JUNE 4, 1938

Warning from Senator Sasscer.

Excerpts from speech to the West Annapolis Democratic Club at Bay Ridge, May 27th, 1938, by Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer:

The fight between Mayor Jackson and Mr. O'Connor carried on in the newspapers during the past few days again emphasizes the danger there will be to the success of the Democratic party in November if either of these two gentlemen are selected as a candidate.

The people of Maryland are not interested in the Jersey City controversy nor are they interested in the fight now going on between the two rival Baltimore City factions except in so far as it affects the party success in November. Do not let the ambitions of or the ill feeling existing between these two rival city factions lead us to defeat in November.

Political history has sadly demonstrated that when these bitter fights between rival factions have taken place in Baltimore, whether in a city or state campaign, they have been carried through into the election and the results have been disastrous

If you are interested in having honest government, unselfishly administered in the interests of the people, and assured success of our party in November, keep away from these contaminents and join the order of the ox cart and aid me in a campaign that is meeting with marked success daily.

The record claim by both Mayor Jackson and Mr. O'Connor that they each had the 62 electoral votes from Baltimore City is typical of the inaccurate propaganda that has characterized this campaign.

First Infantry Wins Trophy.

The annual Federal inspection of National Guard units is over in Maryland, and a large silver cup has been added to the trophy shelf of the Service Company, First Infantry, at Silver Spring. The cup was presented by Regimental Headquarters, and was awarded to the Service Company for making the best showing of any company in the First Infantry during the Federal inspection.

Colonel D. John Markey, commanding the "Fighting First," expressed himself as delighted with the results of the inspection. He pointed out that fourteen units of the regiment had turned 100 per cent for the armory inspection, and that no company in the regiment had less than 90 per cent of its men on hand for inspection night.

Here's the roll call of the units in the First that turned in 100 per cent attendance records for the Federal inspection: Headquarters Company, Frederick; Howitzer Company, Kensington; Band Section, Frederick; Medical Department Detachment, Cheverly; Headquarters Co., 1st Battalion, Easton; Company A, Federalsburg; Company G, Cambridge; Company D, Bel Air; Company E, Elkton; Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, Laurel; Company G, Cumberland; Company H, Westminster; Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, Pocomoke City and Company I, Salisbury.

Cantaloupe Quality May Be Guarded Before Buying.

How to tell a "good" cantaloupe perplexes most consumer buyers. A cantaloupe to have the right flavor and sweetness must not be picked too green nor too ripe. There are telltale marks as to when a cantaloupe is picked, says W. R. Beattie, of the United States Department of Agriculture.

A cantaloupe picked too green will have a portion of the stem attached and the stem end or base beneath the netting will be a pure green. One picked over ripe or from a diseased vine will have a pale yellow or faded appearance. But if a slight golden color shows through the netting and the base or stem end—opposite the stem end—is firm and does not show paleness, the consumer can be reasonably sure that the cantaloupe is good.

If the melon was picked full ripe no part of the stem will remain and there will be a clean scar. The presence of little globules of reddish brown sugar around the stem scar is a pretty sure indication that the melon is sweet.

Vine-ripened melons—precooled before shipping—are now shipped across the continent. Introduction 2 years ago of No. 35, a mildew resistant variety, lessens the possibility of obtaining melons grown on diseased vines.

FROM BAGDAD-ON-THE-SUBWAY TO BAGDAD-ON-THE-TIGRIS IN 10 MINUTES

Lowell Thomas, well-known radio news commentator, put radio waves to two very different uses in one day not long ago, when he talked by radio telephone with the city of Bagdad, in the kingdom of Iraq, and then, a few hours later, described the experience during his regular news radio broadcast.

Mr. Thomas as a matter of fact was the first person to carry on a conversation over the New York-Bagdad radio telephone circuit. He had been invited by officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to inaugurate the service with this kingdom of the Near East; a happy choice, because of Mr. Thomas' earlier intimate contact with and his many recollections of the country and its rulers. In the course of one of his news broadcasts, he told American listeners about his conversation. That he found it interesting, the following paragraphs from a transcript of his broadcast show:

"The first telephone call from New York to Bagdad was put through today: telephone service halfway 'round the world, from O. Henry's Bagdad-on-the Subway to the original Bagdad of the Arabian Nights. The voice at the other end, speaking from the fabulous city in the land of the Tigris and the Euphrates, was that of Said Righed Rashid. Here, at the American end, the telephone officials had asked me to do the talking.

"It surely was appropriate to have someone named Rashid speaking from Bagdad, for, as you will recall, the most famous name in the history of Bagdad was Rashid: the Caliph Haroun-al-Rashid of Arabian Nights fame, the wise Caliph who went about among his people in disguise. And I suppose I was selected to open this unusual service from the American end because during the World War I happened to be associated, out in Arabia, with Emir Feisal, the companion of Lawrence of Arabia. After the war, my friend Feisal was made the first modern King of Bagdad, and now his son, King Ghazi of Iraq, rules in the city of the Caliphs.

