WANAMAKER'S.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Sept. 27, 1897.

Dress Goods Show Continues THERE is a touch of Nature, here and there, amid the groupings of art—plants that give background to the color-plays of the stuffs. But they are incidents. THE FABRICS ARE THE SHOW—and such a collection of rich stuffs is here as will delight all lovers of the beautiful.

We are lonesomely at the top as dress-goods sellers—with more of exclusive elegance than could be picked from the six best stocks besides.

Each day's showing will be new in spots—as hidden finery forces its way front.

A hearty Wanamaker welcome to visitors from far and near.

The New Dress Trimmings Are Ready BRAIDS lead. Braids in their simple prettiness and braids twisted into designs more or less elaborate. And beads—strung and twisted into novelly pretty designs, and pearls treated just like beads. There are revers and panels and plastrons and yokes and collars—all fashioned ready for use. If we simply gathered trimmings as they are usually gathered, there would be little to talk of. But hosts of the richest things we show are made exclusively for our selling.

Wonderful Kid Gloves for a Dollar ANY glove expert will tell you so, if he will speak at all regarding another seller's merchandise that he cannot match.

THE PRINCESS MAY GLOVES are made to our order in Grenoble, France. The skins are carefully chosen—REAL KIDSKINS, mind you, which don't go into other gloves to sell at $1.

Thirty-six thousand pairs are here—a complete line of the fall colorings and of black and of white. More will come by steamship every fortnight, but, for all that, we may lack sizes now-and-then. We are America's suppliers of women's good wearing real kid gloves at $1.

with the claims of others but rely upon us, as in the past, when we say that we still lead with the best assorted stock of groceries in town. Try us for Fancy Groceries. Try us for Staple Groceries. Try us for fine confections, Cakes, Crackers, Foreign and Domestic Fruits.

We are positively headquarters for the best goods in our line, and we sell for the least money. A fact worth remembering is—our Queensware department offers the greatest inducement that can be found outside of the factories themselves, city stores cannot compare. Give us a call.

his own sister Alice a star set with pink amethysts with a single diamond in the center.

"In course of years, Alice Clitheroe married and her husband took the name of Clitheroe; it is from her that we are descended," said Mrs. Buck, proudly.

"Yes, yes, I know, go on," said Harvey, impatiently.

"Gladys Clitheroe was at length prevailed on by her father to bestow her hand on a certain Roger Davenant, by whom she had two sons and one daughter. Her sons died childless, but of the descendants of her daughter we have no trace.

"Now Harold Clitheroe dying unmarried, the estate not having been entailed, left quite a large fortune to his sister, with the condition that as long as there were any of the Clitheroe name there should be a Gladys Clitheroe, and five thousand pounds was to be preserved intact for her use, that is, each Gladys was to have the income from that sum," explained Mrs. Buck.

"But," she continued, "if any Gladys Clitheroe died unmarried, then the five thousand pounds should go to the descendants of that Gladys who married Roger Davenant, provided that descendant still was possessed of the amethyst star."

"He certainly must have been a curious old codger," interpolated Harvey.

"Otherwise the money must lapse to the Crown," went on Mrs. Buck, ignoring his remark. "My father's sister—your great-aunt Gladys—died unmarried, consequently the money has lain there in bank all these years and no claimant for it."

Mrs. Buck spoke in an injured tone. She thought of her spendthrift father and her own impoverished girlhood, which had led her to accept Thomas Buck and his thousands.

"Well, put on your bonnet and we will soon settle it," spoke up the impatient son, and in a short while the denizens of Werther street were surprised at the sight of a pair of prancing black horses, and an imposing coachman in livery, drawn up before the very modest dwelling of Miss Sarah Peters.

Mrs. Buck was a woman of tact, and in a few graceful words she told the amazed Marchands of her son's having been impressed with the resemblance of Miss Gladys to a relative of their own, and she hoped they would pardon the intrusion, etc., etc., and proceeded to question them as to their antecedents. It was all made plain in a very few minutes, and the right of the Marchands to the legacy proved beyond a doubt.

Oliver Marchand, the father of Gladys, had been the great-grandson of that Gladys who married Roger Davenant. Her daughter Dorothy had married a Van Camp, and the offspring of that aristocratic alliance had run off with a Frenchman named Le Marchand. The daughter became as one dead to the noble Van Camps, but her husband prospered and left a fine fortune to his family when done with the things of life. The family remained South till after the close of the war, when Oliver drifted up North, where he at last won him a wife, but fate proved unkind, nothing ever prospered with him, and after his death his widow and daughter had supported themselves as best they could.

While all the necessary questioning was going on, Harvey sat and feasted his eyes on the fair face that had been the companion of his dreams so many times, and she blushed and smiled like the sweet girl she was, and he fell down and worshiped her then and there. Not literally, of course. No one would have guessed his inward tumult as he sat decorously there listening to his mother's manipulation of the interview. When she insisted that Mr. Marchand and Gladys accompany them home until all the tiresome business details were arranged, he with difficulty refrained from kissing her on the spot, so great was his gratitude.

A season of enchantment began for the two young people, while their elders looked smilingly on. There could be but one ending, and all the world was at the wedding. The bride was lovely to behold, so everyone said, and many remarked that the only jewel she wore was an amethyst star.

Unique Exposition at Niagara in 1899.

The progress of the nineteenth century will be marked by a unique exposition, which will be held at its close on the brink of Niagara Falls. It is to be called the City in the Mist, and will be built on top of the bluff overlooking the mighty cataract, and will in this way possess an attractive feature not possible to any exposition ever before held. The grandest natural scenery in North America is to be found at Niagara Falls, and it is one of the most celebrated throughout the civilized world. The exposition will be especially devoted to the interests of American countries, and is therefore called the Pan-American. It will be situated on the boundary line between the United States and Canada. Niagara river is dotted with small islands, and it is upon the largest of these that the exposition will be held. There are a great many schemes proposed, which will not only thoroughly but artistically show the progress of the century. A small village will be settled on one end of the island, and the modes and methods in use at the beginning of the century in all their simplicity will be revived. The housewife will light her fires by the use of flint, and will spin and make cloth for the family. The miller will do the grinding by hand, and the house will be heated with logs of wood. There will be on the other side of the island a modern, up-to-date household, with all that this implies—telephone, electric light, steam heat, and all the triumphs of modern science and workmanship. All these things have been invented in this century. There will be several features to facilitate seeing the exposition. One is a mammoth see-saw, a thousand feet long, with observation cars at each end, which rise and fall slowly and afford a magnificent view of the noble flood of waters and the surrounding grounds. Another is an elevated bicycle path. A track 6 feet wide will run around the entire grounds; it will be raised upon trestle work and left open to give a good view of the grounds. Elevators will raise and lower the wheels. Work will be rapidly pushed forward, and on May 1, 1899, the exposition will be opened. Prominent business men all over the country are already booking exhibits.

AN AMERICAN ADMINISTRATION.

THAT IS WHAT THE "LAND OF THE FREE" HAS INSTALLED AT WASHINGTON.

War on Anarchist Immigrants—Wedderburn in Hot Water—Dismayed Office Holders. Better than Klondyke Gold.

EXTRAORDINARY efforts are being made by the administration to keep European anarchists out of this country. Our immigration laws are not as specific as they might be in prohibiting the landing of anarchists, but as there are more ways to kill a dog than by hanging, so there are more ways than one to keep anarchists away from the United States, and all of them are being utilized by Immigration Commissioner Powderly, who is being actively assisted by the diplomatic and consular branch of the government service. The officials of several European governments are also lending their assistance to the efforts that are being made to prevent anarchists even making a start for America. All steamship companies have also been notified that they must comply strictly with the act of 1891, which provides that any foreigner who enters our ports in violation of the law, through the ignorance of the inspectors, may be returned at the expense of the transportation company which originally brought him here. This law throws great responsibility on the ship owners, who must not only bear the expense of transporting the anarchists, or any other illegal immigrants, back to the place whence they came, but must maintain them between voyages. The penalty for failure to comply with this law is $300 fine in each case, and the vessel cannot leave port until the fine is paid.

