Visit to Washington Was Churchill's Own Idea

President Eisenhower announced that the visit of Sir Winston Churchill and Mr. Eden to Washington was the Prime Minister's own idea. This in itself is an indication of the tremendous seriousness of the world situaton, in view of the fact that Sir Winston is in frail health, and has been advised by his family and friends to lay down the heavy burdens of office. The President also said, in effect, that one reason the meeting was suggested is to do something to counter the growing fear that a deep rift exists between England and the United States.

The obvious fact is that, from the Western point of view, the world problem has worsened very materially in a brief period of time. The clearest example is the Geneva conference where, due to circumstances beyond his control, Mr. Dulles found himself with few cards to play. Britain clearly has no stomach for intervention in Southeast Asia. There is a feeling in many quarters that to all intents and purposes Indochina is now lost to communism, and that any future stand must be taken elsewhere, perhaps in Thailand. Samplings of Congressional opinion in this country show a very strong distaste for any lone-wolf military operations anywhere in Asia, and it is most unlikely that, at this time, he President could get Congressional sanction for ordering American forces into action. There is no evidence that a French government can be formed which will have any permanence or real authority. France is sick of war, is plagued with communist dove-of-peace propaganda, and there is widespread fear of German rearmament, a step which numbers of top military leaders think essential to a workable European defense establishment.

All this, along with confused and conflicting opinion in this country, has forced the Admnistration to reappraise the whole situation Little is being said now in official quarters in support of armed intervention in Southeast Asia. It is very possible that our long-range strategic plan may be drastically overhauled. That this is a very complex task is shown by the great differences existing at the peak military level—the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Strongly opposed points of view are held by two officers of the highest character, reputation and record—Admiral Radford and General Ridgway.

The Admiral has publicy advocated aggressive intervention in Indochina, particularly with air attack from carriers.Hehas urged this on the President and the security council. General Ridgway has not spoken out publicly, but it is reliably reported that he has argued an opposite case before the council. He observed, it is said, that the majority of the people would be hostile to us or any other whites, and that all the miitary problems involved would be far more difficult than in Korea. To quote Marquis Childs, "Basic to Ridgway's thesis is the premise that America's main enemy is Soviet Russia. A corollary to this thesis is that the area essential to keep out of Communist hands is western Europe with its great reservoir of industry and trained manpower." Those who agree with that line of thought feel that if we move in South east Asia, a cruel land war will become inevitable—and that we would waste away our manpower and materials to the ever-increasing benefit of Russia.

The decision is in the balance now. But it doesn't seem that it can remain so for long. The world moves with incredible speed these days.

7 From 'Sho See Boys, Girl's State

Five boys from Queen Anne's county attended Boy's State at Annapolis last week and two girls' State, both units being sponsored by the American Legion and auxiliary.

At Boys' State were Jay Seltzer, Grasonville ,sponsored by the Jeff Davis Post No. 18; Olin Jarrell, Jr., Queenstown, sponsored by the Centreville Rotary Club; Ernest Thompson, Grasonville ,sponsored by the Queenstown Lions Club; Henry Comegys, Centreville, sponsored by the Centreville Lions Club; and Roland Younger, Sudlersville, sponsored by the Kent-Queen Anne's Memorial Post No. 192.

The girls, being sponsored by the Auxiliary Unit of the Kent-Queen Anne's Post, are Kay Kelly, Sudlersville High School; and Charlotte Raisin, Galena High School.

William B. Hastings, vice commander of the Jeff Davis Post in Centreville, and a past district vice commander ,was director of the Boy's State and had more than 150 boys enrolled. Acting as some of the counselors this year was George R. Young, Jr., Centreville ,who attended last year.

Health Association Eyes Health Center

A much-needed Public Health Center for Queen Anne's County moved nearer to reality this week as the members of the county health association voted to ask the County Commissioners to file application for the Hill-Burton Fund for a new Public Health Department building at a maximum cost of $60,000.

This federal fund provides one-third of the cost, or $20,000 and one-third of the remaining $40,000 is necessary to file and the county reportedly has $15,000 ready to give for public service. It is reported the County Commissioners will make this money available for a public health center.

The need for a center was made even more acute last year when the Public Health Department was forced to move from the elementary school location to its present site on Water Street.

H.G. Fritz, chief of the division of Hospital services of the state board of health, spoke to the group emphasizing the county's need for a public health department and the opportunity of getting Federal aid under the Hill-Burton Act.

When an application is accepted the Hill-Burton Act will guarantee payment of one-third of the total ccast of the site, building and equipment, Fritz explained. To file an application ,the county must have available one-third of their two-thirds of the estimated total cost.

The $15,000, earmarked by the county for public service came from the sale of the old county Alms House and had been offered to the Health Department for this work.

The most acceptable site proposed so far for the center is on North Commerce St., at the corner of Commerce and Turpin's Lane, here, where Wilson's Feed Mill burned to the ground several years ago. Since that time the mill has moved to the railroad yards and this corner lot has been standing vacant.