"Sitting high up in the tower of the Waldorf-Astoria, I heard the voice of Said Rashid, speaking to me direct from the region which historians believe was the original Garden of Eden. I mentioned to Mr. Rashid that his name was synonymous, the same as the great Caliph. And he replied that I was in an appropriate place, that New York, our American Bagdad-on-the-Subway, our Bagdad with its towering skyscrapers, far exceeds even the tales of Aladdin in the 'Arabian Nights.'

"Here is the route that my words took as they went winging across the globe:—by short wave from New York to London; then relayed by short wave from London across Europe to Cairo; then by land wire from Africa, across the Suez Canal, to El Kantara, where Allenby had his great one-cmup during the war against the Turks and where I had lived; then by wire over the Sinai desert, where the children of Israel wandered for forty years, on to Gaza, home of Goliath and the Philistines and where Delilah cut off Sampson's hair and where Sampson pulled down the Temple; on north along the Palestine coast to Jaffa, seaport of King David and King Solomon, and where Jonah embarked on his voyage that ended in the stomach of the whale; on up to Haifa; then eastward through Palestine to Nazareth, home of the Savlour and across the North Arabian desert to Bagdad.

"Although for a number of years now we've been accustomed to transoceanic telephone service (maybe some are accustomed to it, I still marvel), I admit I got a tremendous thrill out of chatting with a person named Rashid in far-off Bagdad."

BELL SYSTEM EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD

The Bell System Plan for sickness, accident and death benefits and pensions went into effect January 1, 1913, and there by established for employees a substantial degree of assurance and assistance in meeting these exigencies. In announcing the plan to employees, Theodore N. Vail, then president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, stated:

"The intent and purpose of the employer in establishing a plan of benefits is to give tangible expression to the reciprocity which means faithful and loyal service on the part of the employee, with protection from all the ordinary misfortunes to which he is liable; reciprocity which means mutual regard for one another's interest and welfare.

"This is justice, and without justice and sympathetic interest, we cannot hope to do a thoroughly good piece of work."

These sound principles have since prevailed and in this anniversary year it is interesting to recall the point of view of the plan's creators during the period of study that led to its adoption. These viewpoints, naturally, had their origin in the feeling of responsibility for the protection of the service. Those charged with the duty of investigation and recommendation regarding the plan were considering a complex business that rendered an essential public service which by its very nature must be a continuing enterprise—a business that, for its adequate functioning, required a loyal organization having sustained vitality. To insure such an organization it was necessary to recognize and make reasonable provision for those hazards of life which interrupt earning power and bring about unexpected and, sometimes, heavy burdens. It was also necessary to meet the problem of aging of personnel, through an appropriate retirement plan, so as to maintain the vitality of management and organization and avoid the result of continuing on active duty, long-service employees whose efficiency had become impaired.

Twenty-five years' experience in this comprehensive and uniform program of employee benefits has fully demonstrated its value to employees and to the company. It is interesting to note that these provisions were made before such practices were generally recognized and, of course, long before recent trends in social security, as now provided through legislation.

The plan, as adopted and as since amended from time to time, is provided by the company without direct or indirect cost to employees. It applies to all alike who meet reasonable eligibility requirements, on the basis of wages and service. In meeting this objective, fundamental security, so essential in any sound continuing plan, has been maintained and the payments provided are appropriate and proper for the purposes intended. In view of these essential elements, the Bell System plan provides liberal and reasonable protection against many uncertainties of life which interrupt or terminate earning capacity. This plan is advantageous to employees, consistent with sound business principles, and in accord with social thought as applied to the kind of protection for which the payments are intended.

WESTERN ELECTRIC ENGINEER PIONEERED NEW INSULATION

Telephone engineers never accept any product or process as the "last word"—they are always trying to make it better.

For many years the copper wires in telephone cables had been insulated by a spiral wrapping of paper ribbon.

One day a Western Electric Company engineer mixed a wood pulp solution in a laboratory bottle and stirred it with a piece of wire. He found the pulp stuck to the wire. Right away he got the idea of making the paper on the wire instead of wrapping the wire with paper. This new method of insulation led to the manufacture of a better and far more economical product.

Animal Tears

Whether animals have some inward expression of weeping is not known. Crocodile tears, however, are famous. Ancient travelers said that the saurians wept over those they devoured. The nearest approach to human crocodile tears, says Literary Digest, are the simulated sobs of professional mourners still found in some parts of Europe and the Orient. They attend funerals, follow the cortege to the cemetery, wailing or crying softly, according to their pay.

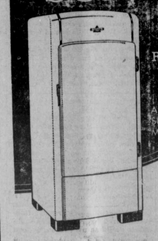

Dental Optometrist

The oculist is an eye physician or surgeon, a doctor of medicine who has had special training not only in optical defects but in the diseases of the eye. An optometrist is an eye engineer who specializes in the examination of the eyes, for defects which can be corrected with lenses to obtain normal vision as far as possible.