Hon. Benj. Butterworth, Commissioner of Patents, has taken another long step forward in the work of purifying and elevating the practice before the U. S. Patent Office, by deciding upon the disbarment from practice before that office of John Wedderburn & Co., a concern which, in addition to the introduction of lottery methods into the soliciting of U. S. Patents, was, after an unprecedentedly long and careful hearing, found guilty of various fraudulent practices. The official order disbarring Wedderburn & Co. will be published in next week's issue of the Patent Office Gazette, together with an elaborate opinion giving the reasons therefor in detail. Mr. John Wedderburn, the head of the company, firm or corporation, as it has been variously called, was also the head and originator of the Examiner Claims Bureau and the Press Claims Company, both of which left unsavory records when they ceased to exist, and all three of which have left numerous souvenirs in the shape of certificates of stock in the hands of newspaper publishers who were persuaded to accept the same as payment for the advertising, without which neither of them could have existed three months. A number of inventors are also left with worthless souvenirs in the shape of receipts for advance fees paid to Wedderburn & Co. to prosecute their applications for patent. It is needless to advise those who have lost their money; they will be more careful hereafter, but it would be well for others to take the lesson to heart and be sure they know the sort of men they deal with hereafter. The Postoffice authorities have been asked to put the National Recorder, a paper published by Wedderburn & Co., on the fraud list.

Those democratic employes of the Sixth Auditor's office who secured promotion under the last administration solely because they were democrats, each man promoted displacing a republican who was reduced, are much alarmed over the official announcement of the present Sixth Auditor, Hon. Henry A. Castle, of his intention to compel every man so promoted to prove his right to draw the increased salary by the record of his work, or to be reduced to a salary in keeping with his working record.

Ex-Delegate Flynn, of Oklahoma, who is on a business trip to the East, stopped in Washington for several days. Speaking of the condition of the country, he said: "The prosperity we promised has struck the country. The store box whittler is out of a job. I have had occasion recently to visit a number of the states and territories, and everybody is feeling good. Oklahoma is probably today the most prosperous section of the U. S. Our people will export 25,000,000 bushels of wheat and fully 5,000,000 bushels of castor beans. We have an excellent corn crop, and have rivaled California in fruit so far. The South Sea Islands grow the only cotton that surpasses the fibre of Oklahoma. Our cotton is a little late, but we'll market 250,000 bales. Western cattle are as good now as Klondike gold mines. No, I'm not talking politics. I have found it impossible to find many persons willing to acknowledge themselves democrats or populists, hence, I presume, they all voted the republican ticket. Our people are well satisfied with the national administration."

Senator Burrows, of Mich., is in Washington on business with the Department of State, but when he was asked, just after he had had a conference with Secretary Sherman, what the nature of the business was, he laughingly declined to say whether it was public or private. Mr. Burrows says prosperity is in full swing in Michigan, just as it is everywhere else he has been since Congress adjourned.

Mischief Caused by a Doughnut.

It is said that recently a doughnut floated out of a tank into a steam pipe of the revenue cutter "Chandler," and lodging in a valve of the condenser, compelled the vessel to go on the "sick list" at the navy yard. This, an exchange says, is the mort remarkable case of indigestion we have heard of this season, even in the navy, and should be a warning to the marines to be more careful in handling doughnuts. It would be interesting to know who made that doughnut. A person who is capable of producing a doughnut with such a vigorous constitution might give the manufacturers of armor-plate some valuable points.
