

Wheat Glut

Caused Embargo

With Baltimore elevators filled to the top and embargoed against further receipts of grain, and Queen Anne's elevators and storage warehouses in the same condition, purchase of wheat has been discontinued temporarily until some of the wheat can be moved in consumption, it was said yesterday.

Farmers who have not as yet disposed of their wheat will have to keep it in their own barns until it can be taken into regular Government authorized elevators, buyers said.

The avalanche of grain which has overloaded the market came this year on top of an immense carryover and the export market in the doldrums. The government loan price has ranged between $1.07 and $1.09 for local wheat and the most of farmers eligible have turned their wheat in at authorized elevators and taken the loan limit on their entire crop.

Local buyers would not venture a guess yesterday when the Baltimore elevators may be in condition to handle any considerable quantity of wheat. They pointed out that the crop this year was good in most sections of the country and that demand in the next few months alone would be the determining factor.

Homemakers Advise

Canning Garden Food

Canning time is in full swing and wise homemakers are scouring the cellar and attic closets for jars and tops to be filled with fruits and vegetables.

Women have been urged since the May meeting of Home Demonstration Clubs to can everything possible this year as a guard against possible increases in food costs. Many farms have planned gardens which are sufficient in size to supply enough canned vegetables to meet the needs of the family through the winter months and allow the needed two or more saving daily of fruits or vegetables. Families, whose gardens do not provide a surplus for canning will no doubt find it economy to buy vegetables from a neighboring farm for canning.

The prospects for a good peach crop means that homes may have home canned peaches on the shelves for winter meals. Huckleberries, apple sauce, pears and blackberries will also go to make up the necessary budget of 15 to 25 quarts of fruit per person.

Tomatoes are an exceptionally important item in the canning budget since they are an excellent source of vitamin C and an inexpensive substitute for oranges says Members of the Home Demonstration Clubs of Queen Anne's county.

Road Contracts

Reached $7,000,000

Construction work on Maryland's highways and bridges is moving ahead in full swing as per schedule according to a report covering the three-months period from May 1 to July 31, submitted to Governor O'Connor by Major Ezra B. Whitman, Chairman of the State Roads Commission.

A list of State and County projects, which have been let by contract since May 1, totals an expenditure of $4,995,107.11, of which $4,609,705.15 covers State and $385,401.96 county work. This makes a total of approximately $7,000,000 in contracts put out by the State Roads Commission for around 50 projects since the first of the year.

Major Whitman also advised the Governor the State already had let contracts for well over one-half million dollars in connection with work to relieve the heavy traffic situation around the Glen L. Martin plant at Middle River.

In addition, bids are now being advertised for the construction of a grade separation cloverleaf near the Martin plant, connecting Eastern Avenue and Middle River, designed to speed the flow of traffic to and from the airplane plant. It is estimated this project will run above half a million dollars.

Meanwhile, the State Roads Commission, working in close collaboration with the Governor, is doing everything possible to have surveys and plans completed for the very important military access road program when Federal funds are made available.

Man Drowned in Chester River

William Ellis Leibig, 28, of Newmanstown, Pa., was drowned and three other members of a Pennsylvania fishing party rescued after clinging to their overturned boat for about twelve hours in the Chester river near Jackson's creek Sunday.

Sheriff E. E. Coursey and State police said Leibig and Adam W. Kith, 29, Adamstown, Pa., Mahlon Ness, 26, East Earl, Pa.; and Charles Wallace, 55, Newmanstown, rented a fishing boat about 5 P. M. Saturday.

About 10 P. M., the men related, a storm came up and the boat capsized as they started to return to shore. Leibig held on to the boat for three or four hours but finally became exhausted and lost his grip.

About 10 A. M. Sunday the trio sighted a fishing boat operated by Richard Green, of Rock Hall, and one of the men waved his shirt to attract attention. The men were taken to Rock Hall and later went to Grasonville for their automobile.

Meanwhile, Henry Crouse, of Ridgely, sighted the overturned boat from his fishing craft and seeing no sign of life notified the boats owner, Capt. Thomas W. Lynch, of Jackson's creek.

