INTO THE SUNSHINE.

"I wish father would come home."

The voice that said this had a troubled tone, and the face that looked up was sad.

"Your father will be very angry," said an aunt, who was sitting in the room with a book in her hand. The boy raised himself from the sofa, where he had been lying in tears for half an hour, and, with a touch of indignation in his voice, answered:

"He'll be sorry, not angry. Father never gets angry."

For a few moments the aunt looked at the boy half curiously, and let her eyes fall again upon the book that was in her hand.

The boy laid himself down upon the sofa again, and hid his face from sight.

"That's father, now!" He started up, after the lapse of nearly ten minutes, as the sound of a bell reached his ears, and went to the room door. He stood there for a little while, and then came slowly back, saying with a disappointed air:

"It isn't father. I wonder what keeps him so late. O, I wish he would come!"

"You seem anxious to get deeper into trouble," remarked the aunt, she had only been in the house for a week, and who was neither very amiable nor very sympathizing towards children. The boy's fault had provoked her, and she considered him a fit subject for punishment.

"I believe, aunt Phœbe, that you'd like to see me whipped," said the boy, a little warmly. "But you won't."

"I must confess," replied aunt Phœbe, "that I think a little wholesome discipline of the kind you speak of would not be out of place. If you were my child, I am sure you wouldn't escape."

"I'm not your child; I don't want to be. Father's good and loves me."

"If your father is so good, and loves you so well, you must be a very ungrateful or a very inconsiderate boy. His goodness don't seem to have helped you much."

"Hush, will you!" ejaculated the boy, excited to anger by this unkindness of speech.

"Phœbe!" It was the boy's mother who spoke now, for the first time. In an under tone, she added: "You are wrong. Richard is suffering quite enough, and you are doing him harm rather than good."

Again the bell rang, and again the boy left the sofa, and went to the sitting-room door.

"It's father!" And he went gliding down stairs.

"Ah, Richard!" was the kindly greeting, as Mr. Gordon took the hands of his boy.

"But what's the matter, my son? You don't look happy."

"Won't you come in here?" And Richard drew his father into the library Mr. Gordon sat down, still holding Richard's hand.

"You are in trouble, my son. What has happened?"

The eyes of Richard filled with tears as he looked into his father's face. He tried to answer, but his lips quivered. Then he turned, and opening the door of the cabinet, brought out the fragments of a broken statuette, which had been sent home only the day before, and set them on the table before his father, over whose countenance came instantly a shadow of regret.

"Who did this, my son?" was asked in an even voice.

"I did it."

"How?"

"I threw my ball in there, once—only once, in forgetfulness."

The poor boy's tones were husky and tremulous. A little while Mr. Gordon sat, controlling himself, and collecting his disturbed thoughts. Then he said cheerfully—"What is done, Richard, can't be helped. Put the broken pieces away. You have had trouble enough about it, I can see—and reproof enough for your thoughtlessness—so I shall not add a word to increase your pain."

"O, father!" and the boy threw his arms about his father's neck, "you are so kind—so good!"

Five minutes later, and Richard entered the sitting-room with his father. Aunt Phœbe looked up for two shadowed faces, but did not see them. She was puzzled.

"That was very unfortunate," she said, a little while after Mr. Gordon came in. It was such an exquisite work of art. It is hopelessly ruined." Richard was leaning against his father when his aunt said this.

Mr. Gordon only smiled and drew his arm closely around his boy. Mrs. Gordon threw upon her sister a look of warning, but it was unheeded.

"I think Richard was a very naughty boy."

"We have settled all that, Phœbe," was the mild but firm answer of Mr. Gordon, "and it is one of our rules to get into the sunshine as quickly as possible."

Phœbe was rebuked, while Richard looked grateful, and, it may be, a little triumphant; for his aunt had borne down upon him rather too hard for a boy's patience to endure.

Into the sunshine as quickly as possible? O, is not that the better philosophy for our homes? Is it not true Christian philosophy? It is selfishness that grows angry and repels, because a fault was committed? Let us get the offender into the sunshine as quickly as possible, so that true thoughts and right feelings may grow vigorous in its warmth. We retain anger, not that anger may act as a wholesome discipline, but because we are unwilling to forgive. Ah, if we were always right with ourselves, we would oftener be right with our children.—Steps Towards Heaven.

