COL. SAM. HAMBLETON,

OF TALBOT CO.

Democrats, to the Polls!

We make use of this, the last opportunity previous to the election, to urge the importance of casting every possible vote against the longer continuance of the Radical party in power. It may perhaps be in the minds of some that the electoral vote of Maryland will be cast for Mr. Seymour certain, and there will be no use in their making any sacrifice of time or inclination to go to the polls and vote. We think a little reflection will convince that every Democrat should vote exactly as though the election of President depended upon the popular vote. The issues in this contest are so marked, that every vote, is the verdict of a juryman on one side or the other of the issue, apart from the mere fact as to who shall be President. It may happen that the popular vote will differ from the electoral vote. Should General Grant receive a majority of the electors, as now is confidently declared by his Radical friends, the probabilities are that Mr. Seymour will obtain a majority of the popular vote, and every vote cast at the polls of our county will contribute to swell that majority. In fact, in view of the probabilities of the election of General Grant, and the certainty of the electoral vote of Maryland being given for Mr. Seymour, there is a greater necessity for casting the whole anti-radical vote than if the election of Mr. Seymour were a fixed fact. And why? Because the Radical journals of the State threaten, that in the event of the success of their candidate, the State of Maryland will be reconstructed in accord with Radical ideas; that is, they mean to overturn the present State government, proclaim universal suffrage, fill all the offices with Radicals, and disfranchise enough Democrats to enable them to maintain their ascendency. Every voter, then, in Maryland, opposed to such proceedings, should on Tuesday next deposit his vote for the Democratic electors, and thereby record their verdict against negro suffrage, and Radicalism generally.

There are those who profess opposition to Radicalism, but yet say they will not vote for Mr. Seymour because he is a Democrat. To such we say, we do not ask you to help give the electoral vote of Maryland to Mr. Seymour, because Mr. Seymour will certainly receive that, but we do ask you to record your protest against the revolutionizing of Maryland by military force, and enforcement of negro suffrage in violation of the will of the people.

Every vote in Maryland, given for the Democratic electors, will be a vote against these Radical schemes, and we want to see the Radical overthrow in Maryland so complete on Tuesday next, that even should Mr. Grant be elected, the negro party of this State will not be bold enough, even backed by the famous Mr. Grant, to attempt the execution of their nefarious schemes.

How the Radical party of Kent county stands on the negro question, we suppose the demonstration of Tuesday last has fully convinced every one. How Gen. Grant stands on the question, we will let his friend Pierrepont answer:

In his speech in New York city the other night, Judge Pierrepont (radical, though he was a democrat at the time he held the conversation with Grant) said:

"One day at his house in Washington, while he was Secretary of War, I told him that I thought he would make a good democratic candidate if he was right on the question of negro suffrage. He replied that he had no wish for the presidency; that he had now a much higher office than he had ever expected; that General Sherman would make a good President, and that he would gladly give the half that he was worth to make Sherman or any other man President; that his feelings and sentiments were entirely opposed to negro suffrage; but that he did not wish to be restrained by any pledges from the right to change his opinion in future if new exigencies convinced him that he was wrong; for, said he, you will remember that early in the war, when I was in command of the West, I publicly stated that if negroes had an insurrection I would hold my army in check until it was put down. But long before the war was over I should have been glad of a negro insurrection, and would have moved my army all the faster. What I want is the Union—the whole country returned to peace and submissive to the laws. I do not like universal negro suffrage now, but the freedmen ought to be protected, and if the only way to protect them in their helpless condition is to give them the suffrage, then I shall be in favor of letting them vote. I want the Union restored, and to have the South come back, obey the laws, and submit as good citizens, and if the future proves that they will not do it without negro suffrage, then I would give them negro suffrage." [Applause.]

Well now, the Radical party have long since determined that to restore the Union and make the South obey the laws, they must have negro suffrage, and General Grant, as the chosen exponent of their views, has of course said, amen!

FROM OUR WORTON CORRESPONDENT.

The Dead Alive!

Dear Transcript:—Daily and hourly good men are passing away, to receive the reward that is the promised inheritance of those who fulfill the law and the commandments. We lose a relative or a friend, and with bowed head, and wet cheeks, we follow his body to the tomb; or with reverential awe, behold its ascent into the clouds—Elijah-like—and all the ceremony of woe. But it is only because we do not discern that those who die, as we call it, are only made alive, immortally; and that we, who survive here, are only waiting to be transferred to a higher and spiritual life. And yet we cannot so see through the mystery of birth and death here, as to realize that this life is only the entrance to a life that is perfect and everlasting. Our very blindness makes us selfish, and we weep when we should rejoice. We therefore weep over the ashes of our friend, and cry—

"Oh! for a touch of the vanished hand,
And a sound of the voice that is still!"

