For the Transcript.

Chase the Quaker.

Have you ever been one of the above institution? No? Well, then, you have missed lots of fun. Don't know how to play it? I will tell you. First of all, you must know, it takes men and women to play it as it should be. The ladies are all given even numbers; the gentlemen ditto, only odd. Then, one who has plenty of fun and mischief in his composition, takes a chair in the centre of the room. He is called the Quaker. We don't know why, save that he is a gay, rollicking fellow, and Quakers are not; he loves kissing, and Quakers say they don't. These are all good reasons for calling him Quaker; at least, the best we can find; and we were a long time making this discovery. The people are all now ready to play. The fellows look a little sheepish, with eyes cast down upon the carpet, evidently trying to count the fly spots. Or, perhaps, fearing they may not be lucky enough to catch the girl they wish. But I forgot to say, the play progresses thusly: Quaker sits astraddle the chair: we suppose it is necessary to assume this graceful position, as it so well suits an awkward man. He then calls out, for instance, "No. 4, come out! and No. 5 catch her!" As soon as he calls No. 4, the lady bearing that name runs around the Quaker, and if No. 5 can catch her, before she regains her chair, he kisses her. The fun of the thing rests upon the Quaker. If he be full of fun and mischief, he of course manages to get together two people as much alike as the North Pole and the Equator. Say there be a bashful young man in the company, that is Quaker's time. He is bound to put him after the homeliest lady, (if there be such a thing). If a young and timid girl, then of course she is captured by a man whom nothing can abash, and he deliberately kisses her several times, much to the merriment of the lookers-on, and to her discomfit. It is a splendid place for clothes. A dealer in old clothes would do well to be about after this game. I would advise Tyros, before participating, to dress as if specially invited to a first-class hog killing. Do I like the game? Well, I love kissing; indeed, may say it's a passion; but like it best as an exotic. I don't like good things to be so common. But this game has its advantages. It makes people more acquainted. It also shows up the good and bad in life. Also learns a fellow the difference between what kissing all you come across is, and gaining the boon, after a long courtship. Take it all together, perhaps the Legislature, or Abe's ghost, had better proclaim "Chase the Quaker" abolished. Although I favor religious toleration and freedom, yet, as this Quaker is moved always by a bad spirit, I don't think there is much more religion in the game than dancing, and not half the refinement; and our preacher tells us a dancing Christian is always sure to blackslide.

ONLA.

KISSING.

Josh Billings gives a second essay on this subject:

I have written essays on kissing before this one, and they didn't satisfy me, nor dew I think this one will, for the more a man undertakes to tell about a kiss, the more he will reduce his ignorance tew a science.

Yu kant analise a kiss enny more than yu kan the breath of a flower. Yu kant tell what makes a kiss taste so good enny more than you kan a peach.

Enny man who kan set down, where it is cool, and tell how a kiss tastes, hain't got enny more real flavor to his mouth, than a knot hole has. Such a phellow wouldn't hesitate tew deskribe Paradise as a fustrate place for gardin sass.

The only way tew deskribe a kiss is to take one, and then set down, awl alone, out ov the draft, and smack yure lips.

If you kant satisfy yourself how a kiss tastes without taking another one, how on arth can you define it tew the next man.

I have heard writers talk about the egstatick bliss thare was in a kiss, and they really seemed to think they know all about it, but there are the same kind ov folks who perspire and kry when they read poetry, and they fall to writing sum ov their own, and think they have found out how.

I want it understood that I am talking about pure emotional kissing, that is born in the heart, and flies tew the lips, like a humming bird tew her roost.

I am not talking about your lazy, milk and molasses kissing, that daubs the face of any boy, nor yure savage bite that goes around, like a roaring lion, in search of something to eat.

Kissing an unwilling pair of lips iz az mean a viktory, az robbing a bird's nest, and kissing two unwilling ones, iz about az unfragrant recreation az making boquets out of dandelions.

The kind of kissing I am talking about iz the kind that must do it, or spile.

If you sarch the rekords ever so lively, you kant find the author ov the fust kiss; kissing, like mutch other good things, iz anonymous.

