DECEMBER 10, 1938.

This November term of our Circuit Court was the longest and most expensive one we have had for many years. Larceny, drunken driving, manslaughter and murder cases pretty well occupied the Court for the term. The number of criminal cases, with many witnesses, many of them from out of the State, made the cost to the county rather burdensome. Added to the cost of the Court here, the county will be called on to pay the expenses of the murder case removed to Frederick county for trial.

It is to be hoped that the many prison sentences imposed by the Court on the convicted violators may have a deterrent effect upon others left behind. Larceny of tobacco seemed to be the most frequent offense. There is no form of larceny more difficult to prevent than tobacco stealing, especially when the culprits can find ready and willing buyers for their plunder. It is the careless willing buyer that makes the crime easy and profitable to both Boston . . Before there was a telephone there was a telephone laboratory. In a corner of a Boston workshop Alexander Graham Bell carried on his researches. Today the Bell Telephone Laboratories, the outgrowth of the early workshop, is a great institution, employing 4,200 persons, about 2,000 of whom are men highly trained and experienced in science and engineering. The activities of the laboratories include all the engineering arts which pertain to electrical communication or to the composition and construction of communication equipment, as well as all the science basic to those arts. The organization is also responsible for conduction of test and inspection which follow its designs through manufacture and installation.

Early Ohio Torches

Ohio pioneers, when needing illumination to find their way through the forests at night, would often make strips of bark together and light one end of the bundle.

PIONEER HONORED

Arthur L. Eskey, Charleston, W. Va., was elected a vice president of the Telephone Pioneers of America at their seventeenth annual convention held recently in Toronto, Canada. Mr. Eskey is the general plant manager of The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of West Virginia. He is a past president of the West Virginia Chapter of Telephone Pioneers, which has 220 members. Like most telephone officials, Mr. Eskey came up from the ranks, having started his telephone career thirty-one years ago in Wheeling as a groundman.

The Telephone Pioneers of America is an organization of telephone employees who have twenty-one years or more of service, and was formed to promote the continuance of friendships and fellowships made during the progress of the telephone industry. It boasts 40,000 members who represent a total of approximately 1,083,833 years of telephone service. Other officers elected for the ensuing year were: president, Walter S. Gifford, president of The American Telephone and Telegraph Company; senior vice president, Charles L. Rice, works manager of the Western Electric Company, Chicago; and vice president, William F. Armstrong, The Cincinnati and Suburban Bell Telephone Company.

Elimination Of Static On Plane To Ground Phone Calls Seen In Near Future

Ultra - High - Frequency Apparatus Developed By Bell Laboratories In Cooperation With TWA Line

Static-free radio telephone transmission between airplane pilots and landing field attendants has been demonstrated in tests made by the Bell Telephone Laboratories in cooperation with Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc. Despite thunderstorms and other atmospheric disturbances, flight tests of new ultra-high-frequency apparatus, utilizing channels in the band from 100 to 150 megacycles, show the system to be substantially free from adverse atmospheric conditions.

The system has been tested under actual flying conditions over the New York-Pittsburgh route of TWA. Should continuing tests, now being carried forward to explore the new system's behavior on other typical airways, verify the initial results, radio telephony at these frequencies will find extensive use, not only for aviation but also for police radio telephone and other land services.

Early in 1938 arrangements were made with TWA for an operational test of the new equipment on the Pittsburgh-New York airway. Ultra-high-frequency transmitters and receivers were installed near the airport at Pittsburgh and on top of The New York Telephone Company building situated in lower Manhattan. The latter equipment was controlled remotely from TWA's dispatch office in Newark. In addition to the Laboratories' airplane, ultra-high-frequency equipment was also installed in a TWA skyliner, which has been flown on regular schedule between Pittsburgh and New York. Both the aircraft installations and those on the ground were made separate from the regular complement of radio transmitting and receiving equipment normally employed for airline operations.

A month's trial under actual operating conditions, during which all types of weather were encountered showed the new system to be free from static disturbances even in the presence of violent thunderstorms. Rain static, another common source of interference, left the equipment undisturbed and the almost total absence of background noise, which usually crackles in the pilot's ears continuously, proved to be an important advantage through relieving discomfort and fatigue.

The tests gave additional verification to the fact that ultra-high-frequency transmission will not carry for any considerable distance beyond the horizon. Although this characteristic represents a handicap to the general application of such short waves, it is less important to aircraft communication because the airplane's horizon is continuously expanded as it gains altitude. It does mean, however, that for airline operation, a greater number of ground stations will be required along the line of flight than with present lower frequency equipment operating between 3,000 and 6,000 kilocycles.
