THE Democrats are not as sleepy in this campaign as some folks give them credit for being.

THE oyster interests will be well guarded by Barber, Dodson, Stewart and Hall if the level headed voters of Talbot gives them a chance.

A COMMUNICATION received relative to the Talbot Teachers attending the World's Fair is deferred until next week, if the writer does not withdraw it, owing to the lack of space.

THE Republicans have not got a "move on" as yet but in due course of time meetings will be arranged and speeches made that will set the voter to thinking. We except to make a square and honest fight for the principles we uphold.

THE delightful weather makes the politicians rest comfortably, because the people are generally at work attending to their own business and letting their tongues speak no ill of their neighbors.

THE illness of Hon. C. H. Gibson has created some alarm among his friends in Talbot, but those who saw him after his recent attack say that the newspapers had very much exaggerated the case and that he was comparatively well. That a sudden and acute attack of indigestion was the cause and that his physician assured them there was no foundation for uneasiness about his health. This will be gratifying to his friends and it is hoped it will prove true.

Costly Pension Investigations.

President Cleveland's administration has displayed remarkable energy in one direction, but, so far, the results do not appear to be commensurate with the time and money expended, or the bad feeling and actual suffering engendered. The administration plunged into what it pleased to call pension reform with all the zeal and zest of a boy taking his first swim in the early summer, but without the discretion which accompanies even the wildest boy when he finds himself tiptowing it on the bottom and in danger of getting beyond his depth at the next step. The pension lists were attacked haphazard, and not in an intelligent way, the hope being, apparently, that this reckless slashing about would attract public attention and create an impression of genuine reform of the service, or was it that the administration was so uncharitable as to believe all the old veterans who had defended their country were frauds, and engaged in a conspiracy to cheat that country which they had saved from destruction?

During the months of May, June, July and August thousands were stricken from the rolls without any authority or even reason, except the naked suspicion of the government, and the first information they had of this unwarrantable step was a notification substituted for the pay draft in their envelopes. The misery and suffering which this caused in thousands of homes will never be known, but some idea may be formed from the report which a congressional resolution has forced from Secretary Hoke Smith. He admits that more than twelve thousand pensioners were thus cut off in four months, but seems to demand credit for restoring upwards of six thousand of them to the rolls during the present month. That the others will be restored, with rare exceptions, as soon as they can get a hearing may be inferred from this utterly reckless and inexcusable manner of handling the department.—Judge Long seems to have expedited the movements of the Pension Commissioner by calling him to account in a court of law for his arbitrary action in his case, and the poor veterans who are unable to go to law will profit by it.

Even on the score of economy, the action of the Pension Department should be visited with the utmost reprobation. Secretary Hoke Smith admits that he has spent the entire appropriation of $200,000 for the fiscal year for investigating alleged pension frauds, and makes an earnest appeal to Congress to give him immediately $300,000 more for the same purpose.—Could there be a more reckless expenditure of public money than this?—The money appropriated for a whole year spent in little more than three months, and spent in examining and returning to the pension rolls men whose names were stricken off for the very purpose, apparently, of giving these examiners something to do. The administration has displayed extraordinary activity in this direction so far, but it seems to be the "pernicious activity" that the President condemned so glibly on paper during his former administration—the activity that temporarily brings misery and want to the houses of the country's defenders; but instead of reducing the expenses of the government wastes vast sums upon needless examinations.

The Interior Department has not made even the plausible showing that might delude for awhile the thick-and-thin partisans of the administration. Such a method of administrating a solemn trust is little better than the most commonplace charlatanry.—Balto. American.

CALIFORNIA.

A VAST AND FERTILE DOMAIN OF AGRICULTURE.

Unhampered by Climatic Draw back.

SPLENDID OPPORTUNITIES FOR HOMEBUILDERS WITH MODERATE MEANS—THE NUMEROUS AND PLEASANT AVENUES INTO WHICH HUSBANDRY CAN BE PROFITABLY DIVERTED.

Everybody knows that California is a famous fruit country, but the magnitude of the agricultural industries of this State and the diversity of them, and the varing conditions under which they are pursued are not so well understood.

There are few products grown within the whole area of the United States which are not grown here upon a commercial scale, and a few things are produced here and not anywhere else within our borders. From the Oregon boundary on the north—which is upon about the same parallel of latitude as Boston—to the Mexican boundary on the south is a long way, and a glance at this fact alone shows sufficient cause why the State should be climatically adapted to so wide a variety of productions.

