

The Farmers' Column.

Farmers' Clubs.

The value of a Farmers' Club in any locality is very great. It is easy to get one up, and now that the leisure time of winter is here, those farmers who take a real interest in the advancement of their profession should lose no time in getting up Clubs. A few intelligent, stirring men in each township, ward, or community of settlers can easily start and keep going a good Club. When the thing is undertaken, let active men take hold, and once started, keep up the life of the matter by intelligent and useful discussions on any and all subjects connected with agriculture that may come under their observation. One proved is worth a thousand theories. Above all, keep out those noisy fellows who will bring the discussion of political matters into everything they can, in order to subserve their own interests and gain a foothold in some paltry district or ward election.

The rules need be but few and simple. First, a Secretary should be appointed, whose business it will be to keep a book in which to record the names of members and the minutes of each meeting, taking notes of any valuable suggestions or facts that may come out during the discussion. If a school-house or town-hall is near, it may be used for the place of meeting. If not, each can in his turn have the meeting at his house, if he has a room large enough. There should be a chairman for the first meeting, and at each meeting a chairman should be chosen for the next meeting, and the subject of discussion fixed upon. At each meeting, let the chairman commence by giving out the subject to be discussed, and when that is done with, let any member give a new subject, or relate any practical experience he may have met with. They may regulate the times of meeting according to their ability to find subjects to discuss.—Canada Farmer.

Plaster and its Uses.

Plaster in the different branches of science is known by different names. In the arts it is plaster; in mineralogy it is gypsum; in chemistry it is sulphate of lime. Sulphuric acid has an affinity for ammonia, and when it finds ammonia it breaks up its partnership with the lime and combines with the ammonia, forming sulphate of ammonia, and this is non-volatile. The lime finds a companion when deserted by the acid, in carbonic acid, forming carbonate of lime.

Hence it will be seen that when the farmer has ammonia in his soil, put there by himself in manure, or in any other manner, liable to waste, the plaster will fix it there, and in all such cases it can be applied to the ground with profit. The odor about stables and manure heaps, is escaping ammonia, and the farmer can judiciously use a little plaster in both places, saving the ammonia for his land.

Plaster saves to the soil nitrogen, one of the chief mineral elements entering into the growth of plants; ammonia is three parts hydrogen and one part nitrogen. Ammonia escapes from decaying vegetation wherever it is found, and is suspended in the air, and when after a long dry spell and considerable quantities of it has ascended, the first rain brings it to the earth, and if there is a little plaster in the clover field, the ammonia never rises again.

The very study into the uses of plaster shows that the farmer should be a student, and in some degree a man of science. He must learn that in doctoring his soil something else than mineral substances may be needed. He may need organic substances as well, and to know this is the duty of the farmer.

Boughton White Wheat.

To the Eds. of the Maryland Farmer:

In looking over the July number of the Maryland Farmer, I see from an article copied from the Iowa Homestead that the above variety of wheat is represented as having originated in Maryland, but knowing this to be a mistake, and thinking probably that some of your readers may wish to know its real origin, I take the liberty to state that it was first introduced by Mr. Chas. H. Boughton, of Essex Co., Va., who about twelve or fifteen years ago, in passing through his growing wheat, several weeks before it was fully ripe, saw a single bunch of several heads which was entirely ripe, which he gathered and for several years cultivated in his garden, and when he had grown enough to seed a small lot, introduced it to the public. Although our friend Boughton has been unfortunate in having lost much of his property during the war, he should not be deprived of the honor of having introduced one of the finest varieties of early white wheat. Yours, truly, W.

Essex, Va., Dec. 7th, 1869.

Education of the Farmer.

No man is so high as to be independent of the success of this great interest; no man is so low as not to be affected by its prosperity or decline. The cultivation of the earth is the most important labor of man. Man may be civilized, in some degree, without great progress in manufactures, and with little commerce with his distant neighbors, but without cultivation of the earth, he is, in all countries, a savage. Until he gives up the chase and fixes himself to some place and seeks a living from the earth, he is a roaming barbarian. When tillage begins, other arts follow. The farmers, therefore, are the founders of human civilization.—Daniel Webster.

—:o:—

SMART GIRL.—Miss Rebecca Cox, of Amite Co., Miss., who graduated in June, 1867, returned home in January, 1868, hired a negro man 70 years old, two of his daughters, and one boy not old enough to plow. The net results of farming operations last year, paying expenses of place and hands, were: 8 banks of potatoes, 600 bushels of corn, and $909 in cash, from — of cotton, over expenses.

