The Lowest Rate of the Year to Chicago via Pennsylvania Railroad.

A FURTHER REDUCTION IN FARE FOR THE COACH EXCURSIONS.

The rapidly approaching termination of the Columbian Exposition and the enormous travel now directing itself to Chicago prompt the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to still further reduce its round trip rate on the popular World's Fair Coach Excursions. The rate from Philadelphia will be $17, and a proportionate reduction from other points along the main line and branches. These rates apply only to special trains leaving on September 28th, October 2d and an additional one just arranged for October 6th. The tickets will as before, be good for return passage within ten days on trains leaving Chicago at 3.15 and 11.30 P. M.

The rate has now reached the lowest possible point, and is in the means of almost every one, which end the railroad company has long been endeavoring to attain. Early application for tickets is urged, in view of the increased demand which will undoubtedly follow this liberal announcement.

The service for this travel will be maintained at the same standard for which the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is justly world-wide famous.

Stray Items caught and reported for The Gazette by "Gosh."

The year 1893 bids fair to be long remembered. Its record thus far has been a remarkable one. When ushered in by Father Time, it was fair to look upon, merry greetings and merry makings marked its joyous advent. What a change a few short months have made! What a multitude of wrecks appear, men whose wealth had long excited envy, whose credit and standing in the world of finance were unquestioned, saw their fortunes vanish with a quickness which shamed magic. They did not disappear in a night but in a moment. At noon came a rumor—an assignment followed and before the sun had set the gaunt spectre or bankruptcy had appeared. Men stood confounded, crazed with grief, overborne with sorrow. Ruin had dropped from a sunny sky. Anything so universal in its scope, so injurious in its effects, cannot soon be forgotten. No spot was too remote for this financial storm to reach and few too isolated to be affected by its breath. This panic should teach the ever needed lesson of the uncertainty which attaches to earthly things. To-day we have them, tomorrow gone we know not how or where. Rev. Walter E. Avery of this town brought out some practical truths and facts on this subject in his sermons on "National Perils" They were grand good sermons and attracted to his church people of all denominations who quite filled the church. Mr. Avery, during the course of his sermon, pointed out the similarity of the situation of this country now with that of France just prior to the French Revolution. Many edifying points were brought out, and surely the attendance and interest manifested would justify the continuance of the subject.

Speaking of laughable incidents, let's take Mr. —— ——, a popular young salesman in one of the many mercantile palaces on Washington street, It happened that Mr. —— was fulfilling the pleasing duty of extending a call. It is not known whether it was on account of the bottle of Hygeia water that accompanied him, but any rate he dozed off in to a profound slumber in the very midst of conversation. No one knows what a propensity the gentleman has for slumbering unless one is well acquainted with him. It seems to be his second nature. How long he would have been in the land of nod no one can tell but when some one made the innocent remark that it was a marvel how much quicker the time passed from eight to twelve in the morning than the corresponding time in the evening. Mr. —— awoke very suddenly. In fact it was remarkable. No one had ever seen him display such alacrity before. With one bound he cleared the room, secured his hat and was seen to descend the stairs six at a time. He could not be induced to decrease his speed until he reached a drug store, arriving there he ordered soda water. It was not not until after all these preliminaries had been gone through that he spoke, and all he managed to say that was intelligible for some time was 'eight to twelve' in a subdued, doleful manner.

This week will probably close the canning industry in Talbot county for this year. In the past few years this industry has grown to very large proportions, new factories having been built all over the county and the old ones have made large additions. One of the largest, Mr. Chas. T. Wrightson's, near the P. W. & B. R. R. depot. Mr. Wrightson has run his factory on a larger scale than ever before. Tomatoes and corn have been the principal things put up this year. About 100 regular hands are employed, in addition to which may be added about 150 peelers, 10 pickers, and box makers, and lablers. The average number of cans put up in a day range from 35,000 to 40,000.

A very amusing affair, which has been vainly attempted to smother, is said to have occurred at a camp meeting in an adjoining county, which is entirely familiar to Easton people. An elderly coupe who attended the meeting took along a bottle of oil as a defense against mosquitoes. They neglected to use it on retiring for the night, but the merry little insects reminded them of it before long, and the lady got up in the darkness to fumble through their baggage for it. It was found, as she thought, and, still in the dark, they rubbed it over their faces, necks and hands, and then tried to sleep. It seemed to afford them little protection, and after vainly trying for a long time to go to sleep the old lady forsook her bed and made a light. On looking around she was horrified to see a black man snoring on the floor. Furious at the sight, she seized her husband's cane and attacked him with all her might. The first blow awoke him and he started up, amazed to see a negress thrashing him with a stick. He jumped up, snatched the stick from her and was just about to lay it on her soundly, when she called for help, and he recognized her voice. She had gotten hold of the ink bottle instead of the oil. A number of people aroused by her cry, came in on them to see what was the matter, and when it was explained everybody enjoyed it so much that as soon as it was light the old folks went home in high dudgeon.

