JOHN M. KEELY.

The Great Inventions of this Wonderful Electrician.

The secret of Keely's mysterious motor did not die with Jno. W. Keely. Such was the positive statement made by B. L. Ackerman, of New York, president of the Keely Motor Company, when asked to set at rest the rumors that Keely's lifework died with him, that the mystic machinery in the little Twentieth street workshop was now only so much meaningless mechanism, and that the secret of how to get force and power out of nothing was lost.

Mr. Ackerman was found at the office of Charles B. Collier, an attorney, who is interested in the motor's future, and he made the following statement:

"Let me say that I have been closely associated with Mr. Keely in his work for twenty-five years, and that I was among the first to see the value of his plans. As a mechanical engineer I have frequently examined his machines, and I have often discussed his experiments with him. Therefore to day I have greater faith than I ever had in the practical value of his discoveries. During the past few years I have learned that Mr. Keely prepared a manuscript of more than 2000 pages which reveals all the secrets discovered by him. That manuscript, I understand, was in the possession of Mrs. Keely, and, therefore, while it is almost too early to discuss the future of the work, it seems to me that with the information in the manuscript and the knowledge in the possession of Lancaster Thomas, the chemist, and Charles B. Collier, there need be little doubt that the work of Mr. Keely will be carried forward.

"It seems to me, after what has been printed, proper to say something about Mr. Keely's work. He has made about fifteen machines during the past twenty-five years, each one being an improvement on its predecessor, and all but two or three were operated successfully. Prior to 1877 he made his first machine while he was studying the great principle of securing power through the disintegration of water. That machine weighed 66,000 pounds and cost $60,000. Then he produced a machine which did exactly the same work, although its weight was only 11,000 pounds. Later the idea involving the disintegration of atmospheric air was conceived, and he made a machine which weighed exactly forty-two pounds. Then he discovered the sympathetic principle, his latest system, and then he produced a machine which, although its weight was only ten pounds, performed the same work as the first machine (weighing 66,000 pounds), and did it in a much better way.

"I review all this to show that the complaints that Mr. Keeley had made no progress have been without foundation. Mr. Keely was actuated at all times by a desire to accomplish as much for his supporters and stockholders as it was possible for him to do, and it was his desire not to take out a patent until he could produce a perfected machine, which would be valuable commercially and would do practical work. Had he patented his first machine the successive improvements and developments, which he made after that time, would have been his own, and the stockholders would not have been benefited by them. His progress has recently been great and had he lived until the end of 1898 I believe that his purpose would have been accomplished. Patent papers and specifications had all been prepared, and it was for the purpose of awaiting further developments that they have not been filed. I believe, however, that with the information left by the inventor, our path will be clear."

Suffering humanity should be supplied with every means possible for its relief. It is with pleasure we publish the following: "This is to certify that I was a terrible sufferer from Yellow Jaundice for over six months, and was treated by some of the best physicians in our city and all to no avail. Dr. Bell, our druggist, recommended Electric Bitters, and after taking two bottles, I was entirely cured. I now take great pleasure in recommending them to any person suffering from this terrible malady. I am gratefully yours, M. A. Hogarty, Lexington, Ky. Sold at Dr. Councell's Pharmacy.

An Honest Remedy.

"We could not say too much in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy About three years ago one of our children had an attack of croup and we were afraid that we would loose him. Seeing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised, we decided to give it a trial. It gave almost instant relief and we believe it saved the child's life. Since then we have never been without a bottle of this remedy in the house and we recommend it to everyone as being an honest Cough Remedy."—L. W. NICHOLS, East New Market, Md., May 17, 1897. For sale by Harry Roberts.

Mason Nichols Dead.

Mason Sidle, oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo L. Nichols, died Tuesday morning after an illness of three weeks, aged 2 years and 4 months. Meningitis was the cause of his death. Funeral was on Wednesday afternoon from the home, Dr. Adams officiating.

All our hopes are blasted,
Our hearts are heavy today;
God in his mighty wisdom
Has taken our darling away.

God has taken our Mason,
Unto a heavenly rest
We entrust him to His keeping,
For He always does what's best.

By his Parents.

A Sure Sign of Croup.

Hoarseness in a child that is subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Many mothers who have croupy children always keep this remedy at hand and find that it saves them much trouble and worry. It can always be depended upon and is pleasant to take. For sale by Harry Roberts.

Red Men Banquet.

It has been erroneously stated in two Easton papers that the Knights of Pythias were to have a supper at Carpenter's restaurant Tuesday evening. Such is not correct. The Red men will enjoy their annual banquet at Mr. Carpenter's next Tuesday evening, when it is hoped that all members will be present.

The following letter from Mr. N. M. Tabor, the well known Colorado millionaire is well worth your consideratio

Denver, Col., January 28, 1890.

GENTLEMEN:

In reply to your favor of the 25th asking for my estimate of the value of life insurance, I beg to say that I carry a large line for two reasons:

First, No man is infallible. Some misfortune that he cannot ward off may take from him his accumulated fortune, whether it be large or small; and a policy, such as I have, would afford a competence for old age.

Second, I consider that one dollar of cash to an estate in event of death will usually save two dollars to the estate.

Yours truly,

N. M. TABER.