But thare iz such natur in it, sitch a world of language without words, sitch a heap of pathos without fuss, so much honey and so little water, so cheap, so sudden, and so neat a mode of striking up an acquaintance, that I consider it a good purchase, that Adam giv, and got the fust kiss.

Who can imagin a greater lump ov earthly bliss reduced to a finer thing, than kissing the only woman on earth, in the garden of Eden.

Adam wan't the man, I don't believe, to pass such a hand

I may be wrong in mi konklusions, but if any body kan date kissing further back, I would like tew see them do it.

I don't know whether the old stobk philosophers kissed enny bodys, or not, if they did, they probably did it, like drawing a theorem on a black board, more for the purpose of proving something else.

I do hate to see those delightful and invigorating beverage adulterated, it is nektar for the gods, but I am often obliged tew stand still, and not say a word, that hain't got enny more novelty, nor meaning in it, than throwing stones tew a mark.

A few tew maiden ladys kiss yesterday on the north side ov Penn square, 5 times in less than 10 minnits; they kissed every time they bid each other farewell, and then immediately thought of something else they hadn't said. I couldn't tell for the life of me whether the kissing waz the effect ov what they sed, or what they sed waz the effect ov the kissing. It waz a which and tother scene.

Cross-matched kissing iz undoubtedly the strength ov the game. It is trew there is no statta regulasion against two females kissing each other; but I don't think thare iz much pardon for it, unless it is done to keep tools in order; and two evidence men kissing each other iz prima face ov deadbeatedly.

Kissing that passes from parent to child, and back again seems tew be az necessary az shinplasters, to do bizziness with; and kissing that husbands give and take is simply gathering ripe fruit from ones own plum tree, that would otherwise drop oph, or be stolen.

Tharefore i am driv tew konklude to git out ov the corner, that my remarks has chased me into, that the ile ov a kiss is only tew be had once in a phellow's life, in the origiual package, and that iz when

Not tew waste the time ov the reader, I have thought best not tew finish the abuv sentence, hoping that there aint no person ov a good edukashun, and decent memory, but what kan reckolekt the time which i refer to without enny of mi help.

Courting.

Said a wosthy and refined gentleman to me, a few days ago, "what is courtship but deception?" After I went home I recalled his words, and more forcibly than when they were uttered did they strike my mind with a sense of truth. What is courting but a systematic course of deception? A young man meets with a lady who appears all that is desirable. He wants her for his own, and then commences a series of coverings of his little faults, striving to appear all that his conscience tells him he should be, using every means to keep everything detrimental to his good name away from her. On the other hand she thinks him so much above the generality of men, that her own imperfections glare alarmingly, and she hastens to hide every trace of them, that he may think her good enough to become his wife; and so they go on. At length they marry A few weeks of delirious joy, a honeymoon, and the new wears off. Husband and wife find that it is nothing very wonderful to be married, after all. They notice that the world wags on as before. Nobody seems to realize that anything of extraordinary importance has occurred. People come and go—go and come as before. Other cares creep in, one by one. Business must be attended to and its trials and vexations met and overcome. The sweet mystery of love is waiting to welcome him home; but business must not be neglected, even for it. By and by little flashes of temper course up, soon to be followed by other startling developments, and the wife awakes to find her idol but clay. If she would then be contented with the clay as it is, trusting to the power of love to model it to her idea of perfection, all would be well. But she more frequently bewails her blindness, and determined to show him how little she regards his profession, herself tears aside the mask of deception, so closely worn during the courting days, and they stand face to face as they are. If then they determine to join hands and bear with each other's faults, each helping the other along, well and good; but too often mutual recriminations follow, and the tender thread upon which two lives are threaded snaps asunder, and though united by form two souls drift apart forever. I think if I had a real bona fide beau, I'd act out all my hatefulness before him, and then he'd have nothing to complain of afterward. At any rate it is downright folly to pretend to be better than you really are, for you will be found out sometime.

The Wife.

