The Chestertown Transcript.

Saturday Morning, November 13, 1869.

☞ Our friends throughout the county are earnestly requested to furnish us with all items of local interest transpiring in their immediate neighborhoods.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Just as we go to press, we learn that J. Peterson Price, alias Judge Wickes, has been convicted at the Centreville Court.

Pumpkins.—Mr. Thos. Mallalieu, near Millington, raised this year six pumpkins from one seed, weighing 25, 28, 59, 97, 121 and 141½ pounds. The three largest were exhibited at the late Agricultural Show near Baltimore.

Mr. John Gale, of this County, has something in the pumpkin line more remarkable, we think,—a sound pumpkin, grown in the summer of 1868. The pumpkin, Mr. Gale tells us, is perfectly sound; and he started to carry it to the Agricultural Fair, but forgot it on the way.

The Military Company of this town propose to have a target practice on Thursday next. The prize will be a gold star, to be worn by the winner as a badge of his excellence in rifle practice.

Public Temperance Meeting.—Resolute Lodge I. O. G. T., of this town, will hold a public meeting on the evening of Thanksgiving day, at the Methodist Protestant Church, at 7 o'clock. Eminent speakers are expected. The Lodges of Kent and adjoining counties are invited to participate.

Chess Turning to Wheat.

A correspondent of the N. E. Farmer, writing from North Hatfield, Mass., reports a case of remarkable transmutation of wheat to chess and back again to wheat as follows:

"Having read the communication signed 'E.,' from Thetford, Vt., in your issue of October 2d, I was reminded of a similar occurrence that happened in Tunbridge, Vt., not more than thirty or forty miles from the place where this wonderful transmutation occurred, and have thought that a repetition of it might be serviceable in the solution and proper understanding of some of the wonders, not to say miracles, of these latter days. Now, I am, like your correspondent 'E.,' an unbeliever in these alleged changes of wheat to a class and species of plant so widely different from wheat as is chess. But to the story of our eye-witness; 'A quantity of ground was sowed to wheat in the fall, which grew and looked well; very little of it winter killed, but when it came to head out it was all found to be chess. A small portion of it was saved for seed, and the rest hayed and put into the barn, affording an immense crop, and the proper time the seed saved from a portion of the field was sowed and cared for the same as is usual with grain crops.' And now, mark you, for here comes another wonder, and one which so far as I can see to the contrary is perfectly consistent with this whole theory of transmutation, if not with degeneration. 'The crop grew well, stood well in the spring, and a good crop of wheat was grown where nought but chess was sown."

"Now, Mr. Editor, I know the man well who tells this for truth, and he is considered a truthful man, and he evidently believes it. Now I would like to have some of these believers in transmutation and degeneration explain this freak of nature."

A Country without Trees.

The New York Sun thinks there is danger that before many years have passed the United States will become a country without trees. And this probability is a danger in the full sense of the word, for a treeless country is the equivalent of an arid desert land, in which agriculture is an impossibility. The Sun says:

"Throughout the Union timber is being cut in order to supply the enormous demand, without any regard to the effect of thus denuding the country. This is particularly true of the Atlantic States. As trees disappear, especially from the heads of the great water courses, whence much of our lumber comes, the rivers lessen in volume, the annual fall of rain throughout the cleared district diminishes, and as a consequence the agricultural product is reduced. Perfectly accurate statistics show such results as these in European countries, from large portions of which the standing wood has been swept away.

"Should the destruction of timber in this country continue with the present rapidity, and no provisions be made for the planting of forests to replace the loss, all the States will probably become a rainless region like Arizona, where crops can be grown only by the aid of expensive artificial irrigation of the soil. The present consumption of wood in the United States is enormous. One hundred and fifty thousand acres of the best timber is cut every year to supply the demand for railway sleepers alone. For railroad buildings, repairs and cars, the annual expenditure in wood is thirty-eight millions of dollars. In a single year the locomotives in the United States consume fifty-six millions of dollars' worth of wood. There are in the whole country more than four hundred thousand artisians in wood; and if the value of their labor is one thousand dollars a year, the wood industry of the country represents an amount of nearly 500,000,000 dollars per annum. It will be seen, therefore, how extensive are the interests depeudent upon the production of lumber. Probably laws will have eventually to be enacted by State Legislatures to prevent such destruction of the forests as will be likely to result in natural injury to the country, and it may be necessary to encourage the planting of forests to meet the demands of the future."

