"GOSH" ON THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Stray Items caught and reported for The Gazette by "Gosh."

To those who have visited the aggregation known as the World's Fair no description is necessary and certainly no brief one could do it justice in the estimation of those who have examined it in detail. If the great stretch of ground it occupies had been turned over to a landscape gardner with permission to expend whatever sums were necessary to beautify it with walks, drives, canals, lakes, fountains, flowers, etc., it would have been worth while to travel a distance to see the spot where art had done its utmost to improve nature's work of splendid grounds, sandy beach and charming views of Lake Michigan. The landscape artist did put in his work lavishly and well but his was followed and supplemented by that of engineer and architect and these historic grounds are studded with structures which challenge and receive the admiration of the master builders from all parts of the world. It is true that much of the material is cheap and perishable and that the hand of the workman must be busily employed covering a crack here and mending a joint there, that paint and putty are in constant demand to cover deformities, but the fact remains that with cheap and inexpensive material buildings have been hastily put up which in scenic effect compare favorably with the marble palaces of the old world. The buildings are not only beautiful but their vastness lends a grandeur to their appearance which, if it does not charm, yet disarms criticism. Huge as they are one does not fully appreciate their immensity until going within and looking down the long aisle avenues which seemingly converge before reaching the opposite entrance. Friends are utterly unable to distinguish each other from opposite ends and it would require a loud halloo to be heard from extremes—Last month Messrs. Cortland Roe, Clayland Mullikin and John Jump of this town, spent ten days at the Fair together, but never saw a single person that they knew, and there were over forty people from Easton and vicinity in attendance at the Fair at that time.—But the most wonderful thing is the dizzy height to which those slender steel arches reach.—Hundreds of feet above one's head they rise and hold in rigid grasp the acres of glass which form the crystal roof. Marvelous as the externals, the internal arrangements are scarcely less interesting. No one can form an adequate conception of the size of this august exhibition until they take a careful and persistent survey of some of the great structures which form it. Multiplying its wonders by the number of buildings and computing the vast amount of material and labor required to produce it one is then prepared to appreciate this triumph of genius and skill. About 50 residents of Easton and vicinity are in attendance this week. Among those from Easton are Rev. and Mrs. Avery; Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Turner and son, Henry; T. A. Councell; Miss Mary Gibson; Ed. Nicols; Wilfred Bateman and others. Among those who will go next week are J. H. K. Shannahan, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shannahan, Father T. F. Waldron. Among those who will not start at all is your correspondent.

After the "millennium," when the earth shall have been reconverted into Eden, there will still exist, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that species of the human kind called "the grumbler." Experience has taught that he is interminable. St. Michaels has, for the past three years, received one of the county prize scholarships. That is a cause for congratulation. But this year the hand of Fate gently interferes with this usual order of things and presents the Western Maryland College scholarship to the other little village, Trappe, and St. Michaels forthwith sets up a howl—like the little dog who puts his tail under him and sits down to howl at the new moon. A correspondent from St. Michaels wants "to know why things are thus." Well you see, you 'er 'him, not in it, but my dear St. Mike don't be like the sea sick man who wanted the earth.

In all small communities there are a number of "Sir Oracles" who, when they open their mouths, insist that no dog shall bark, and of course these prodigies take entirely different views of expediency in matters of newspaper publication. Where, for instance, something had developed in a neighborhood, a theft by a highly respected person, A insists that all the details shall be published; B, that they shall be suppressed; C is of the opinion that a newspaper which is afraid to give the news is unworthy of the name; while D comes out with a strong hint that if such is to be inserted he will have no other resource than to stop his paper and recommend his friends to do the same. So you see, dear readers, the path of journalism is by no means flowery.

Every since H. M. S. Pinafore sailed from this port the people have had no amusement in the theatrical line, and consequently there is an aching void in the hearts of all who visited this trim little ship, that nothing will console them but a speedy return. Not even two circuses of "the greatest show on earth" variety can satisfy us. Thanksgiving evening will be a splendid time to reproduce this delightful opera, and a crowded house will surely welcome it.

