OUTING ON THE "LULU."

A MERRY PARTY EXPECTED A MERRY TIME.

But Missed It "by a Large Majority"—A Dead Calm, Succeeded by a Sharp Thunder Storm.

THE handsome sloop yacht Lulu flying Rear Commodore Ed. R. Trippe's flag and under the command of Capt. Alex's G. Pascault set sail on Monday afternoon for a pleasant run on the Avon, and with a gay party of ladies and gentlemen on board.

Perhaps it was to rival the fair ones in fickleness that the wind played the part of a fickle Easton girl, and dying away left the yacht becalmed.

As night came on and the calm continued a boat was sent ashore to Cedar Point Farm for provisions, for from Captain to cabin girl all were hungry, perhaps the male members of the party a little dry too.

Provisions being secured a hearty supper was enjoyed, in fact there was nothing left.

But the calm still continued, and the Lulu is too large a yacht to move with sweeps, or to take in tow with the small boat.

So they could but stick pins in the mast to raise the wind, pray for a blow, whistle and one or two of the gentlemen best adapted for such work, go forward and swear by note sotto voce.

With the coming of darkness it began to look as though the prayers for a blow were going to be answered.

There was lightning on the horizon and clouds of inky blackness began to loom up.

But still there was a dead calm, save on the boat. There, the party was very much in evidence.

Captain Pascault adjourned to the Chart-room, leaving the cabin girl at the helm, and another fair sailor to take a reef in the keel in case of of danger, or that is what she said.

Having left the yacht, and lady members of the of crew in stays, Captain Pascault called to Bosen William G. Denny to go to the chart-room with him for a counell.

"We are going to have a storm Bosen."

"All married men know that when we stay out late."

"I mean we are going to have bad weather."

"Thats bad."

"What is to be done?"

"Go ashore."

"And desert the ship?"

"Better than have the ship desert us."

"Sing ho, the gallant captain that you are," sang the Bosen.

"The storm is due now."

"Speaking of due, if it was a note I could tell you all about it—I'm more of a Banker than a Bosen and I wish I was out on yonder bank now, instead of being aboard the Pinafore—I mean the Lulu—why did you invite me If you knew there was going to be a blow."

The Captain said something to himself, but it must have been heard, for from aft came in a chorus.

"He said d——."

Having decided that there was nothing to be done but wait, the captain and Bosen went on deck, when the former said:

"Brace up."

This the male members of the crew mistook for an order to "splice the main brace" and gathered quickly to his aid.

They were mistaken.

Through the calm and darkness suddenly appeared a light.

It was the steamer Joppa.

They were right in the channel and had forgotten the Biblical injunction:

Keep your lamps trimmed and burning," in fact had no oil.

"The fog horn!" shouted the captain.

But there was not enough wind to blow the horn, and had not the steamers Pilot backed water the Lulu would have been run down.

It was a close shave.

Then came a fright from the vivid lightning which played about the yacht, and the terrific peals of thunder which shook the waters, though there was still no wind.

One flash came so near that it momentarily stunned the party and the gentlemen aboard all realized the danger but did all in their power to calm the ladies.

When the storm did at last break it was so violent that Captain Pascault wisely decided to drop anchor and ride it out, and twice again they had a narrow escape from the passing of the steamers.

A dead calm followed the storm, and the party had to make the best of it for the night, the cabin being given up to the ladies.

Thus the night passed, and after dawn a light breeze came and the yacht had to beat her way back to Easton Point, arriving after eight o'clock and with a well tired out party, but a thankful one that their adventure had been no worse.

But one and all deserve credit for their nerve and the cheery way in which they made the best of an unfortunate cruise.

The following are those who had the exciting trip on the Lulu.

Captain Alexis G. Pascault, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Denny, Miss Mamie Gould, Miss Helen Gould, Miss Margaret Grafflin, Miss Sophie Denny, Mr. Robt. Kirby, Mr. Fred MacDonald and Mr. Frank Buffett.

WANAMAKER'S.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Aug. 30, 1897.

School Clothes for Boys QUEEREST of queer trade doings. School days are so near at hand that the restless youngster may be forgiven for dreaming that the bell is ringing now. And the prices of woolens are upward bound. Naturally clothes will be higher, as conditions improve.

But in the face of all this one of the country's trio of best makers of boy's suits sells us

$5 AND $6 ALL-WOOL SUITS TO SELL AT $2.75 AND $3.50

The suits are double breasted, of fine and sightly fabrics—and every seam is sewed with silk.

With long foresight the makers furnish pieces for patching and some extra buttons. Any careful mother will appreciate these suits—if there is a boy of 6 to 16 to be togged out for school.

But there is a decided limit to the offering—only five hundred and fifty suits were to be had. Will you be one of the fortunate few to share the good fortune?

Fall Dress Goods HAVE you seen a finged woods-leaf? There's first touch of warmer color among the dress goods today—stapler sorts of fabrics, little lots of them—often in odd lengths. We are thinking of September school dresses, for big folks and little.

Not a fabric in this list but will be higher in price when the new lots come—some of them higher by half.

Fancy Mixed Suitings, 45 inches, 37½c.
All-wool Jacquard Suitings, 37½c.
52-inch All-wool Flannel Suiting, 37½c. Six shades.

You have paid 37½c for this same plaid.
36-inch all-wool bright-color bourette plaid, 37½c.
48-inch all-wool Scotch Cheviot Plaid, 75c.

Laces IT'S most like finding violets under the snow, to find lovely laces in usual profusion in the torn up lace store and near it. Builders are making us a new store in spots, while we keep right along supplying Our Public with merchandise. Fearful dirt—but not too near the goods; the music of saw and hammer does reach your ears. Discord? Well, we're building harmony—the harmony of beauty and convenience.

Valenciennes Laces cheaper than you have known them, or will again know them—45c, 55c and 60c a doz. yards. A full third saved.

The cheaper grade is 20c, 25c, 30c and 35c a doz. yards.

Guides to Klondike W. B. CONKEY & CO., Chicago and New York, have published "The Official Guide to the Klondike Country and Gold Fields of Alaska," a 296-page book with maps and pictures. It has been sold at 25c. Everybody wants to know about Klondike, so we sell the book
