

The Farmers' Column.

To Make and Pack Butter for Winter Use.

From Hearth and Home.

First of all, the milk must be skimmed at the right time. The best butter makers do not wait until the milk has clabbered, but skim it when it is the least bit sour to the taste, which is easily ascertained. When milk sours before it is skimmed the cream appears thicker, but in reality it is not. Sannet tried the experiment with two equal quantities of milk. The one that was skimmed just before souring—that is, in thirty hours—made thirty pounds of butter; the other, allowed to stand sixty hours, yielded twenty-seven pounds. When a milk-room has an even temperature, say sixty degrees, all the cream that is desirable for butter will rise in thirty to thirty-six hours. It never should stand an hour longer. The cream after this period is deprived of its delicious flavor and aroma so essential to the taste of good butter. Of one thing we are certain, from various experiments; the sooner the cream can be made to rise, the better is its keeping qualities. All travelers inform us that in London and Paris the butter far excels ours. One of the chief points with their dairy women is to skim the milk at the right time.

The most celebrated butter in the New York market is from Orange county, and they adherp strictly to the thirty-six hour rule. Cream must be sour to make butter; this is a fixed fact in our mind. In winter, when the cream foams and bubbles in the churn, and refuses to come to butter, it is because it has not experienced a change. The weather has been too cold to allow of it, and we add a teaspoonful of powdered alum to produce the desired results. The cream which boiled and raged like a mad creature is subdued, and in a few moments the welcome splash announces the butter.

This summer has been cold, damp and mouldy in its tendency. Cream is easily affected by the atmosphere. Our dairy consists of one lovely Alderney, June by name. Sweet as June roses is her milk, golden as its butter-cups her cream. But it must stand a week before enough is collected to churn. June supplies a family of six with [illegible] cream and butter, though she is but three years old last June, and is farrow this year. Something must be done to keep that cream fresh. On due deliberation, we decide that if a tablespoonful of powdered saltpetre must be added to every four pounds of butter put down for winter use, why not put one teaspoonful of it into the first cream we put in the pot, and stir it well up with every fresh addition? It is done, and the results are most happy. We seek medical information. Are its effects injurious. Not at all; taken in large quantities, like epsom salts. It is poisonous, but, like most poisons, efficacious in infinitesimal doses. All corned beef, hams, etc., are pickled with its aid. It cannot hurt our butter, so we continue the process, and our cream contains its fine aroma. The buttermilk is pronounced by connoisseurs delicious. We beg our readers who are preparing butter for winter use to put saltpetre in the cream as it collects. We make all our table butter from this one cow; its flavor and color are unsurpassed by Philadelphia butter, and we add no coloring matter now, while we know that the far-famed 'Continental' butter is colored with annotto. In winter we color with orange carrots, grated, or with yolks of eggs, preferring the latter. The churns of the present day are a great aid in working out the buttermilk; still, butter-paddles are needed, few women having hands or wrists strong enough to refuse their aid. We think that butter-paddles might be manufactured like a large fork, or in imitation of four fingers and a thumb, which would greatly hasten the flow of the buttermilk. Cannot some Yankee youth benefit by our suggestion? When the butter is waxen in texture, as all Alderney butter is after a little moulding, and it ceases to color the water which drips from the ice (we never wash butter; the sugar of milk is soluble, and the water takes away the sweetness of the butter—that is our experience), then we work it into cakes, which are placed in a stone jar containing a brine made thus:

To one gallon of water add three quarts of fine salt, one pound of saltpetre, one pound of white sugar. Boil and skim well, strain through a cloth, and when cool pour upon the butter.

This brine has kept butter for us the year round. We are now using butter for cooking purposes made last September, put down in a firkin, with a tablespoonful of powdered and sifted saltpetre, and of sugar, to every four pounds, and it is better than much of the butter which is marketed this year. It has no odor or taste which would indicate its age. It has been kept in an ice-house since June, entirely covered with brine.

Plan of a Corn Crib.

I built a corn crib a few years ago, which I think, for convenience, has but few equals. It has never failed to keep corn perfectly, and is likewise rat-proof. It can easily be filled without the ordinary way of making doors in the roof, which are so difficult to make tight. The dimensions are as follows:

Length 30 feet; width, 4 feet at sills and 5 feet at plates, with a projection in the middle 6 feet long across the crib. The main posts are 8 feet from top of sills to top of plates. The posts to the projection are 6 feet and 2 inches. The sills are 4 by 6, and should be of some durable wood, as they are exposed more to the weather than the rest of the frame. It stands upon 17 posts, set in the ground 2½ feet, resting on flat stones and 20 inches above ground, fixed in the usual way, with the milk-pans inverted over them, which should have the wire-rims cut off, as rats sometimes catch by these and ascend.

