that it must follow a certain policy because he approves of it, while Jackson would slap his followers on the back—tell them they must do a thing because it was necessary, being "hail fellow well met" with them at the very time he was driving them to do something of which some of them did not altogether approve. Cleveland, moreover, was forced on the majority of the party by the minority, while Jackson had the almost unique power of arousing wild enthusiasm all along the line, from the generals to the privates in the rear ranks.

Jackson would never have been guilty of the indiscretion of sending a telegram of congratulations for legislation which he had to approve, and of which the majority of his party disapproved; but he might have stormed at the leaders in private, and sent them back to the Captiol to do what he wanted, and they would have done it and gloried in it afterwards, no matter how bitter would have been the pill in the beginning. Nor would Jackson have condescended to load a legislator down with patronage to secure his adhesion to a course which, in the judgment of the latter, was wrong, or which his entire public record condemned. Jackson solidified his party, and made it fearless and aggressive; while Cleveland thus far has succeeded only in intensifying the bitterness of faction, and has made it well nigh impossible for its warring divisions to unite upon a basis that will meet the approval of the country. Cleveland is to the free silverites—who form a majority of the democratic party—an opponent who must be fought relentlessly, rather than a leader like Jackson, who might be occasionally tyrannical, but who could always rally his followers enthusiastically to his support in an emergency, and who was never more beloved than when he was flourishing his cane over them and branding them with all sorts of maledictions.

The American sees no reason to alter the opinion that the democratic party under Cleveland is hopelessly disorganized.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, Sept. 18, 1893.

A majority of the democrats in Congress are very near to being in open revolt against Mr. Cleveland, and unless that gentleman displays a more conciliatory disposition there may be a permanent split in the democratic party in the very near future. The straw which has almost broken the back of the democratic animal is Mr. Cleveland's opposition to the taking up of the bill for repeal of the Federal Election laws by the House, until after the Senate disposes of the silver repeal bill. It is said that Mr. Cleveland spoke in most dictatorial manner to Speaker Crisp because of his having consented that this bill should be reported to the House without having first obtained permission, and Mr. Crisp got nettled and told him he was under the impression that the President was at the head of the Executive not the Legislative branch of the government. Well, he wants to be at the head of them all, and he is openly accused by democrats with having influenced democratic members of the House to stay away in order to break a quorum. Whether he did or not it is certain that the democrats tried in vain to get a quorum for three days last week. To-day is a holiday, on account of the centennial celebration of the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol building, and it remains to be seen whether there will be a quorum of democrats in the House tomorrow. The republicans very naturally decline to assist in making a quorum of the House for any such purpose.

The condition of the Senate is practically unchanged. Senator Vorhees, although he knows that a majority of the Senators—49 Senators are claimed, and the claim is undisputed—will vote for his repeal bill if it can be got to a vote, is afraid to attempt to force the fight, although he continues to threaten to do so. There is only one way to force the bill to a vote, and that is to keep the Senate continually in session with a quorum—43 Senators—always on the floor until the opposition becomes sufficiently worn out to consent to a vote; but Senator Vorhees does not feel certain that he can do that for the very good reason that a number of Senators who are willing to vote for repeal have said that they would not consider it their duty to remain continuously on the floor in order to force a vote. Then, there is another side to this question of endurance. Enough of the repealers may become worn out to enable the silver men to vote down the bill or to amend it to suit themselves. It is no childs play either way you look at it, and, whatever may be the opinion of outsiders, every Senator fully realizes the seriousness of the situation.

The principal reason why Mr. Cleveland does not wish the House to start the acrimoneous debate that is certain to follow the taking up of the bill for the repeal of the Federal election law is that he realizes the necessity of having the active assistance of republican Senators if the Vorhees bill is to be passed, and fears that assistance may be lost through the abuse of republicans in the House.—And there are good and sufficient grounds for his fear. Not that anything any democrat could say would change the vote of any republican Senator who upon principle favors the repeal bill, but that it might result in causing some of them to absent themselves at a critical period, which might result in the defeat of the bill. Take it all in all the democrats, split in half on the silver question, occupy a very ticklish position. The southern Senators are constantly hearing of populist gains at their homes, and it begins to look as though the repeal of the purchasing clause of the silver law might accomplish one very desirable thing—a break up of the solid South—if the repeal itself can be accomplished.

Today there is a flag of truce flying, so to speak, and the President, the Cabinet and Congress are helping the people to celebrate the centennial of the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol. The celebration is a great success, the plaza facing the east front of the Capitol being packed with something like 200,000 people to listen to the speaking, music and the grand chorus of 1500 voices, which have been in training for months. The President made the speech introducing Mr. William Wirt Henry, of Va., the principal orator; the Vice President spoke for the Senate; Speaker Crisp for the House of Representatives; Justice Brown of the Supreme court, for the Judiciary, and Commissioner Parker for the District of Columbia.

Senator Cullom's resolution to investigate the dogging of pensioners at their homes by government detectives, for the purpose of obtaining admissions to be used as evidence to reduce their pensions or to entirely deprive them of them, which was offered several days ago, has aroused much indignation in Congress against the pension methods of the administration, some of it among democrats. The resolution will be heard from again.

The Mail Order Department of a great metropolitan Dry Goods House is one of the greatest conveniences of the times. Long ago we recognized this fact and for years our best efforts have been devoted to strengthening and perfecting this branch of which we have built up at Market and Eighth Streets, Philadelphia.

The Great Dry Goods Business

By this comprehensive system—complete in every detail—the choice of our extensive stock is brought alike to the most distant buyer and to those living near at hand.

Orders sent by mail will be filled by our corps of skilled clerks carefully, promptly and economically, and with the same attention to the interests of our customers as though the goods were bought in person at our counters.

Write for Samples, and Illustrated Catalogues of the stocks. They will be forwarded to any address by return mail.

ATTENTION FARMERS.

WE ARE IN THE FIELD THIS SEASON with the best and most complete assortment of Implements and Machinery ever offered on the Eastern Shore. First come Plows, and the "Bissell" leads them all in lightness of draft and best work in all conditions of land. Next comes the "Oliver" pattern plow manufactured by Bissell, which is, we claim, superior to any Oliver sold; this plow we have sold a great many of during the past and present season and can give a host of references supporting our claim. Lastly comes the "Advance," which is too well known to need any comments. Of the Harrows we are selling the complete line made by D. M. Osborne & Co., including Spring Tooth, Spike Tooth; and Disc—the Spring Tooth especially being the grandest thing of its kind ever put on the market. One of them last winter sold at a sale for $16 which was within $2 of what it cost originally, the bidding having commenced at $10.

In Corn Planters we have the U. S. Combined Check Row Corn Planter. This Planter uses a plunger direct from the check row rod to the rotary seed plates and does away with all the shakebar and center irons between the seed boxes. A single pin spring anchor is furnished with the U. S., and with their use the wire can be drawn the same tension at each end of the field, thereby insuring great accuracy in planting.

Our Sulky Cultivator is the "Akron," which is already at the top of the heap both as a cultivator and as a hallow worker.

We are still selling the Osborne Binders and Mowers, which are most reliable, and also the Empire Binders and Mowers, which are new to this section, but have more good points than any machine ever sold.

Farm Wagons—We are handling the "Jackson" and "Auburn." The Jackson is the old Webster ver much improved and no one should think of buying a wagon without seeing them. To continue to enumerate all the good things that we have would take up so much of your time that we will cease with the assurance that no matter what you may want we believe we can suit you from a shoe peg to a traction engine.

P. S.—Barb Wire is lower than ever before. Do you need some? We have a large supply.