I have heard a rumor, and a vague one 'tis true, to the effect that the Rev. Dr. Talmage, perhaps the greatest pulpit orator of the nineteenth century, will be in Easton this winter. This will enable our people to see and hear this remarkable man whose sermons are read all over the world with consuming eagerness. Rumor also has it that it will be through the agency of the Rev. C. D. Harris that Dr. Talmage will visit us. And, I might add, in the interest of the M. E. Church. South, which is gradually assuming proportions.

The county jail was the scene of great excitement last Saturday evening shortly after nine o'clock. It appears that the whole cause of the trouble was one Jim Dickison, a resident of Cowgletown, and who insists that even if his skin is black he's a gentleman.—Therefore his refined temperment revolted when he was forced into the congenial society of the other prisoners. He is insane and is subject to violent fits. On Saturday evening the Sheriff went to the gate enclosing the jail with another prisoner and found Jim standing at the gate. On being told to go back to his cell he refused and said that as soon as the gate was opened he would rush out. The sheriff went for help and when he returned he found Jim armed with two huge lumps of coal. He threatened to hurl the coal at the first man who advanced. Constable Lockerman boldly went in and pushed Jim, his refined instincts, rebelliousness and all, down three or four stairs. Great was the fall of this black Anthony. He says now that the reason he remains at the jail is not because he loves the jail less but the sheriff more.

The Avon Cycle Club will have the club races on Monday afternoon at 2 30 o'clock at Ashby Stock Farm. It will be an occasion of the liveliest interest and it is hoped the people will attend the races in crowds. No admission will be charged and a large crowd will greatly encourage the boys. The contest promises to be an exciting one as a number of the contestants are very evenly matched. Come out every one. GOSH,

The Lowest Rate of the year to Chicago via Pennsylvania Railroad.

A FURTHER REDUCTION IN FARE FOR THE COACH EXCURSIONS.

The rapidly approaching termination of the Columbian Exposition and the enormous travel now directing itself to Chicago prompt the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to still further reduce its round trip rate on the popular World's Fair Coach Excursions. The rate from Philadelphia will be $17, and a proportionate reduction from other points along the main line and branches. These rates apply only to special trains leaving on September 28th, October 2d and an additional one just arranged for October 6th. The tickets will as before, be good for return passage within ten days on trains leaving Chicago at 3.15 and 11.20 P. M.

The rate has now reached the lowest possible point, and is in the means of almost every one, which end the railroad company has long been endeavoring to attain. Early application for tickets is urged, in view of the increased demand which will undoubtedly follow this liberal announcement.

The service for this travel will be maintained at the same standard for which the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is justly world-wide famous.

Destructive Fires.—Quite a destructive fire occurred about four o'clock Tuesday morning at "Woodstock," the farm of Col. Oswald Tilghman, about four miles from Easton. The barn, the stables and sheds, with nine head of horses, two head of cattle, a fine coach, two self-binders, a hundred bushels of wheat, four tons of fertilizer, a large amount of hay and other provender stored away for the winter, and a large number of farming implements were burned. Everything except the buildings and the coach belonging to Thos. E. Price, Colonel Tilghman's tenant. His loss, perhaps, is $3,000, no part of which was covered by insurance. Col. Tilghman's loss is about $2,000, but he was insured. Mr. Price supposes that a tramp spent a night in the barn, and in leaving accidentally fired the building while lighting his pipe.

At two o'clock the same morning the sawmill of E. C. Stoops near Cordova, was burned. As the mill was running full blast, a spark from the engine may have been the cause of the fire, but Mr. Stoops thinks that the fire had an incendiary origin. Loss $275. No insurance.

Personals.—Mr. Daniel Montague and son Bennie returned Monday night from a very pleasant visit with Mr. T. Walton Montague in Philadelphia.

Miss Bessie Kennard spent Saturday and Sunday at Poplar Grove.

Mr. B. F. Ford of Philadelphia is visiting his father Mr. M. R. Ford on Dover road.

Miss Anna Taylor left this week to spend some weeks with her sister, Mrs. Erwin of North Carolina.

Prof. Chaplain has had his hands full the past three weeks with attending to his duties in Talbot and at same time starting colored Normal School of Baltimore.