Only let a woman be sure she is precious to her husband—not useful, not valuable, not convenient, simply, but lovely and beloved; let her be the recipient of his polite and hearty attention; let her feel that her care and love are noticed, appreciated and returned; let her opinion be asked, her approval sought, and her judgment respected, in matters of which she is cognizant; in short let her only be loved, honored and cherished in fulfilment of the marriage vow—and she will be to her husband, children, and society, a well-spring of pleasure. She will bear pain, and toil, and anxiety—for her husband's love is to her a tower and fortress. Shielded and sheltered therein, adversity will have lost its sting. She may suffer, but sympathy will dull the edge of sorrow. A house with love in it—and by love I mean love expressed by words, and looks, and deeds, (for I have not one spark of faith in love that never crops out) is to a house without love as a person to a machine; one is life, the other mechanism. The unloved woman may have bread just as light, house just as tidy, as the other, but the latter has a spring of beauty about her, a joyousness, an aggressive, penetrating and pervading brightness, to which the former is a stranger The deep happiness in her heart shines out in her face. She gleams over it. She is full of devices and plots and sweet surprises for her family. She has never done with the romance and poetry of life. She herself is a lyric poem, setting herself to all pure and gracious melodies. Humble household ways and duties have for her a golden significance. The prize makes her calling high, and the end sanctifies the means. "Love is heaven and heaven is love."

☞ At a revival down east, not long since, an old lady prayed frevently for "the young lambs of the flock." A "lady in black," not to be outdone by her sisters, responded, and blandly asked who was to pray for "the old ewes."

☞ "Miss, what have you done to be ashamed of, that you blush so?"

"Sir, what have the roses and the strawberries and the peaches done, that they blush so?"

☞ The captain of a privateer, who had been in an engagement, wrote to his owners that he had received but little damage, having only one of his hands wounded in the nose.

Super-Phosphate of Lime.

BEST ARTICLE IN USE

Letter from A. L. Carter.

MONASKIN, Lancaster Co., Va., August 10, 1868.

Messrs. HERBERT & HAIRSTON, Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen:—I purchased two tons Andrew Coe's Phosphate last fall and applied it in comparison with A No. 1 Peruvian Guano, each drilled in with wheat, at the rate of about 150 pounds per acre, on similar land. The growth of straw was greater where the guano was applied, but the yield of wheat greater and quality better where I used the Phosphate. I also purchased two tons last spring to experiment on oats and corn. The growth of oats was very fine, the corn looks well and bids fair to yield heavily. I shall want more to apply to wheat this fall.

Very respectfully, A. L. CARTER.

Letter from Hon. E. J. Henkle.

Anne Arundel County, Aug. 8th, 1868

Messrs. Herbert & Hairston:

Gentlemen:—I have used Andrew Coe's Super-Phosphate of Lime on my corn crop for two successive years, and take great pleasure in testifying to its merits. My crop last year was bettter filled in the ear and heavier than I ever raised before. The soil was of inferior quality, and I could only attribute the success of the crop to the effects of the fertilizer. I have used it again this year and it promises equally good results. It is, in my opinion, the most popular and best manufactured fertilizer in use in this community.

Very truly yours, E. J. HENKLE.

Letter from Michael Graybill.

Amsterdam, Va., July 31, 1868.

Messrs. Herbert & Hairston:

I used Andrew Coe's Phosphate by the side of No. 1 Peruvian, and I could see no difference between the two; both did well. I will want some again this fall. Very respectfully yours, MICHAEL GRAYBILL.

Letter from Jesse Slingluff, Esq., President of the Commercial and Farmers Bank.

Baltimore, August 4th, 1868.

Andrew Coe, Esq., Baltimore, Md.

Dear Sir:—I used on my wheat last fall your Super-Phosphate of Lime, and found it to do well. I most cheerfully recommend farmers to use it, as a first-rate fertilizer.

Very respectfully yours, JESSE SLINGLUFF, Baltimore county, Md.

Letter from Basil S. Benson.

Anne Arundel Co., Md., July 18, 1868.

Andrew Coe, Esq., Baltimore, Md.

Dear Sir:—I have bought twenty-six tons of your Phosphate and used it on my fall and spring crops, and it is the best fertilizer that I have ever used. Yours, truly, BASIL S. BENSON.