The territorial magnitude of the State, however, is one of the least of the reasons for this; within a single degree of latitude one may find here almost any climate, a great range of soils and elevations varying from the sea-level to great mountain peaks. In a journey of a few hours one may pass from "lands of sun to lands of snow," from rose gardens and orange groves in full bloom and fruit to a region where the vegetation is almost arctic in character. In midwinter one may bask in sunshine and verdure, and in midsummer be fanned by snow-cooled breezes.

The cultivation of citrus fruits and the growing of beef cattle are about as widely opposite as any to branches of agriculture. A land adapted to one is not often well suited to the other. But here I have found both practiced upon an extended scale and under flourishing conditions within an hours journey. About San Diego are extensive orange and lemon groves, and from the fact that planting there continues upon a large scale, I presume the industry is remunerative. Point Loma is an abrupt promontory, jutting into the sea upon the northern side of San Diego Bay. Upon this peninsula a company is now arranging to plant very large lemon groves. Going a little farther north, where the Southern California Railroad winds within the sound of the sea, and yet within sight of Point Loma, great heaids of cattle are grazing in the rich alfalfa fields.

Such a sight as this is seldom seen; hundreds of cattle grazing where the ocean almost bathes their feet and yet their pasturage more rich and ample and lasting, the conditions for their sustenance vastly more economical than in our vaunted Eastern river valleys.

THE IDEAL FARM.

Another contrast in the agricultural here is the opportunity afforded for men of varying means and diverse tastes.

In the first instance, the little fruit farm costing at the outset a few hundred dollars, and brought to maturity by a few years of patient and intellegent care, illustrates one extreme. And in passing, let me say that I know of nothing more enticing in the whole range of the agricultural than this. Such a farm is in truth a garden. The home is embowered in fruits and flowers, and the very labor which is mainly directed toward securing a profit from the soil; ministers at the same time to every cultivated and esthetic sense The manuel labor required is as slight as could be possible in any employment where manual labor is at all demanded The occupation is healthful, is not exacting in the way of requring severe or constant labor, and when intelegently followed, even these few acres give at least the certainty of a comfortable livelihood. Often they give much more, yielding a handsome surplus each year, while the farm itself grows steadily in value.

FARMING REDUCED TO AN EXACT SCIENCE.

The opposite of this picture is found in the great wheat and cattle ranches. These are the enterprises of the capitalist. Upon the former thousands of acres are cultivated to a single crop. There are vast bodies of land not cut into fields, unbroken by fences, where the furrow may be run almost from sun to sun. Upon some of these the cultivation of wheat has been reduced almost to an exact science, the cost of producing the grain brought to a minimum. Steam is employed in every operation, from turning the furrow to cutting, threshing and sacking the grain. There is no useless labor, not even that of hauling and warehousing the grain. The harvest and the months which immediately follow it are the dry season, when there is perfect immunity from rain storms, so that the sacks of wheat are merely piled in the field to await a convenient time for hauling to the railroad and shipping away. Against such methods the small Eastern producer can hardly compete; and, were it not that emigration and development tend more toward horticultural lines (as affording the opportunity for greater profit), these great wheat farms would be a serious menace to the small farmer. As it is, the wheat production is in the neighborhood of forty million bushels annually, and yet California is not especially known as a wheat growing State.

Cattle ranching is even more a business wholly for the capitalist than is wheat farming. To illustrate this I need only say that negotiations are now pending for the sale of a large ranch in the central part of the State the consideration being two and one-half million dollars.

THE JEWELRY OF HORTICULTURE—CULTIVATING PERFUME FLOWERS.

I have said that there is as much opportunity for men of diverse tastes as for men of different means.

The cultivation of perfume flowers is the very refinement of agricultural industry, the jewelry of horticulture, the ideal occupation among all the occupations of the soil. At Los Gatos a perfume flower farm is in successful operation, and—all honor to the sex—is conducted by a woman. At Santa Ana ten acres of land have recently been purchased for a like use. That the industry will become one of great importance can hardly be questioned by any who have seen the profuse bloom here through out the year. It is also stated but upon how good authority I have not yet been able to determine, that the roses grown upon this coast contain twenty per cent more of volatile essence than those of the far-famed perfume flower district of France. Allied to this are such industries as specialties in flower and bulb culture. At Santa Ana I found a gentleman engaged in growing tuberous rooted begonias, confining his entire attention to this one thing. Although a compaasatively new undertaking, he has now about sixty thousand plants. His "farm" comprises about half an acre, and is wholly inclosed and covered with lath, giving it the appearance of a big chicken-coop. His entire product of bulbs is disposed of without trouble to the large Eastern seedsmen and florists; and while I did not go into financial details there was much collateral evidence to show that the enterprise was remunerative.