"How much to insert this death," asked a person at a newspaper office. "One dollar." "Why I paid but fifty cents the last time I inserted one." "That was a common death," said the publisher, "but this is sincerely regretted." "I'll tell you what," said the applicant, your executors will not be put to that expense."

A PHYSICIAN, attending a lady several times, had received a couple of guineas each visit. At last, when he was going away, she gave him but one, at which he was surprised, and looking on the floor, I believe, madam, said he, I have dropped a guinea. No, sir, replied the lady, it is I that have dropped it.

"Father, Come Home."

Music has drawn many a heart back from yielding to a temptation it was upon the point of doing, and binds the world together in stronger bonds of brotherhood than anything else of humanizing tendency. But how much more effective when aided by a little dramatic effect. A London correspondent gives an affecting description of the singing of the pathetic ballad of "Father, Come Home," in one of the London theatres, which left but few dry eyes in the house, and must have nerved the stronger resolution of any present who were in the habit of giving away to the weakness and wickedness of indulging in intoxicating drinks to excess. This correspondent, describing the scene, says that the lady singer came in front of the curtain, amidst great applause, and commenced, "Father, dear father," &c. Every word was distinct, and she sung the ballad with great feeling. In order, however, to fully describe the scene which followed each verse, it is necessary to give little Mary's song:

"Father, dear father, come home with me now,
The clock in the steeple strikes one! (gong)
You promised, dear father, that you would come home
As soon as your day's work was done.
Our fire has gone out—our house is all dark,
And mother's been watching since tea,
With poor little Benny so sick in her arms,
And no one to help her out me.
Come home, come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father, come home."

At the conclusion of the last line the drop scene drew up, disclosing the father sitting at the door of a public house, in a drunken, bemuddled state, with pipe and pot before him. Little Mary was trying to drag him from his seat, at the same time pointing to a curtain behind, as she took up the refrain from the lady, and touchingly sung, "Come home," &c. This other curtain was now drawn aside, disclosing a wretched room, with the poor mother sitting on the floor with a sickly looking boy in her lap, and in the act of feeding him with a spoon. Simultaneously with the drawing of the curtain the lime-light was brought to bear upon the tableaux, giving them a truly startling effect After a moment or two the act drop came down, and the lady proceeded:

"Father, dear father, come home with me now,
The clock in the steeple strikes two! (gong, gong,)
The night has grown colder, and Benny is worse,
But he has been calling for you.
Indeed he is worse, ma says he will die,
Perhaps before morning shall dawn,
And this was the message she sent me to bring—
Come quickly, or he will be gone.
Come home, come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father, come home."

The act drop rises again, and now the child has hold of the pewter pot, trying to take it from the drunken parent, and as she continues the last two lines, "Come home," &c., the other curtain is drawn aside, and we next see the child stretched out on its mother's lap, and as it just raises its little head and falls back with a gasp, with the lime-light reflecting strongly upon it, there was reality about the whole terrible to view. Sobs were heard from all parts of the hall, coming from the female portion of the audience, while tears trickled down many a male cheek Even the lady who sung the song was affected, and could scarcely proceed with the third verse:

"Father, dear father, come home with me now,
The clock in the steeple strikes three! (gong, gong, gong,)
The house is so lonely, the hours are so long,
For poor weeping mother and me.
Yes, we are alone—poor Benny is dead,
And gone with the angels of light!
And these were the very last words that he said—
"I want to kiss papa—good night!"
Come home, come home, come home,
Please, father, dear father, come home."

Again the drop rose, disclosing little Mary on her knees appealing to her father, who, with pot elevated, is in the act of striking her with it, as she sings, "Come home," and then the back curtain draws aside, showing the mother praying over a child's coffin. But now the sobs burst out still more freely, and two females were carried out fainting. The scene was truly harrowing.

