Cavalry Captured Dutch Fleet

FEW men on horseback once conquered the Dutch fleet. The crews of the well-armed battleships were so surprised when they found their ships surrounded by a troop of cavalry that they surrendered without a fight.

This happened during the cold The French, already at war with wing. Austria, now found themselves forced to fight England, Holland and Spain. Most of the fighting took place in what is now Belgium. The Dutch were protected until the winter of 1794-95.