In the same valley with this bulb garden and where the flower farm is to be, and where orange groves already abound, may be found also the man of opposite tastes—the general farmer, who may pursue his vocation in much the same manner, but under vastly better conditions than the general farmer of the East. Here are rich, loamy bottoms that will produce abundantly grain, grasses, roots and fruits.

BARLEY-HAY—ITS IMPORTANT ROLE IN THE ECONOMY OF FARMING.

Grain and stock may be the staples upon these farms, but the fruit orchard, will be an important adjunct. Cattle are pastured and fattened upon alfalfa, and there is no long and expensive season of winter feeding to interfere with the profit. Barley is sown for hay and cut when in the milk, giving a cheap and nutritious food for such time as the pastures are scant. Cattle and horses are almost invariably in good condition, which fact in itself is strong testimony that they are in a good agricultural country. I have driven day after day behind town kept horses, sleek and fat that have no food throughout the year but this barley-hay: and the total cost of whose keep does not exceed fifty dollars per year.

This barley hay is one of the industries of agricultural California. Vast areas of it are grown upon the ranches; it is the "catch crop" in young orchards and in the boom towns, where building failed to keep pace with the laying out of town lots, the interstices are sown with it. Along the country road-sides, where often there are no fences to separate the farms and orchards from the highway, the edges of the road are sown with barley which serves the double purpose of keeping the weeds down and affording a bit of good pasturage for the cows, which by the way are staked and not allowed to roam at large. This freedom from weeds and the strips and patches of vivid green every where help to make the landscape very pleasing; and it is a feature of California life, both in town and country that one meets with little which is unsightly. Perhaps this is because the people have become so used to presenting their best aspect to their onlooker, so accustomed to the endeavor "to live up to" the great claims made for their State, that this best aspect has finally become the habitual and universal one.

AGRICULTURE IN THE MOUNTAINS—SHEEP RANCHING AND BEE FARMING.

Aside from the conventional life and these conventional industries of the valleys, there is an agricultural life in the mountains which possesses some strongly attractive features. The two industries followed there are sheep ranching and bee keeping. Both are suited to men whose tastes impel them toward a somewhat retired and unconventional mode of life. The former demands the more capital, and is productive of the larger results; but the latter is no mean industry when considered in the aggregate, and is often very profitable. [illegible]

INTELLIGENT LABOR RICHLY REWARDED.

It is not my purpose to indulge in any statistics, nor to give any estimates or comparisons culturists may secure, but rather to suggest (not to minutely describe) the various phases of the agriculture of this wonderful State, and its adaptation to the needs of men who may be most diverse in their tastes and needs. This kindly soil and climate richly reward intelligent labor in whatever line it may be employed. This very fact—that the rewards were so easily earned—has been a stumbling block to many. Men wholly unfitted by nature, training and disposition, dreamers, enthusiasts, impraticables, and men to whom the "world owed a living," have flocked here in times past, and have failed—as they would have done elsewhere—because the conditions for success were so easy they even neglected the requisites.

Let me illustrate how easy these conditions sometimes are. Yesterday I saw a man planting a great field of potatoes. His method was simplicity itself. The land had not been broken, so he was plowing it as the first operation. The soil fell away from the plow mellow and crumbling. Behind him followed a helper, who dropped the seed-pieces in the open furrow. The next furrow covered them with the soft earth. At the third furrow seed seed was dropped again, and again covered in like manner. Thus without harrow or roller, without ridger or marker or smoother the crop was put in. And when the work was completed the field was level, except where a slight ridge marked the furrows, and the seed was as perfectly bedded as it could have been by any expenditure of labor whatever. But such ways are delusive. An orange grove, or walnut orchard, or vineyard cannot be started in such haphazard manner.

MAY NOT THIS BE THE TRUE EL DORADO? ATTRACTIONS FOR THE HOMESEEKER.

In this and other articles which I have prepared for The Independent upon the agriculture of the different sections of our country, I have endeavored to keed the homeseeker in mind and give such information as might help him to determine if a certain district would suit his personal requirements. It may be quite true that the same effort, as intelligently directed, will give as good results in one place as in another, and that the true El Dorado is yet to be discovered. Be that as it may, there is always a large contingent of our agricultural population that is on the lookout for new fields and new conditions. This feeling is not as pronounced just now as it was a few years ago when occurred that remarkable rush toward the grain field of the middle West, and it is, perhaps tempered more with discretion. That movement, while benefiting many individuals, has a reactionary effect upon our agriculture in general, by suddenly increasing our output of staples to such an extent as to flood the markets of the world. Prices were depressed so that farmers, both in the new district and the old, secured only the smallest return for their labor. This condition is gradually righting itself, and such another swarming into a given section, with such another development of a given branch of agriculture, is not to be encouraged.

