GEMS IN VERSE.

The Torn Leaf.

A witching charm pervades the things beyond our eager grasp.
We'd throw away the prizes won for those we cannot clasp.
All day we wait for sunset, and all night we watch for dawn.
The best part of life's story is the leaf that's torn and gone.

The past is shadowed with regret, the future
has its doubt,
And every rose that we would pluck with thorns is hedged about.
The dream, the song, the hope, the prayer—things we loved—were on The page for which we all despair, the leaf that's torn and gone.

—Chicago Post.

Friendship.

I sing of friendship. Tis a word
That's very, very often heard,
But little understood.
One holds as friend the useful man
Who at the timely moment can
Do him a deal of good.

Another says a friend is he
Who's ready with his sympathy
And excellent advice.
And yet another deems him one
Who joins straight in the passing fun
And adds his share of spice.

Again, you hear the only friend
Is he who willing is to lend
His money at the call.
But none of these, though fair, will do.
They haven't really got the true
Descriptive touch at all.

The friends, the bona fide friends,
Are they who when good luck attends
Upon you for a season
Do not commence to sneer and flout
And say the whole affair's without
The slightest rhyme or reason;

Who do not lift their eyebrows or
Deal in sarcastic metaphor,
Their lips with envy curving.
Keep them, my boy! Such friends are rare
But, if you have them, know that they're
The sole ones worth preserving.

—David H. Dodge in New York Sun.

One Word.

"Write me an epic," the warrior said—
"Victory, valor and glory wed."

"Prithee, a ballad," exclaimed the knight
"Prowess, adventure and faith unite."

"An ode to freedom," the patriot cried—
"Liberty won and wrong defied."

"Give me a drama," the scholar asked—
"The inner world in the outer masked."

"Frame me a sonnet," the artist prayed—
"Power and passion in harmony played."

"Sing me a lyric," the maiden sighed—
"A lark note waking the morning wide."

"Nay, all too long," said the busy age.
"Write me a line instead of a page."

Then swift years spoke—the poet heard—
"Your poem write in a single word."

He looked in the maiden's glowing eyes,
A moment glanced at the starlit skies
From the lights below to the lights above,
And wrote the one word poem—Love.

—Wallace Bruce.

Fame's Cost.

Oh, scorn not things of low degree
And sigh for wealth and state!
Far better court humility
Than burdens of the great.

For he who wins ambition's fight
Can never be at ease.
He gains, 'tis true, a worldly height,
But has a world to please.

For cares increase as honors grow,
And in his new estate
He finds, though bright those honors glow,
'Tis thraldom to the great.

The flatterers that about him throng
Each has some dole to ask.
To please them is no idle song,
But a herculean task.

We value things as they appear
Nor count the cost and pain
Which line the road to that bright sphere
The envied ones attain.

Fame is no royal heritage.
Its crowns are free to all,
But who its dizziest heights would gauge
Must risk the dizziest fall.

Then sigh not for ambition's meed,
Its scepter and its crown.
Uneasy lies the kingly head,
Though pillowed upon down.

—Chicago Inter Ocean.

After the Baby Has Gone.

You have folded the dainty garments smooth
And stroked them down with a trembling hand,
Then laid them safe in the bureau drawer,
And only mothers can understand
What tears were laid with the precious things,
What memories hallow the quiet place,
How even the dresses seem to hold
Some dream of the darling's vanished grace.

There are socks of zephyr, and tiny shoes,
And a strand of beautiful hair half curled,
And caps of lace that once daintily framed
A face, the sweetest in all the world;
The pretty embroidered Christmas robe,
The toy last held in the dimpled hand.
How dear are these to a mother's heart
No one but a mother can understand.

You will steal aside in the busy morn
To handle them tenderly, one by one.
You will lay them out on your empty lap
When the pleasureless work of the day is done.
You will think of the garment of sheerest lawn
In which she went to her grassy bed,
Of the little white shoes on the whiter feet
And the flower strewn pillow beneath her head.

And your desolate heart will, wondering, ask—
But vainly ask; we are blind as you—
How fair is her angel form arrayed,
And what do the heavenly children do?
We know not the fashion of robes of light—
Undreamed are the joys of that happy land—
But how you cling to those little clothes
A million mothers can understand.

—Lillian Grey.

One Country!

One country! Beautiful as one
From sea to mountain closes,
The southland daisies seek the sun
That rims New England's roses.
The same undarkened lights of God
Shine on us from the skylands
And color every breathing clod
From lowland vales to highlands.

One country! And her flag unfurled
On heights of high endeavor
Is like a garland round a world
Where freedom lives forever.
Hail to that country! Strong she stands
For loyal hearts that love her,
With freedom's falchion in her hands
And freedom's flag above her.

—Boston Press Club Souvenir.

We cannot bring Utopia by force,
But better almost be at work in sin
Than in a brute inaction browse and sleep
No man is born into the world whose work
Is not born with him. There is always work,
And tools to work withal, for those who will,
And blessed are the horny hands of toil!

The busy world shoves angrily aside
The man who stands with arms akimbo set
Until occasion tells him what to do,
And he who waits to have his task marked out
Shall die and leave his errand unfulfilled.

—Lowell.