JOHNNY TEARFUL.

BY GEORGE COOPER.

I'll tell you of the queerest lad:
They called him Johnny Tearful:
A verry sorry way he had
Of never being cheerful.
He cried the moment he got up;
He made a din at dinner;
With tears enough to fill a cup
He never grew much thinner.

He cried in spite of all you said
To keep the tears from streaming;
He cried while he was put to bed;
He cried while he was dreaming.
His doleful eyes of pigmy size
Were dim with overflowing;
A walking shower-bath he was—
The shower forever going.

They told him that the moon was round
Enough—that set him bawling;
He scared the kittens off the ground
By constant caterwauling.
But though his tears fell thick and fast,
They never did his woes end;
Folks wondered how the drops could last;
They trickled down his nose end.

His kites were never made to suit;
Of course that made him bellow,
He cried for green, forbidden fruit—
This aggravating fellow.
Why, if you only called his name,
In tears you made him jump up;
It really was a perfect shame,
The number he could pump up.

What cared he for the spring-time days
For flowers, or this or that bird?
Why, when he went his moody ways
Each robin, jay, and cat-bird
Flew up and shook its downy head,
While gayly hummed the May-bee;
And this is what the birdies said:
"Cheer up, cheer up, cry-baby."

And now poor Johnny's fate I sing:
He rose one morning early,
And in his eyes—the usual thing—
There stood the tear-drops pearly.
He kicked, and splashed the water round
They brought to wash his face in,
Then quietly dissolved! they found
One huge tear in the basin!

American Slang.

The utter ignorance of the English of the signification of American slang expressions often causes some curious scenes between them and Yankee buyers in England, who seem to think that because their language generally is understood, all their American idioms will be. An expert buyer, junior partner in one of our large American firms, at a recent visit to his correspondent in an English manufacturing city, was complimented by the senior partner of the house, who insisted on personally showing his goods to his American purchaser.

"There, sir," said Dowlas, throwing out a roll of goods, "what do you think of that?"

"Oh! that's played out!" said the American.

"It's what?" said Bull.

"It's played, I tell you," said his customer.

"Played!" Ah! really—we call it plad, h'yar in England. But this isn't plaid—plad, you know."

"No," said the Yankee. "I don't mean plad. "I mean 'ter say it's "gone up."

"Oh, no," said the Britisher, "not at all; it has not gone up—quite the contrary. We've taken off from the price."

"Over the left; it's threepence too high now."

"No doubt of it; but our neighbors you know on the left are not manufacturers, you know."

"Very likely; but I don't care to be 'stuck' when I get home."

"Really. Most extraordinary. Is it as dangerous in New York as the newspapers say?"

"Yes; but I don't want these goods. I've got some already that will 'knock the spots out of 'em.'"

"But, my dear sir, there's no spots on the goods, I assure yah. They are perfect."

"Well, well; suppose we 'switch off' on these goods and try something else."

"Certainly!" And the Englishman, to the infinite amusement of the American, called a clerk with a wisp-broom and directed him to 'switch off' any dust he could find, while he proceeded to show something else."

"There," said the Englishman triumphantly spreading out another fabric; "there's the handsomest piece of goods in England, 'arf a guinea a yard."

"I can't see it," said his customer.

"Can't see it!" Why, you are looking straight at it. However, suppose you try the light of this window."

"No; I don't mean that," said the American. "I haven't got the stamps for such goods."

"Stamps?" No stamps required but a bill stamp, which we are happy to furnish."

This misunderstanding might have continued longer, had not one of the younger members of the house, seeing its senior's perplexity, rescued the American and "put him through" after the manner of his countrymen.

☞ A large Newfoundland dog in Buffalo after watching for some minutes a fight between two little curs, suddenly caught up one of them by the neck and trotted off with it, keeping a firm hold upon him until his angry passions had time to cool.

☞ A "big Indian" strayed away from his camp and got lost. Inquiring the way back, he was asked "Indian lost?" "No," said he, disdainfully, "Indian no lost—wigwam lost." Striking his breast he exclaimed, "Indian here!"

☞ A South Carolina negro orator said: "We'll neber desert de ole flag boys—neber! We hab lib under it for eighteen hundred and sixty-nine years, and we'll die for it now!"