An additional verse was sung about "Poor Benny" being with the angels above. The drop rose; the father, sober now, is weeping over the coffin with the mother, and little Mary, on her knees, singing, "Home, home, father, dear father's come home!" At this moment the curtain is drawn aside, and little Benny is seen suspended over the coffin with wings, and smiling down upon them and pointing upwards. The father falls forward on his face, the act-drop descends, and for a minute all is hushed save the sobs of the audience.

On Swearing.

Cowper was an English poet. He wrote beautiful hymns. He wrote some lines about swearing, which it would be worth while for every boy in the land to learn.

It chills my blood to hear the best Supreme
Rudely appealed to on each trifling theme;
Maintain your rank; vulgarity despise;
To swear is neither brave, polite nor wise.

If you wish never to swear big oaths, the best plan is not to make use of little ones.

Some who would not swear by the name of God think nothing of swearing "by George," or "by jingo," or by something else; others often cry out, "good gracious," or "mercy on me," and the like. These are the beginnings of swearing. They are to profane swearing what acorns are to the oak.

Our Saviour said when on earth, "Let your yea be yea, and your nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." This means we should use plain, simple language. David had a short prayer on this point:—"Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; and keep the door of my lips."

Let the children make it their prayer —Child's Paper.

THERE are some inconsistencies in this world that I don't exactly understand. Everybody is anxious to go to Heaven, but nobody is in a hurry about it.

NEW ESTABLISHMENT!

New Stock, Low Prices!

BUILDING HARDWARE, TIN WARE, AND STOVES.

THE citizens of Chestertown and the adjacent country, are respectfully invited to call at the New Establishment, (stand formerly occupied by Wm. Simpson, on High street, nearly opposite the Voshell House,) and examine our large and cheap stock.

IN BUILDING HARDWARE

We are able to offer great inducements to Carpenters, Mechanics, Farmers, Builders, and those who contemplate having building done. If all such will only give us a chance we are confident of being able to convince them that we can supply their wants with a better article and for less money, than any establishment in this town. Our stock in this line is very full, and we are constantly making additions to it.

TIN AND SHEET IRON WARE.

In this department our stock is very complete, comprising almost any thing that can be called for, and at prices that must, we are sure, give satisfaction. In Tin we also keep the celebrated Stamped Ware. We have in our employ experienced, skilful and faithful workmen, and always use good material.

Stoves.

We shall keep a good stock, of all kinds, purchased from manufacturers direct, and will sell at a very small advance.

TIN ROOFING AND SPOUTING, and all kinds of repairing (including repairs to stoves,) done promptly in a workmanlike and durable manner, at low rates.

HOUSEKEEPING GOODS,

Embracing Safes, Japanned and Block Tin Ware, Ornamental Chamber Sets, and fancy Ware generally, in great variety.

In conclusion we would remark that we have gone into this business with a determination to sell low, to spare no pains, and to do all in our power to give satisfaction: and we respectfully ask our friends and the public to give us a trial.

DURYEAS'
Satin Gloss Starch

HAS established a world-wide celebrity for being the Purest, Whitest, Strongest, and Most Glossy and Economical Starch known. Disinterested judges pronounce it the "Perfection of Starch."

The Messrs. Duryea have no occasion to personally assert the superiority of their goods. A discriminating public and the decision of the following scientific and disinterested judges establish it.

PRIZE MEDALS AWARDED
Duryeas' Starch and Maizena

For their "Perfection of Quality," at Grand Paris International Exposition, 1867. Great London International Exposition, 1862. Great Internat. Exposition, Hamburg, 1863. Great Internat. Exposition, Cologne, 1865. Also at States', Agricultural, American Institute and Maryland Institute Fairs.

Inferior Starch is sour, musty, or has a golden or yellow tinge, a color not desirable in one's linen. (It is absurd for the laundress to cleanse and bleach, and then discolor linen with impure yellow starch.)

Maizena

Is a pure flour, from the choicest Indian corn, and is used for all the purposes of Corn Starch and Arrowroot, to which it is superior. Put up in the same style of packets, and at same price, with directions for use.

For culinary purposes, call for Duryeas' Maizena. For the laundry, call for Duryeas' Satin Gloss Starch.

For sale by all grocers. Be sure you get our goods. Our name is on all our boxes.