One can hear any number of amusing things on our streets or in other public places. Last Saturday I was standing in the Market House when a lady hurried past me to greet another lady. After a short unintelligible (to me) conversation in which kisses and "my fall dress" and "your bonnet" predominated, the first mentioned lady, noticing a fish in her friend's basket, remarked that she would buy one too if she knew how to cook it, Her friend immediately began to supply the lacking knowledge. She began, "First you take the fish and wash it well, and then—" "How absurd!" interruped the first lady, "Just fancy having to wash a fish, and after it has spent its life in the water too." O! woman, woman!

The Avon Cycle Club has decided to hold its first annual racing contest on next Monday week. Mr. Dunham has kindly tendered the use of the track at Ashby Stock Farm for the purpose, which has been accepted. It is thought that about twelve contestants will race, and possibly more. No admission will be charged and it is hoped that our citizens will turn out in a body to encourage the boys. A beautiful silver medal will be presented to the winner. The Thursday following the race a public meeting will be held in the club headquarters and the medal presented. A number of speeches are down on the program for the evening. All will be welcome. ## CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.

Regular Weekly Letter From W.D.B. at the Fair Grounds.

It is now settled beyond all hope of alteration that the fair will be shut for good at midnight Oct. 30th. This decision was reached at the executive committee meeting Monday evening. There was not a dissenting voice when the question was put to a vote. Too many obstacles lay in the way of a prolongation of the fair. Foreigners are anxious to go home and it would have been almost impossible to hold them or their exhibits after the natural expiration of the exposition period. The uncertainty of the matter, too, was another ruling element. No provisions have been made for keeping the immense buildings heated during the winter season. At the first heavy cold snap they would have been uninhabitable. These and many other reasons induced the executive committee not to extend the fair period. There is no doubt the action of the committee will be endorsed by the local directory.

Director General Davis' order to stop the "barking" of the Plaisance fakes was prolific of many humorous incidents, but the shouting had been stopped. At first the "barkers" were inclined to rebel, also the concessionaries, but they were called down. One of the men thought that if his barkers couldn't talk outside their show they would inside and he started him at it, but a Columbian guard came along and took the orator to the station, where he was lectured and let go. After that lesson the news spread among the side show men that it would not be safe to talk out loud so they started in on a new track. Mounting a chair outside they began to go through a series of gesticulations that would do credit to a dutch wind-mill in a gale. Arms were flung around, canes waved, umbrellas opened but not a word was spoken. The crowd did not know what to make of it. The silence order was unknown to them. They gazed on the men and wondered if they were lunatics or wild men. Many comments were made and the Columbian guards were pestered with questions. They became the advertisers themselves, for every second man asked them what ailed the gesticulating individuals, and according to their instructions to answer all questions civily, they had to tell. A plaisance crowd soon accommodates itself to anything new, and the gesticulators became as successful as the deposed shouters.

A collection of musical instruments said to bespeak the origin and the gradual development of the modern musical instruments is encased in a long row of cabinets in a little room to the left of the south entrance to the Government building. In this room and the one across the vestibule, neglected by most sight seers, are some of the rarest treasures of the Smithsonian institution. Trophies of science, literature and the arts are mingled together.

The little room on the left, beside the collection of instruments typifying the development of music, contains an exhibit illustrating the progress of the graphic arts from the fifteenth to the nineteenth century.

From a musical standpoint the babies of today rate with old and hoary Egyptian dervishes, who took delight in the rattle. The ancient Hindoos had rattles made of gourds, fantastically decorated with mythological Hindoo beings. The cultured Syrians made theirs of wood and so did the African tribes of the lower Congo. Gourds were used by the Mojaves and the other tribes of American Indians from the Haidas of British Columbia to the Mokis, who lived in the adobe pueblo of Tesuque in New Mexico. Some of the Soudanes made rattles of bones, and after awhile some of the tribes of Mexico learned from the Aztecs to make them of metals. And from this lesson the bell was evolved.

About the time of the Italian inquisition a widely known instrument of music was the capelloo, dubbed the "ingling Johnnie" by the English. This was a curious affair and was many stages advanced over the rattles of the uncivilized tribes of Indians and the ancient Hindoos. The first forms of the instruments in the classification are the self-vibrating instruments. Under this head come with the rattles, drums, tambooines, cymbals, gongs, castanets and "bones." In the "rattling" epoch gongs added to the din. Rubber rattles, made for easy mastication by infant prodigies, are later day improvements on the old-time musical instruments. The Nubians in their processions clanged iron gongs and sounded their triumph. The Hindoos in their religious rights used the mandira—cymbals in the form of metal cups. The oriental trophies in the exhibit were presented to the Government by the Rajah Sourindo Mohun.