Meteoric and Auroral Display.—About one hour and a-half before sunrise, on Saturday morning, the most brilliant red aurora prevailed that has been witnessed in this hemisphere since 1835 and 8137. The auroral arch was not above the horizon, neither were the abroral beams or corona visible, but the whole heavens were filled with great beauty and brillancy of the varieties of the red color. There was the bright carmine, the scarlet, the rose and purple color. These colors, mingling with the light of the early and late twilight, produced a singularly beautiful effect. Many meteors were also visible. At seventeen minutes after five o'clock a splendid emerald meteor suddenly burst into the atmosphere, fifteen degrees south-southeast of Sirius. It moved over a sharp curve of twelve degrees in an easterly, then southeasterly direction. It appeared one-half the diameter of the horizontal moon. Its dazzling light cast dark shadows.—N. Y. Herald.

Death of General Wool.

Major General John E. Wool, United States army, died at his home in Troy, N. Y., Wednesday, in the 80th year of his age. Gen. Wool was at one time during the late civil war commander of the military department in which Maryland was included, with headquarters at Baltimore, and of all the various military officers to which our people were subjected in the midst of that unpleasant period, he was the most soldierly and high-minded in tone of any with whom they had experience, imposing no useless indignities or inconveniences, though discharging his duties with fidelity, and in accordance with the trust which, as an officer, he had assumed. In early life he was a clerk in a store at Troy, and afterwards studied law. On the breaking out of the war with Great Britain he procured a captain's commission and joined the forces of Gen. Van. Rensselaer, on the Niagra frontier, distinguishing himself greatly during that struggle. For his services at Queenstown he was promoted to the rank of major, and for his gallant services at Plattsburg he was made lieutenant colonel by brevet. In 1832 he was sent to Europe to obtain information on military matters, and was present at the siege of Antwerp by the French. In 1836 he superintended the removal of the Indians from the Cherokee country to the Arkansas; and in 1838 he was placed in command of the Maine frontier during the troubles growing out of the Maine boundary question. In 1841 he had risen by successive steps to the rank of brigadier general. During the war with Mexico General Wool was attached to the army under General Taylor, and it was to his skill and energy that the Americans were greatly indebted for the victory of Buena Vista, for which he was appointed a major-general by brevet. Since the Mexican war General Wool's chief service has been the command of the north-eastern division of the army, except his short period of command here during the late war.

Female Students at Clinics—Disgraceful Behaviour of Male Students.—Last week twenty-seven young ladies attended clinical lectures at the Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia, for the first time in the history of the institution. After the lecture some two or three hundred male students, by a concerted plan, and in spite of the efforts of the managers of the hospital to preserve order, ranged themselves so as to occupy both sides of the footwalks inside of the hospital enclosure, which compelled the twenty-seven lady students to take the cartway, and thus pass between the double line of the male students, while the latter saluted them with taunts and jeers, mock applause and real hisses.

Civilizing the Red Man.—At Omaha there are three Pawnee Indians under arrest for murder. The Republican's local says;

"The Indian braves now confined in the county jail, are getting very restless as their trial draws near. Night and day they sing their death song at times.—Wild, gutteral, moaning cries issue from their throats as if they were deserted by every friend, and all hope had gone.—Again shrieks and yells of agony and despair drowning every other noise in the jail. They sit in a circle, moody and silent, at times a dull, meaningless expression overspreading their tawny faces. Of a sudden one of them begins the dismal groans and chantings, when all join in. The sight is pitiful indeed."

The Oldest Officer.—Rear Admiral Stewart, who died in Philadelphia on Saturday, was the oldest officer of the service, either in the army or navy, having entered the navy in 1798. Rear Admiral Wm. B. Shubrick is now the oldest in either branch of the service, having entered in 1806. The oldest commission in the army is that of General Sylvanus Thayer, who entered the service in 1808.

Those who black their boots on Saturday night with ordinary blacking, don't have much shine on Sunday, as the polish fades off: but the shine of DOBBINS' ELECTRIC-ING lasts Saturday night and all day Sunday. It beats any other Blacking made.

Manufactured only by J. B. Dobbins, at his immense Soap and Blacking Works, Sixth Street and Germantown Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. For sale by B. B. PERKINS & SON, Chestertown. Jan. 2, 1869.
