State debt, and the annual cost for service charges on that debt. The tax problem, both, as it affects owners of real estate and as it affects those who pay special imposts—such as gasoline taxes and automobile license fees—should be carefully studied, and a sincere effort made to apply them uniformly and fairly, I shall not make any rash promises, such as $2 auto tags, but I do promise, if I have the opportunity, to see to it that the State obtains the best possible advice, and that such sound plans as may be recommended will become administration measures.

"Now that unemployment insurance is written into the State law, and old-age pensions are being provided for by Federal measures, the State should take stock of the needs of its people, particularly in regard to the social problems which have been created or enlarged during the period of the depression. The absence of any fixed policy with reference to the State's relation to the problem of direct relief for the unemployed faced by the localities was responsible for the controversy at the last regular session of the Legislature, and for the special session called after the regular session had adjourend.

Real Data On Welfare Needed

"The unemployment insurance and old age pension laws will, in course of time be amended so as to give more adequate benefits than now provided but neither of these measures come anywhere near meeting the needs of those in distress. The first thing needed in Maryland is action by the State to gather information as to the nature and extent of the permanent welfare problem, and then to determine what is the best course to pursue. And, in connection with these special studies, the State must continue and attempt to improve the fine work being done in its own institutions, much as its hospitals, institutions for the insane and for the delinquents.

"I think it is a fair statement of the situation to say that the public lacks confidence in the State Roads Commission. Our State roads system has lost the high place it once held and the efforts made in recent years to improve and restore the system seem to have failed to reach this goal. A long time has elapsed since it appeared that the financial relations of the State Road commission with the political subdivisions were subject to criticism, and that the diversion by the Governor and the Legislature, of road funds to other purposes was creating insurmountable handicaps. I repeat the pledge made by me in 1934 that, if I am nominated and elected Governor, the State Roads Commission will be reorganized as to personnel and methods, and that it will be taken out of injurious politics and kept out. I believe, too that the State Insurance Department is in great need of reorganization. Several years ago many individuals in Maryland suffered severe losses because weak and insolvent companies were allowed to operate in the State. The law still needs revision, and so does the department if we are to prevent a reoccurance of the situation which did so much damage to the

New Conservation Policy Needed

"There is no subject which has created more controversy in Maryland for many years than the conservation of the State's natural resources, especially the commerce in oysters, fish and crabs. There are several viewpoints as to the best course for the State to follow, but everyone will agree that the State has not followed any particular viewpoint, but has allowed matters to drift, without any real policy. The State has nibbed a little at restrictive measures and, at the same tiime, has expended some public funds to plant seed oysters and shells.

"It has not taken any adequate measures to restore and protect the oyster industry, but has simply thrown a sop, first to one group and then to another. The hestitation and indecision has been very costly. There is no excuse for further delay if I am nominated and elected Governor, I shall place the problem in the hands of those best qualified by training and experience, with all viewpoints represented, to recommend proper action by the State, and I pledge my best efforts to have such recommendations adopted by the Legislature and written into the law of the State. There shall be no further temporizing with this problem.

subjects I have mentioned in this statement. to deal with all of the matters and issues to be debated in the forthcoming campaign, I shall discuss other issues and problems from time to time, and I shall go into detail as to the subjects I have mentioned inthis statement. I am proud of the fact that Baltimore city is regarded as one of the best managed cities in the United States. It has met and is meeting all of its municipal problems effectively, and for several years past its record has been studied and praised by officials of other cities, and by many specially interested in municipal administration. The reorganization of city government, brought about by me, with the introduction of modern methods of accounting, has proved effective in promoting efficiency and economy. I have an ambition to try to do for the State Goverment what has been achieved for Baltimore city. If I am elected, I shall consecrate myself to that task."

Cattle Free for the Taking

Horses escaped from the Spaniards on the mainland of North America multiplied fast on Argentina's pampas. Thus the Argentina gaucho (or cowboy) became a hunter of free-roaming horses, while the northern plainsman became a herder. Cattle stealing was never the serious crime on the pampas that it was in North America's Wild west because in Argentina cattle were free for the taking.—Washington Post.