Along with the cymbals came the improvement on the rattle—strings of bells. The cymbals of the Chinese were larger than those of the other orientals and made of thin sheets of brass. Castanets found their way into Spain through the Moorish hosts and come from Syria. The Chinese evidently had a monopoly on gongs. The pang, the ta ting and the lo were different styles on the gong. The conch of Africa and a Malayan gong made of metal and shaped like an hour glass with heads on both ends were seemingly forerunners of the drum. The lo looked like and is worked on the same principle as a dinner-gong on a railway eating station. The baz of the oriental dervishes was probably the oldest form of a drum. Some of the African drums looked like the barrel of an old-fashioned blunderbuss.

Chimes followed cymbals and came just before the drum and the tambourine. The yunlo of China was a set of chimes, and made of nine metal pans set in a wooden frame and bent with a slender bamboo stick tipped with iron. The beautiful women of Georgia in the Caucasus played the daira, an early form of tambourine and the Chinese made their kous. Shoshone Indians, Siamese, Chinese, Malayan and all sorts of drums are placed together near the center of the cabinet. Some are long and thin, and some are short and thick, and they all have heads made of the skins of animals. The xylophone was long ago used by the Zulu tribes, and the mihambi was an instrument of the same kind used by eastern African tribes. The Indians of Gautemalia played the marimba centuries ago. This instrument is very much like that used by the Gautemalians at the fair. Wooden kegs and gourds of various sizes were used in the manufacture of the marimba. The broadest keg and with the longest attached gourd sounded the lowest pitch, and to the highest pitch the size of the gourd and the width of the keg gradually decreased.

Most of the women who come to the fair are pretty well posted on American history, but not all of them are acquainted with the discoveries of the pre-historic races of moundbuilders and cliff dwellers.

The other day a party emerged from the Cliff-dwellers' exhibit, hot, tired and dusty and full of wrath.

"Why, it's a regular fraud," exclaimed one; "the idea of paying 25 cents to see a few old relics."

"Why, I expected to see some live cliff dwellers." added another, "and they've got nothing but dead ones to show."

"Why of course," assented a third; "I wanted to see how they lived and worked. All the rest of the villages show the people themselves, and they ought to have some live cliff dwellers here. It is'nt a good show at all."

There was no one around to inform the grumblers that a live cliff-dweller had not been seen since Columbus discovered America and if one could be found he would be the greatest curiosity at the World's Fair.

Chicago day at the World's Fair, October 9th, will be celebrated by wiping out the entire dept of the World's Fair Co.—bonded, floating and interest. It will just take a little short of $1,900,000 to do this. Calculations by members of the finance committee have showed that the income of the exposition up to Oct. 9th, added to the funds already in the treasury, will quite reach the required amount After Chicago day the net income of the remaining twenty-one days of the exposition will be devoted to the interest of the stockholders. This net income should average not less than $100,000 a day. The finance committee unanimously recommended that the remaining 30 per cent on the bonded debt of the corporation to be paid on Oct. 9. It is anticipated that the floating debt will be practically wiped out at the same time, thus enabling the corporation to then stand free from dept. The payments to be made include: Interest on the bonds, $230,000; 30 per cent payment on bonds, $1,230,350; floating debt, including running expenses, $325,000.

An International boat parade was given on the lagoon one evening this week. The boats were handsomely lightened and the effect was as pretty as the water reflected the dancing colored lights. Capt. Jimmie Hunt led the way in a yawl, representing a full rigged ship. Following were three chaloupas an Alaskan canoe with Alaskans singing their native songs, and a Klinkit canoe on which the natives were dancing, a birch bark canoe paddled by Indians, two crews from the Andy Johnson, and a dingy with the mariness, a yawl with a band making melody, Ceylonese catamaran, Norwegian fishing-boat and pleasure-boat, Norwegian Hammerfest, a yawl with singing Turks, Turkish caique, a Turkish yawl with the Turkish fire department, the water bicycle, some canvas folding boats, another band in a yawl St. Lawrence skiff, dory, Japanese electric boat, and a couple of yawls. Prizes of $20, $15, $10, and $5, were distributed.

Dahomey Village was opened again Wednesday and a large sign on the outer wall indicated that it would remain open for a few days. Manager Pene, however, said that he and his villagers would remain here until the close of the fair. The village was open at 3 p. m. and the natives were on exhibition but they were a blue-lipped, shivering lot, and the interpreter said that one and all of the Dahomeyans were anxious to get back home.

Except for a half-mile trotting track the World's Fair is now complete and right up to the standard of any fair in the United States. All summer long there have been wanting a prize squash. The squash is now here. It came from Canada. With it came a mammoth pumpkin. Folkes who come from Posey county to the fair today cannot possibly go home disappointed. That squash is some pumpkins of a squash. It is in horticultural hall. It was grown in Goderich, in Onterio, and it weighs just 486 pounds. It is 10 feet 1 inch in circumference and stands 3 feet 7 in. high. As for the pumpkin, it weighs 146 lbs. Canada is almost as proud of it as of the eleven-ton cheese.

Be entered to your credit;
But if it stands the other way
You have good cause to dread it.

Let him who can expound it—
By careless ones 'tis often lost,
But none has ever found it.
