A LITERARY ODDITY.

The Brewers should to Malta go,
The Boobies all to Scilly,
The Quakers to the Friendly Isles,
The Furriers to Chili.

The little, snarling, carolling "babes,"
That break our nightly rest,
Should be packed off to Baby-lon,
To Lap-land, or to Brest.

From Spit-head Cooks go o'er to Greece,
And while the Miser waits
His passage to the Guinea coast,
Spendthrifts to the Straits.

Spinsters should to the Needle go,
Wine-bibbers to Burgundy;
Gourmands should lunch at Sandwich Isles,
Wags at the Bay of Fun-dy.

Bachelors to the United States,
Maids to the Isle of Man;
Let Gardeners go to Botany Bay,
And Shoeblacks to Japan.

Thus emigrate—and misplaced men
Will here no longer vex us;
And all who ain't provided for
Had better go to Texas.

The Editor Heard From.

The following atrocious rhymes were perpetrated by some ungrateful wretch who was lodged in an editor's bed one night, during the absence of its rightful occupant:

I slept in an editor's bed last night,
And others may say what they please,
I say there's one editor in the world
That certainly takes his ease.

When I thought of my humble cot away,
I could not suppress a sigh;
But I thought, as I rolled in the feathery nest,
How easily editors lie.

When the editor returned he picked up his "stick" and charged back upon the irreverent fellow as follows:

The chap whose form has rested here,
And left his copy behind,
For a bad impression should be locked up,
As the cut is most unkind.

Behold a p;oof of how he lies:
In the morning he went away,
And like many that use an editor's sheet,
Has forgotten his bill to pay.

☞ The following letter from our correspondent "Æsop," was only received a few days since. It was written, as will be seen, for a Christmas letter, and we omit much which would have been interesting at that time.

We regret that "Æsop," in bidding good-bye to Kent, should say farewell to our columns:

All the world looks forward to this time of all times as a festival and a holiday, and is happy while it lasts. But how many amid the excitement of the time ask themselves the question, Why we celebrate Christmas day?

How many look down the illuminated track of a thousand years, to that wondrous eve, upon the plains of far off Palestine, when the pulses of the universe ceased to beat, and stars hung trembling in the sky, while listning shepheards, in silent wonder, beheld the doors of Heaven open and heard angel voices sing the "glad tidings" which echoed far down into ocean's deepest caverns, shook the frailest flower that blossomed in farthest valleys, and struck chords upon human hearts that thrilled through all eternity

Can we wonder, then, that earth is glad on the anniversary of the morning that brought such joy to a suffering world; that proclaimed a Redeemer for mankind; and destroyed the empire of sin and death?

What lessons of humility we are taught when we reflect that it was the "King of kings" who left the magnificence, beauty and majesty of Heaven's splendors to dwell with us?

And where is His first resting place—His first abode in exchange for the glories He had left? O infinite wisdom of God, where was it? In the manger of a miserable stable, through whose loosened walls the cold air of bleak December sweeps frigidly, with no warmth, nor welcome, on the scattered straw lies the "Infant God"—the Creator of the world—the maker of the wondering cattle that stand around. He, whose fainest feeblest wail floats upward swifter than the light to His kingdom on high.

All the records of history do not present a story at once so humble, yet so SUBLIME; such a birth announcing the life that was to follow of penance, temptation and suffering, gives a faint idea of the value of a human soul.

If men could shake off the worldliness that fastens its vice-like clasp around their hearts, and at this peculiar season allow their hearts to dwell upon the solemnities as well as the merriments of Christmas, they would feel a desire to bring their souls as beautiful gifts to Him who valued them at such great price. They would long to present them as the Magi did their gold, gems and perfumes to the "Child," whose first example on earth was to teach us that purity and lowliness of heart which fits us for the "Home not made with hands."

These reflections, that present themselves to my mind, will, I hope, be acceptable, should this be my last letter to you.

At this happy, holy time, my thoughts return to the scene of childhood's happiest days, where sweet flowers of friendship ever bloom; to that peaceful, quiet region "Still Pond," where sunbeams love to linger with a softer radiance, and Chesapeake's beautiful billows caress the shores where prosperity walks hand in hand with virtue; and contentment has her dwelling place.

May peace and comfort reign over in the midst and happiness fill the hearts of thy gallant youths and fair and gentle maidens of that favored locality. The space allotted me in these columns I leave with regret, but I know that worthier voices will fill the vacuum.

The stamp of a bolder intellect already throws a shadow over my simpler efforts. As after the skillful touch of the painter the feeble outlines of the drawer are erased, so with our friend in Galena; with a master's hand he blends the sentimental, sad, and humorous in a happy strain; and, like the minstrels of ancient story, suits his lay to all dispositions. Surely Calliope must linger near, and guide the gifted pen that affords such pleasure to the literary world of Kent

Let us hope the interesting productions from "Patchem" will long be continued.

An account of the gay world in the city, theatrical amusements, balls and skating scenes indulged in by the fashionable, would take up too much space and prove tiresome, so I say farewell, with the earnest wish that all your readers may enjoy a happy time during these holidays, and those which will come in future years.

ÆSOP.

The Newspaper.

Some one has said that a good newspaper is like a sensible and true hearted friend, whose appearance at one's fire-side gladdens the mind with the promise of a pleasant and profitable hour.

This is a very sensible view to take of the subject. But, all people are not sensible. Some men think more of a chew of tobacco than they do of all the mental pabulum which all the newspapers in the land could afford. Some are "too poor" to take a paper, but spend more money for whiskey than would suffice to pay for a dozen newspapers, and furnish their wives and children with a dozen of the best magazines. They are "too poor" to furnish some little mental aliment to their children, calculated to expand their minds and brighten their intellects; but are rich enough, and find money enough, to buy hurtful stimulants calculated to dwarf and stupefy their own. Such people are objects of pity, where they are not deserving of contempt.

