being duly sworn as above at the fourth boundary deposeth and saith that about the same time above mentioned that he was showed a bounded White Oak then standing by the above mentioned William Ridgely deceased where there is a stone planted marked with letter B and that, that was the Stump of the Original bounded tree which the said Ridgely shoed him, this deponant more than once as the fourth boundary of Ridgelys Chance and further saith not. sworn before me — Thomas Boale

The Deposition of John Haslip before mentioned being duly sworn as before, at the fifth boundery deposeth and saith, that the two bounded White Oakes, where he now stands were shoed to him this deponent by the aforesaid William Ridgely deceased more than once, as the bounded Trees of Ridgelys Chance and to the best of his the said Ridgely told this deponent that they were the fifth boundry and further saith not — sworn before me — Thomas Boale

The Deposition of John Haslip above mentioned being duly sworn as before at the sixth boundry deposeth and saith that where he now stands where there is a stone Planted marked with the letter B is the spot where he this Deponant was shoed by the aforesaid William Ridgely deceased to be the spot where a bounded tree of Ridgelys Chance, formerly stood and that this deponant was shoed the same spot by the said Ridgely more than once and that this Deponant believes it to be the sixth boundry of the said Land from the information he had and further saith not. sworn before me — Thomas Boale

The Deposition of John Haslip above mentioned being duly sworn as above at the seventh boundry deposeth and saith that the Stone which we are now at, marked with the letter R is the Stone which this deponent was shoed by the above mention William Ridgely deceased about the same time ago as the rest of the boundries were shoed to him, this deponant, and this deponent from what was told him believes it to be the seventh boundry Ridgelys Chance as he was shoed it by the above mentioned Ridgely more than once as such, and further saith not — sworn before me Thomas Boale

The Deposition of John Haslip above mentioned being duly sworn as above at the eighth boundry, deposeth and saith that the tree where he now stands was shoed to him by

by the above mentioned William Ridgely and about the same time as first mentioned to be a bounded tree of Ridgely's Chance, and believes that he told him it was the eighth boundry of Ridgely's Chance that this deponant was shoed this tree by the said Ridgely more than once as such, and further saith not — sworn before me. Thomas Boale

The deposition of John Haslip, before mentioned being duly sworn, as before, at the ninth boundry deposeth and saith that the spot where she now stands or thereabouts & where there is now a Stone planted marked with the letter B, is the spot where a bounded tree of Ridgelys Chance formily stood which was shoed to him, more than once by the before mentioned William Ridgely deceased, and believes it was shoed to him as the ninth boundry of said Land and further saith not — Sworn before me — Thomas Boale

The Deposition of John Haslip being duly sworn as aforesaid deposeth and saith that the tree where at he now stands is a boundry of Ridgely Chance and that it was shoed to him as such by William Ridgely deceased and believes it to be the tenth boundry of said Land — Thomas Boale

The deposition of John Haslip being duly sworn as aforesaid deposeth and saith that the Stone where he now stands marked with the letter R as where a bounded Red oake tree of Ridgely Chance stood and and that he Knew the tree when it was standing and that he was showed that to be the tree by William Ridgely deceased and believes it to be the Eleaventh boundry of the said Land — Thomas Boale

Caleb Sappington the same Virbatum as being shood by William Haslip — Thomas Boale

The deposition of Thomas Iams being duly sworn as above deposeth years ago he was rideing round a track of land with William Ridgely deceased called Ridgelys Chance and the said Ridgely Road up to a bounded red oak standing on the Westrid of the main road about fifty yards of said road Leading to Annopolis and put his Cane against the tree and said that was the last boundry of his land and that he run a straite line from that to the beginning tree standing — Thomas Boale

John Haslip proves that he was shoed the above mentioned Tree by the said Ridgely several times and that he told him it was the last tree of the said Land and that he run