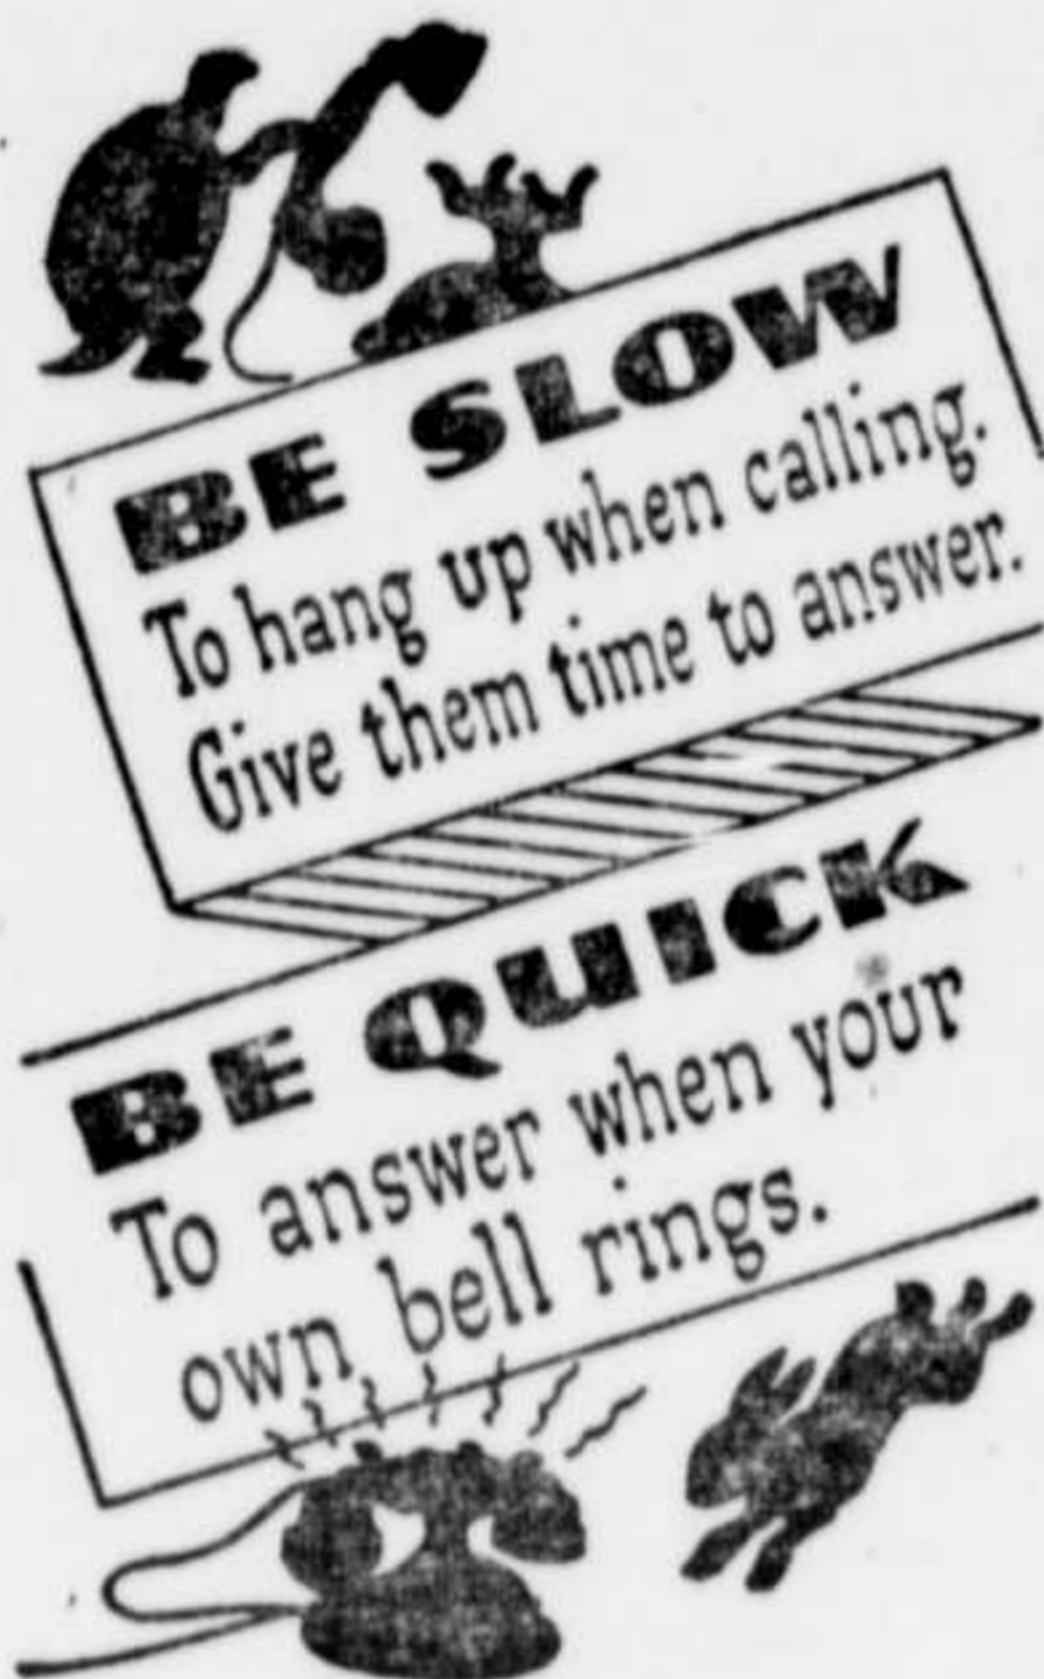

Lynch summoned Sheriff Coursey, State's Attorney John Palmer Smith and State patrolmen, and as they prepared to search for the missing men received word three of the Pennsylvanians had been rescued. A search was begun for Leibig's body near the blinker buoy off Jackson's creek, where it was believed he slipped from the overturned boat.

The body of William E. Leibig, of Newmanstown, Pa., was found floating at the second beacon light by Capt. Arthur Pinder, Tuesday afternoon, who was on a cruising trip with his wife and daughter, and was heading for our harbor to visit the many old friends in Queenstown. He notified James T. Smith, who accompanied him back to where Capt. Pinder saw the body floating and brought it back to Smith's packing house. After an examination by Dr. Samuel J. Price, the body was ordered removed to an undertaker parlor in Centerville awaiting the arrival of relatives.