With this note of warning I would say that California offers many attractions for the agricultural homeseeker.

TWO IMPORTANT CONDITIONS —MODERATE MEANS AND FAIRLY GOOD HEALTH.

The immigrant to this section should have two qualifications—a moderate amount of money, and at least fair physical health, that is, if he intends to earn a living from the soil. Many men have come with a little money but broken in health, and have not succeeded in their enterprises. Labor is dear, and if one must depend wholly upon that which is bought the chances will be against him. The man without some capital is equally at a disadvantage, because cheap lands (as they are understood in the middle west) are not to be obtained here.

Interest is high, so that a man can hardly afford to buy land on time, unless he comes directly into the possession of property which is earning money, and such is not usually seeking for a buyer unless it is one with cash in hand.

Honest, capable agricultural laborers can always find plenty of employment, and at wages which will enable them to accumulate. So if one is willing for a time to be employed instead of the employer, it is quite safe for him to come even without capital. By and by he may secure a little piece of ground, paid for out of the proceeds of his own labor, plant it with trees, and cultivate them well (again by his own labor), and within a few years find himself the owner of a comfortable and productive home of value and earning capacity much greater than he could have secured in the same time in ths East.

LITTLE FEAR OF OVERPRODUCTION—LIFE MADE DELIGHTFULLY EASY.

There is not much apparent danger of overproduction in any of the lines of work which now pay the best profit to the California agriculturist. Oranges are more profitable here than in Florida, and promise to remain so, as they come into market later and have a longer season than the Southern fruit. Lemons walnuts, olives and almonds will not suffer much from low prices until at least sufficient amounts are grown to supply our home demand. At present we import vastly more of these than we produce.

The home once secured and made productive, the farmer will find the conditions of life delightfully easy. The climate is not perfection; such a climate does not exist; but there are neither rigorous winters nor burning summers. There will be few days in the whole year when the ordinary out door employments may not be pursued, not only with comfort but with positive pleasuae, so that the work of the farm, which is ordinarily crowded into a few short months, may be distributed through the four seasons.

It may not be out of place for me to state I came to California somewhat prejudiced against it, prepared to criticise rather than blindly accept the many rose colored pictures which its enthusiasts draw so liberally; but I will confess that its gentle airs and blue skies, its verdant hills and fertile valleys and brilliant groves have quite disarmed me, and I believe that as it becomes known more and more it will fill with a great people and become an empire within itself an empire filled with the happiest, healthiest and richest population of any upon the earth.

ATTENTION FARMERS.

WE ARE IN THE FIELD THIS SEASON with the best and most complete assortment of Implements and Machinery ever offered on the Eastern Shore. First come Plows, and the "Bissell" leads them all in lightness of draft and best work in all conditions of land. Next comes the "Oliver" pattern plow manufactured by Bissell, which is, we claim, superior to any Oliver sold; this plow we have sold a great many of during the past and present seasons and can give a host of references supporting our claim. Lastly comes the "Advance," which is too well known to need any comments. Of the Harrows we are selling the complete line made by D. M. Osborne & Co., including Spring Tooth, Spike Tooth; and Disc—the Spring Tooth especially being the grandest thing of its kind ever put on the market. One of them last winter sold at a sale for $16 which was within $2 of what it cost originally, the bidding having commenced at $10.

In Corn Planters we have the U. S. Combined Check Row Corn Planter This Planter uses a plunger direct from the check row rod to the rotary seed plates and does away with all the shakebar and center irons between the seed boxes. A single pin spring anchor is furnished with the U. S. and with their use the wire can be drawn the same tension at each end of the field, thereby insuring great accuracy in planting.

Our Sulky Cultivator is the "Akron," which is already at the top of the heap both as a cultivator and as a fallow worker.

We are still selling the Osborne Binders and Mowers, which are most reliable, and also the Empire Binders and Mowers, which are new to this section, but have more good points than any machine ever sold.

Farm Wagons—We are handling the "Jackson" and "Auburn." The Jackson is the old Webster very much improved and no one should think of buying a wagon without seeing them. To continue to enumerate all the good things that we have would take up so much of your time that we will cease with the assurance that no matter what you may want we believe we can suit you from a shoe peg to a traction engine.

P. S.—Barb Wire is lower than ever before. Do you need some? We have a large supply