Chas. E. Shannahan is preparing to open a law office on St. Paul street, Baltimore. Mr. Shannahan is a prominent attorney of this town of long standing, and is well known in Balto.

J. Dukes Downes of Denton is announced to wed Miss Merrick of Kent county on the 18. Mr. Downes is the popular teller in the Denton National Bank and son of Col. Phil Downes, president of same bank.

Miss Jessie V. Kerr of Denton is visiting friends in Easton.

Norman Smithers has returned from the World's Fair, and gone to the Maryland University to complete his studies in dentistry and medicine.

A Year 21 Years.—Mr. Editor: Permit me to join with you and your patrons in shouting. All hail to Easton Md, and her citizens. Great have been the improvements in architecture adornment of residences and social upbuilding within the last 21 years. It is true much change has been made as the blasts of time whirled down these streets, but amid all, the old Gazette still stands. Prosperity attend you!

Caroline County's Court House.—Edward E. Gosiin, forman of the grand jury, presented a report recommening that the next General Assembly authorize the county to sell from $16 000 to $18 000 of bonds payable in 16 or 20 years, and to construct a new court house building and further suggested that the county commissioners employ a night watchman for the present court house until it is abandoned as a place of deposit for for public records. The bench complimented the jury on the effective manner in which they had completed their work. It is thought that this report will so demonstrate the feeling at large for a proper court house that there will be but little doubt as to early action on the part of the county commissioners looking to a new building.

The Thoughts of a Bride.—"The thoughts of a bride," said pretty Olga Nebb as she awaited in her lovely nest of a room, with her admiring maids about her, the coming of one who was to claim her as his own. Her fair face dimpled over with merriment, a little hand tried to shade the tell happiness that had made her eyes shine like stars and her cheeks grow bewitching rosy.

"Why, girls, a bride has no thoughts. How can she? She just lives, moves, and has her being in an atmosphere that is so clarified that it fairly lifts the feet from earth. She treads on clouds as it were, and the great sun of happiness peeps through and turns all things into beauty. It glorifies her home, it glorifies the people in it and it turns the most commonplace things into the ideal. She is perfectly passive. Her thinking was done some time ago, and now for a time she resigns all the practical of earth and simply lives and loves. The thinks, ah, yes, she does think, you see, a little, of somebody who is coming soon. Somebody who has promised to take care of her always. Some one she trusts as implicitly as her God in heaven. But this is not a concentrated kind of think. It is an overshadowing, a permeating idea that covers over the chaotic movements of the mind Prescience? No. Regret at leaving home? No. For past girlhood? No-o." The pretty face sank low into the rich laces that ruffled like clouds of foam the bridal bodice, and something like a sob was heard.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada Hurd, of Groton, S D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated into Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to Get Dr. Kings New Discovery, for Consumption Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles, it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at Church Notice.—The Gospel meetings at Calvary M. P. Church have been continued this week with increased interest. Revs. Phillips and Ewell have rendered the Pastor valuable services. Preaching and Revival services Sunday 11 A.M. and 7.30 P. M.

The Lowest Rate of the year to Chicago via Pennsylvania Railroad Company's Coach Excursions.

At a recent meeting the rate to Chicago via the Pennsylvania Railroad was definitely decided upon, and will hold good during the remaining excursions of the people's popular coach series: $18.00 from New York, $17.00 from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, and proportionately low rates from other points on the company's division and branches. These rates are the lowest that have yet been authorized, and their ultimate legality has been brought about mainly through the efforts of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

The Remaining dates on which this remarkable rate will apply are Oct. 17, and 21, from New York and Philadelphia, and 14 th, and 21st, from Baltimore and Washington, when trains will leave the several Eastern terminals fully and comfortably equipped with Pennsylvania standard coaches, and all taking advantage of these exceptional opportunities are assured of being amply cared for in transit. The arriving time in Chicago, early the next afternoon, is one equality with the fast express trains schedule, and affords sufficient time for a selection of accommodations for the stay in Chicago.

The immence volume of travel now directing itself towards the World's Fair, and the rapidly approaching termination of the exposition influence the company to place every inducement possible before the public. There could be no better way devised to encourage visits to the most marvelously gorgeous exhibition the people of this generation have ever seen.