A newspaper is the cheapest commodity which a man can introduce into his household; it benefits him in a thousand ways. It amuses and instructs him, and keeps him posted upon current events, at home and abroad. It advises him of all changes in business, removals, sales, purchases, accidents, the state of the markets, the state of the crops, marriages, deaths, and every incident worthy of note, near or far. A good newspaper adds to the importance of the place where it is published. It attracts the attention of strangers, makes known the business advantages and the facilities for trade and travel of the region around it, and gives many valuable hints and suggestions to the farmer, the mechanic, and the man of business. And yet, there are men in business (we will not call them business men,) who do not support their local newspaper. They enjoy, in common with every one else, the general benefits which the newspaper confers upon the community, but make no return. Like the land-tortoise, they live within their shells, and for themselves alone. Not even Bunyan's "Muck Rake" were more selfish or more covetous. Happily for society the number of such is small.

The newspaper establishment is a component part of the business of the town. The capital it employs is so much added to the common stock. The money it earns is expended in the community whence it draws its support. Its employees must have houses to live in, food to eat and raiment to put on; and thus it aids in sustaining the community by which it is itself sustained; the benefit is reciprocal and mutual.

"But its views do not accord with my own," says some one. Very well, do you expect everybody to agree with you in opinion? Can you tolerate no opinion that does not agree with your own? How then do you expect other men to tolerate your views? It is natural for men to differ with each other; and it is proper and right that they should. It is the order of Nature. But you would reverse Nature's law, and make all men agree with you, or proscribe them if they cannot. This is anti-republican, nay, more—it is the quintessence of despotism, of which every republican ought to feel heartily ashamed. The newspaper is as much entitled to its opinions as you are to yours, and we would not give a fig for the editor who has not the manliness to avow his sentiments and to maintain them. The freedom of the press allows and requires it. In doing so, however, he need not, and should not, do it in an offensive way. A fair criticism of the public acts of public men is allowable, but where criticism degenerates into personal denunciation and abuse, it is no longer an exercise of the liberty of the press, it is licentiousness, for which both personal and legal responsibility is incurred. A properly-conducted journal will avoid it.—Democratic Advocate.

To Young Men.

You are the architects of your own fortune. Rely upon your own strength of body and soul.

Take for your motto self-reliance, honesty and industry. For your star, faith, perseverance and pluck; inscribe on your banner, "Be just and fear not." Don't take too much advice; keep at the helm and steer your own ship. Think well of yourselves. Strike out. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Assume your position; do not practice excessive humility; you cannot get above your common level

Water don't run up hill; put potatoes in a cart over a rough road, and the small ones will go to the bottom. Energy, invincible determination with a right motive, are the levers that move the world.

The great art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Civility costs nothing and buys everything. Don't drink or swear. Don't gamble. Don't steal. Don't tattle. Be polite. Be generous. Be kind. Study hard. Be earnest. Be self-reliant.

Read good books. Love your fellowman, as well as God. Love your country and obey the laws. Love truth. Love virtue. Always do what your conscience tells you to be a duty, and leave the consequences with God.

O! GALE, beware of men in June, and underneath the silver moon, when frogs and crickets are in tune, least your name be in the paper soon.

WHY is a good potato better than a bad one?

Ans.—Because it is "mellor."

BEST ARTICLE IN USE

Letter from A. L. Carter.
MONASKIN, Lancaster Co., Va., August 10, 1868.
Messrs. HERBERT & HAIRSTON, Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen:—I purchased two tons Andrew Coe's Phosphate last fall and applied it in comparison with A No. 1 Peruvian Guano, each drilled in with wheat, at the rate of about 150 pounds per acre, on similar land. The growth of straw was greater where the guano was applied, but the yield of wheat greater and quality better where I used the Phosphate. I also purchased two tons last spring to experiment on oats and corn. The growth of oats was very fine, the corn looks well and bids fair to yield heavily. I shall want more to apply to wheat this fall.

Very respectfully, A. L. CARTER.

Letter from Hon. E. J. Henkle.
Anne Arundel County, Aug. 8th, 1868.
Messrs. Herbert & Hairston:

Gentlemen:—I have used Andrew Coe's Super-Phosphate of Lime on my corn crop for two successive years, and take great pleasure in testifying to its merits. My crop last year was bettter filled in the ear and heavier than I ever raised before. The soil was of inferior quality, and I could only attribute the success of the crop to the effects of the fertilizer. I have used it again this year and it promises equally good results. It is, in my opinion, the most popular and best manufactured fertilizer in use in this community.

Very truly yours, E. J. HENKLE.

Letter from Michael Graybill.
Amsterdam, Va., July 31, 1868.
Messrs. Herbert & Hairston:

I used Andrew Coe's Phosphate by the side of No. 1 Peruvian, and I could see no difference between the two; both did well. I will want some again this fall. Very respectfully yours, MICHAEL GRAYBILL.

Letter from Jesse Slingluff, Esq., President of the Commercial and Farmers Bank.
Baltimore, August 4th, 1868.
Andrew Coe, Esq., Baltimore, Md.

Dear Sir:—I used on my wheat last fall your Super-Phosphate of Lime, and found it to do well. I most cheerfully recommend farmers to use it, as a first-rate fertilizer.

Very respectfully yours, JESSE SLINGLUFF, Baltimore county, Md.

Letter from Basil S. Benson.
Anne Arundel Co., Md., July 18, 1868.
Andrew Coe, Esq., Baltimore, Md.

Dear Sir:—I have bought twenty-six tons of your Phosphate and used it on my fall and spring crops, and it is the best fertilizer that I have ever used. Yours, truly, BASIL S. BENSON.