And they say, that your correspondent, too, is dead, or translated; and while his friends go mourning 'round, strange to tell, he reads his own obituary. But as neither

Raven croaked, nor hollow shrieks of owls
Sung dirges at his funeral,

he thinks the affair a delusion: yes, he believes it a myth. Now let all tears be wiped from your eyes, and let there be no more need for sorrowing, for Squeezebreeze still lives! It has not been the good fortune or misfortune, of that worthy, the declaration of Brutus of the News to the contrary notwithstanding, to shuffle off this mortal coil and ascend to that bright land beyond the skies,

"Where the wicked cease from troubling,
And the weary are at rest,"

and where there is joy and peace forever more. In fact he believes that he has not exchanged his earthly habitation, for one in the spirit land, and is firmly impressed with the belief that his home is, as ever, here below. His duties and appointments are as usual, and if his associates partake anything of the etherial or spiritual, they simulate mightily those of the flesh. But indeed it were well to "depart this life" to be the subject of such a laudatory and lavish obit. Could the demise of your correspondent been probable and his return again to earth possible, he should have wondered whether or not the correspondent of the News could have mistaken him for some one else: the effusion of his sorrowing friend adulating him (your correspondent) so much. Flattered by the complimentary eulogy—turned into elegy—of his friend and knight of the quill, he must allow Squeeze in the flesh to acknowledge his just appreciation of his kindly interest, meritorial services and faithful adherence to that ancient Latin maxim, which declares—of the dead let nothing be said, but what is favorable; and further to state, that any notice, however insignificant, of so humble a sojourner, by such a learned and distinguished citizen, would be ample recompense for an aerial journey into the "better land"—alone—without the attendance and consolations of a beautiful woman, in whom there was

Grace in all her flights, Heaven in her eye,
And in all her gestures dignity and love.

But why the fertile brain of the blithesome Brutus should have conceived the idea of our translation, or misunderstood so plain a statement, is surprising for one so ripe in years, experience and wisdom; and one whose sincerity of purpose intones his whole being. Could the eminent critic have been laboring under a temporary aberration of mind, which perverted his real conception? or with an overloaded stomach in a fit of indigestion wrote his piece? or, has his associations been of so holy and noble a character as to wholly ignore the idea of any place this side of Heaven, where there is any peace and harmony, and where discord is an element unheard of? If he believes such a place impossible, and no where on earth to be found, we invite his further attention to WORTON. Come move among us, and by your accustomed upright walk and chaste conversation, lead us nearer to perfection. And let us prove to your better satisfaction that while we are a God-fearing people, and count all things but loss, compared to that home above where, no gloom of affliction or sin, no shadow of evil is there, we have some comfort, some happiness, here below. The piquant description of our exit from your town, was correct, for though our fair companion lacked the winged appendage of an angel, she was very near akin to one; whether the course of our true love ran thus smoothly or otherwise, deponent sayeth not; but surely no such rash conclusion of dying together, or living asunder, marred our happiness and pleasure for the time, or caused our thoughts to wander toward the stern and unrelenting papa, or make us with beclouded visions of reality, turn aside from the beaten path, but kept straight on for "Worton felix." If we did not arrive there, and still appear of the earth, earthy, we have mistaken "the land of the hereafter," one fraught with difficulty, as

"The ways of Heaven, are dark and intricate Puzzled in mazes, and perplexed with error," for one, where sallying pleasure-seekers drop into the road unnoticed and withou their own effort. Now my dear Brutus, while your whole article is full of wit and humor and honest joke, your evident intention was good and praiseworthy, and the moral not so obscured by mirth as to pass unobserved. Following the instinct of your generous nature, you have used persuasive means to call us away from supposed sin and scenes of frivolity, and by your kind treatment and Christian-like conduct, aim to overcome our evil with your good. Or in other words, as fire melts the hardest metals, so your kindness tends to melt the hardest hearts.

"So artists mould the sullen ore of lead
By heaping coals of fire upon its head,
Touched by the warmth, the heated metal
learns to glow,
And pure from dross, the silver runs below."

SQUEEZEBREEZE.

Hanesville, Md., Oct. 27, 1868.

Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry and Grace's Celebrated Salve have stood the test of long experience, and have come into general use. These articles are no quack nostrums, but genuine preparations, skillfully compounded, and well adapted to the class of diseases for which they are recommended. Seth W. Fowle & Son, Boston, Mass., are the proprietors.

"Important Advice to Voters!"

"On the third of November the voters of Kent county will be called up to discharge a sacred duty they owe to themselves.—There are two parties in the contest, both rallying around the Flag of their Country. One of these parties doomed to defeat, and with the defeat there will be a great depression of spirits, superinducing a loss of appetite and an entire derangement of the digestive organs, or animal functions. The unfortunate in the contest aforesaid, will find a wholesome panacea in Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic that will speedily restore the tone of stomachs and enable them to resume business. These preparations are for sale by Druggists and dealers in Medicines everywhere."

WANTED.—For the ensuing year, and perhaps longer, a TENANT for a first class farm.

A steady and industrious man with sufficient energy and means to manage properly an improved place, and prepared to give approved security for stock and fixtures of farm, if wanted. None other need apply.
