Sees Recovery In Labor Peace

Expert Says 1937 Industrial Strife Helped Bring On Recession

"The first sign of recovery will come when industrial strife dwindles to negligible proportions and industry can get down to its serious business of giving work to willing workers."

That is the declaration of Gustav R. Stahl, director of Industrial Relations of J. T. Trenholm & Company, New York, who has just completed a For Cancer Fund study of industrial disputes and their effects upon the public and economic life during 1937. Labor strife during the year broke all records for the Mrs. Ella Howery, 22 years old, of sponsor a tea for the State-wide number of man-days of work lost, he