Oh, them fellers up in Congress! they're a wranglin' all the time
For they think they're big pertaters, an' they
They're bigger'n Cæsar,
An' they make the longest speeches that was ever said or wrote.
But they ain't a-goin' to git there till they Vote!
Vote!
Vote!
They hear the people shouting, with the loudest kind o' shout.
But they'll keep on with their shouting 'till we all go up the spout;
For the hardest work before 'em—an' the country's takin' note—
Is to buckle down to business, an' to

Literary Notes.—The central figure of the new novel, "Tanis, the Sand-Digger," by Amelie Rives, is another of those strange, high strung and passionate females that the author is so fond of representing as becoming and after a reader has followed Tanis through her love adventures, the verdict must be that this low-born and wretched "poor white," this long-limbed, handsome digger of ginseng root, is a creature of intense fascination and remarkable characteristics. Tanis is a big, fresh and lusty young savage of the Virginia mountains with the figure of a goddess, which when we first meet her, is screened from the breezes and the gaze of man by a single garment. Her long hair sweeps about her like a veil, and she roams the woods in the wild and vigorous manner of the antelope. She is beloved by a young giant of her own class, a mammoth brute, possessing a splendid physical beauty, and who exercises an almost irresistable spell over her. Her battle against the passion and tyranny of this man is the motive of this story. She knows him for a fickle, heartless betrayer of girls, and the one shining quality of her character is her virtue, which sustains her at all times, which teaches her to despise the character of a man like him, and to demand from a lover deep respect and constancy as well as passion. The big brute that worships her is mentally and morally unable to comprehend this part of Tanis' nature, and we find them opposed to each other in a most strange and interesting battle. Sam the reckless lover, is bound to gain full control of Tanis without going into any argument over the matter, while Tanis, although on fire with love for him, sees him in all his weaknesses and wickedness, and knows that if he gets her he will love her for a day and a night and after ward loathe her. And it is only by a wretched scheme on the part of Sam that Tanis is driven into marrying him. She becomes a martyr to save the friends that have been kind to her, and at the end she bows to fate and yields herself up to Sam, because she is powerless to fight him longer. The story is told in the story, aggressive and often dazzling style peculiar to Miss Rives. She describes the scenes in which her characters move with her customary poetic facilities, and probably the most dramatic dialogue that she has ever written is that which passes her hero and heroine in this book. A large element of the public will not accept Miss Rives as representative of that which is healthy and excellent in literature, but the number is small that will argue against her ability to attract and hold the attention by inventing strong characters and putting them through an absorbing series of emotions and adventures. "Tanis, the Sand-Digger" will surely be regarded with interest by the reading public. Town Topics Publishing Company, 21 West 23d street, New York. Cloth, $1.00. 1t

Approaching, I sought "to find fault" (6) at my misadventure. "One who darts" (7) suddenly passed with "deep, guttural sounds" (8), and instinctively a "pole" (9) was thrust at a "bucket of a pump" (10). "One who praises extravagantly" (11) came near. I had been cautioned to beware of a "person easily duped or cheated" (12), and given to understand that I might expect an encounter with a "machine for beating out grain" (13). Remembering that warning, I beat a hasty retreat, leaving my booty behind in the pond.

"Aye, haddock is."

We went for haddock; soon we caught

A Card Trick.

Deal 25 cards in five rows of five cards each, face upward. Invite a person to think of a card and to tell you in which row it is. Note in your mind that row, or left hand card of that row. Now pick up the cards in verticle columns—i. e., beginning at the last card of the last row, placing that card face upward upon the last of that row, and so on. When you have picked up all the cards in this manner, deal them out again in the same way as at first. You will observe that those cards which before formed the first cards of each row now form the second, or first row. Ask the person in which row his card now is. When he has told you, look to the top row for the first card of the original row, when the card thought of will be found in a direct line below it in the last row indicated.

No. 241.—A Tangle:
We welcomed May with all her changing skies
And hailed with joy the queenly month of flowers,
Counting some blessing on each fleeting day.
Telling them on a rosary of hours.
Some idle tears must fall above the past
But all the sweet dead days that we remember,
But, with the garnered treasures in our grasp.
We drink the golden wine of bright September.