The plates are 3 by 7 inches; the posts 4 by 6 inches. The size of the timber is immaterial; some would not think mine large enough, but it answers all purposes. The roof is of 20-inch cypress shingles, and extends a foot over the eaves. The sides of the crib are of pine lath 2 inches wide put on up and down, just wide enough to keep in the smallest ears. The middle part is covered with pine boards, with a door in one side. In filling the crib, loose boards are used to keep the corn in each end, leaving the middle space for shelling the corn and storing the cobs, which we consider are worth saving —Cor. Country Gentleman.

THE RAIN.

It comes! it comes! the beautiful rain.
And the panting fields no more complain;
The thirsty ground, with right good will,
Of the crystal ground is quaffing its fill:
And the chary clouds are shy no more,
But wide-armed sprinkle their jeweled store;
Old Mother Earth is glad again:
Down, down it comes—the beautiful rain.

It comes! it comes! and the dust-clad trees
Fling wide their arms to the welcome breeze:
It cheerily tinkles down the spout,
And with merry laugh comes leaping out;
And bare-headed boys are under the eaves,
And birds are drinking from off the leaves;
And the farmer forsakes his loaded wain,
To sit and watch the beautiful rain.

It comes! it comes! and the pining flower
Unfolds its leaves to the welcome shower;
It comes, and the swallow bathes his wing;
How glad he is to twitter and sing!
And chatters away to his little ones four,
And tells them to look and see it pour;
And they sit and chatter in turn, and fain
Would try their wings in the beautiful rain.

It comes! it comes! in gladsome glee,
Emblem of truth and purity.
It comes! it comes! with its pattering feet,
And treadeth down the dusty street.
It comes! it comes! all rainbow-decked,
To gladden the heart of youth and maiden.
Ring out the joyous shout again,
All praise to God for the beautiful rain.

A Physician's Story.

An eminent physician, in Hearth and Home, tells the following excellent story for the benefit of young mothers. He says:

"An intelligent young mother inquired some days since how she could best preserve her child's linen clean and sweet when changed frequently during the day. I directed her never to dry it by the fire, but in the sun and open air, if the weather permits. You thus not only avoid saturating the air of your room with the volatile and poisonous gases driven out of the linen, but the sun's rays have the power of cleansing and disinfecting which artificial heat has not, and will purify and preserve the linen. She followed my directions; but as is too often the practice, dried and aired it in the nursery window. Her fastidious husband remonstrated in vain against this unseemly exposure. Believing that if she saw her practice as others saw it, she would desist, he so directed their afternoon walk as to bring the nursery window into full view from a central part of the town. Stopping abruptly he pointed to the offending linen flapping conspicuously in the breeze, and asked, sarcastically: 'My dear, what is that displayed from our windows?' 'Why,' she proudly replied, 'that is the flag of our union!' Conquered by this pungent retort, he saluted the flag with a swing of his hat, and pressing his wife's arm closer within his own, said, as they walked homeward, 'And long may it wave.'"

The Latest Internal Revenue Decision.

A contemporary is thus facetious over the decisions of the revenue officials:

"The latest decisions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue cover the following points: Parties using paper collars must use them from the original packages; that is, from the box in which they have been purchased; and a three-cent revenue stamp must be attached to each one when put on. When the collar becomes soiled, and is turned with the clean side out, it must receive another three-cent stamp, and must also be conspicuously stamped with the word 'turned.' Boxes when emptied cannot be used a second time, but must be destroyed in the room where emptied, and the assessor furnished with a certificate of the fact. If thrown out at the window or carried out in the coal-scuttle or washtub, such boxes will be subject to export duty. Bootblacks are required to use their blacking just as they find it when the box is opened, adding nothing to it whatever. The act of spitting in the box and smearing the contents with the brush constitutes the bootblack a mixer or rectifier, or manufacturer of blacking, and he must pay the ordinary manufacturer's license. Each boot blacked, for which the sum of five cents is paid by the wearer, must receive, at the expense of the bootblack, a 4½ cent stamp."

☞ 'Clerk,' said a tall Kentuckian to a hotel official, 'this young woman and me have eloped. Have you any marryin' facilities round here?'

The clerk replied in the affirmative, and the two were 'spliced' in less than an hour. The bridegroom was evidently not yet satisfied, and lingered around the hotel book.

'Clerk,' said he confidentially at length, 'hadn't ye better change the register, and give us one room, now we're married?'

'It's already done,' replied the clerk; you're marked for the same room.'

'Well, clerk,' replied the Kentuckian quickly, 'won't you just show me up then, for I'm awful sleepy.

☞ An auctioneer having a horse to sell who could not be induced to cross a bridge which lay in the way of his master's country residence, advertised him as "sold for no fault but that his owner was desirous of going out of the city."

☞ If there is anybody under the canister of heaven that I have in utter exorescence, said Mrs. Partington, it is the slanderer, going about like a boy-constrictor, circulating his calomel upon honest folks.
