Captain Plowden Nurses Grievances

Capt. Edwin J. Plowden, democratic leader in St. Mary's county and member of the State Conservation Commission, has left Baltimore, filled with resentment against his colleagues on the commission. He was going home, he said, to explain why certain of the St. Mary's "faithful" this year will not receive from a benificent state government stipends ranging from $450 to $1,200 and sundry highly prized "minor privileges."

With his departure, Captain Plowden allowed it to become known why, when the Conservation Commission named oyster inspectors, deputy commanders of the oyster navy and deputy game wardens some days ago, it was announced that "appointments for St. Mary's county were deferred." According to the Captain himself, there is factional strife in the party, at least in that part of it represented by the commission.

Questioned about the deferred appointments yesterday, Chairman Vickers admitted that there had been dissension, but insisted that politics had nothing to do with it. The two oyster navy posts which caused the split are most important, he said, and he and Commissioner Weant are determined to appoint only the men best qualified. Indications are that they will bestow the places ad they desire, in spite of Captain Plowden's wishes.—Baltimore American, Sept. 4.

Ruling of Attorney General on Declaration of Intention Law.

Attorney General Armstrong Thursday gave a ruling by which obstacles in the declaration of intent law are removed. In his opinion he agrees with Governor Ritchie's views on the question. In the opinion the Attorney General holds:

"That any woman coming into the State prior to August 26, 1920 (the date of the proclaming of the Nineteeth Amendment) and satisfying the constitutional requirement of one year's residence herein, is entitled to be registered at this or any subsequent registration without reference to the continuity of said reference, subject to the next succeeding conclusion.

"That all women of the age of 21 years or over, leaving the state on or after August 26, 1920, and taking up a fixed abode without the state, must make affidavit of removal and otherwise comply with the provisions of the act in order to retain the privilege of voting in Maryland."

The Attorney General says: That no woman coming into the state after March 29, 1902, and prior to August 26, 1920, is required to make a declaration of intention for the purpose of registration either this year or any year hereafter, provided her residence in the state, now established, continues unbroken. That all women of the age of 21 or over, coming into Maryland on and after August 26, 1920, must comply with the provisions of the law as fully as men are now required to observe the same.

The summary of the votes of the members reviews in each instance the attitude of each member on measures which came before Congress during his service. With the records went no declaration that a man should be supported or fought, the labor leaders being advised to map out a plan of political campaign as they may see fit.

Congressman Mudd's record, which has been more favorable than many of his colleagues, is given as follows:
