MAJOR GENERALS OF VOLUNTEERS.

President McKinley has selected Generals Fitzhugh Lee, James H. Wilson and Joseph H. Wheeler as major generals of volunteers. The three have records for conspicuous service during the Civil War. General Wilson served on the Union side, while Generals Lee and Wheeler battled for the Southern Confederacy.

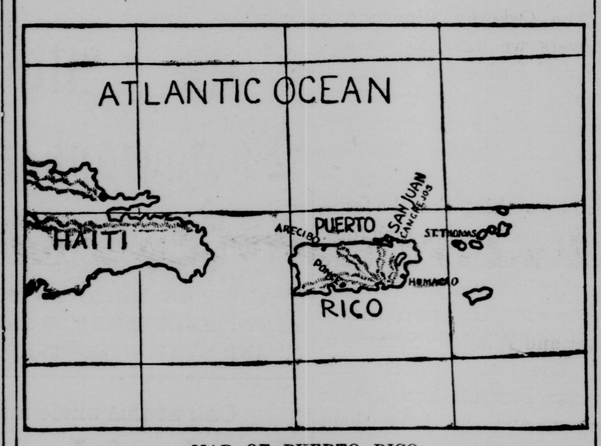

REAR ADMIRAL W. T. SAMPSON.

Captain W. T. Sampson, acting rear admiral in command of the North Atlantic squadron, is an officer of impressive appearance and one who has the love and respect of every man on every vessel in his fleet. The portrait here presented is said to be one of the best ever made of this gallant sailor.

GENERAL WILLIAM R. SHAFTER.

To General William R. Shafter, commander of the department of California, came the honor of being selected for the first important command of our forces in Cuba. It is generally believed that no better selection could have been made.

MAP OF PUERTO RICO.

Puerto Rico is one of the Spanish West India Islands. It is 90 miles long from east to west and 36 miles broad. The island is about 1,000 miles southeast of Cuba. Puerto Rico was discovered by Columbus in 1493. In 1509 it was invaded by the Spaniards, who exterminated the natives, 700,000 in number.

TO RETURN THE FLAGS.

PATRIOTIC SENTIMENT OF OLD SOLDIERS.

The "Boys" in Blue and in Gray Unite in Approval of the Proposition.

The sentiment favoring the return of the captured Confederate flags which have been held since the days of the Civil War seems to be rapidly spreading, and is exciting general interest all over the country. Federals and Confederates alike heartily endorse the idea, the reasons, in each instance, being of the broadest and most patriotic character.

Col. Theodore F. Lang, at one time department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic for the Division of Maryland, has become thoroughly enthused at the prospect.

"Do I favor it?" he said yesterday. "With all my heart! It is a very proper idea. There is no reason why the flags should be retained. No one wishes to hold a captured flag, except it be the colors of an enemy. We have no enemy here in this country. We have no conquerors, we have no conquered. We are brothers, we are fellow countrymen, we are loyal and united citizens of a common republic; therefore, there exists no reason why every existent evidence of bygone bitterness should not be at once obliterated.

"Yes, I favor the return to each State of the Confederacy of every flag which was captured. I believe in returning them just at this time. I believe in performing every act of fraternal chivalry which will wield our nation into a solid firmness. I have the utmost faith in the deep-seated patriotism of my Southern fellow-citizens, and because of that faith I want blotted out all traces of bygone enmity.

"Those flags naturally, and very properly, are of tender personal value to the people of the South. I mean by that they are reverenced especially because of their past tragic associations. They represent the life blood of many of their best and most admirable heroes. Because of that love they should have them in possession. Why hold them in our keeping? We do not claim to be their conquerors. Far from it. We are their brothers—their real, sincere, accepted brothers. Let us, as a consequence, act as brothers, and bury the past, with its scars and wounds." Colonel Charles Marshall, one of Gen. Robert E. Lee's distinguished staff, said that he was deeply gratified to learn of the reawakening of so commendable a sentiment. "I feel," he said, "that such an act would inevitably produce the most excellent results. An act of such genuine chivalry would naturaliy excite the warmest sensations of appreciation in the hearts of the South. The present crisis proves the loyalty of the Southern people. They are among the foremost in their eagerness to advance the Stars and Stripes. They have been quick to respond to their country's call and are fraternally standing side by side with the men of the North.

"That is the clearest proof of the splendid type of their patriotism. With generous and earnest love for the flag of their common country, they are mustering under its folds to uphold it against the enemy.

"Why, then, should Northern veterans, or even those of Northern sympathies, find objection to returning the old Confederate flags? If they have ejected from their bosoms all the rancor of the past, if they have accepted us as we have accepted them, as real and worthy brothers under the protection of a united country, why should there be any hesitancy in such a matter? Surely, it would appear a little incongruous on a present field of battle to find two sets of men fighting side by side, in which one holds a captured flag which he emphatically declines to release. That would hardly be a manifestation of a united brotherhood in the United States.

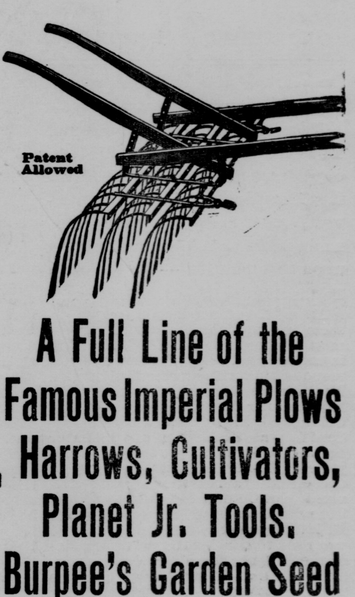

"I verily believe that the return of Confederate flags to the Southern States just at this time would be an act of noble generosity which would forever efface the last shadow of old divisions."—Baltimore Herald

KLONDIKE GOLD FOR EVERYBODY.

You Can Stay at Home and Make a Sure Hit, Or You Can Go to the Fields and Chance It.

When the balance of 5000 shares of stock are sold to residents of Talbot county, several thousand have already been sold, the Company will send to the Alaska fields a representative of said county to be maintained there at Company's expense for one year to work on shares and report progress and current operations direct to said residents. For further particulars address the undersigned.

The season will open about April 1 to operate the same, and we will need some moneys for these purposes, and for this reason we are selling stock still at the ground-floor price, 50 cents per share, par value $1.00. The price will be largely advanced in April. You can invest $5.00 and upward. This is your last chance to get in at low rates—on a sure thing—where, according to reliable expert report, each $1 invested now will, in a reasonable time, return from 25 to 50 fold.

Remember, we are the leading company in all that goes to make up a desirable investment. Further particulars by mail or at office.
