

The Farmers' Column.

☞ Extract from a report of Dr. GEO. W. DORSEY, President of the Calvert County Agricultural Society:

I would also suggest to this Society the propriety of a trial, on a small scale, of broom corn as a money crop. Take for instance one acre and manure it well for broom corn, and one acre similarly manured for tobacco. Carefully noting the expense of cultivation, and the preparation of each crop for market, and when sold, after deducting expenses, show the net profits of each. The Society must see the importance, in the present disorganized condition of our labor system, of trying something else as a valuable adjunct to the never-ending tobacco crop. More especially is this necessary on lands not adapted to the growth of a fine article of tobacco—on such lands the broom flourishes the best. I find it is now quoted at from 15 to 18 cts. per lb., and it is estimated that from 400 to 1000 lbs. can be grown to the acre, depending upon the quality of the land, and the amount of manure used. From this statement it seems to me that there would be more profit on rich and heavy lands in the culture of broom corn, than in tobacco—at least it is worth a trial.

We have now been organized 5 months, and it seems to me that it is high time that we should go fully to work. Essays should be prepared, by gentlemen appointed for the purpose, upon the culture and management of the different staples of our country—showing the expense of cultivation, and the net profits to be derived from an acre of land. These should be read before the Society, and be open to criticism and be open to every member. This would lead to discussion, and thereby elicit facts and improvements in our farming oporations, which would otherwise remain hidden from view. In this way gentlemen, our minds would become more enlightened on the subject of our calling, and at the same time create an interest in our Society which could never be attained in any other way.

What we most want at the present time, is brain work, to lessen our physical labor, and energy and enterprise to carry out the workings of the intellect. We should have a committee appointed to investigate the merits of the different kind of plows, harrows, and cultivators now in use, and also inquire into the advantages to be derived from the adoption of any labor-saving implements or machinery, adapted to our crops. The most approved implements of the present day are no higher priced than the more inferior. A committee should also be appointed to investigate the merits of the different kinds of thorough-bred stock, whether for beef or the dairy, taking into consideration the cost of raising and keeping the same. This last is very important to us, for it must be acknowledged that we are sadly behind the rest of the world in this particular. A committee should be appointed to investigate most thoroughly the difficult subject of labor among us, and set forth their views in a report to be made at some future day to this Society.

I have thus, gentlemen, cut out some work for you to do. And I think there are none present who will gainsay the importance of the positions I have assumed. Then let there be no shrinking from duty, but let every one be willing to contribute his mite for the common good. Let us all go to work with a zeal and an energy that must raise the standard of our farming and planting operations and thereby greatly improve our pecuniary resources.

Orchard Grass.

As inquiries have been made with regard to the value of orchard grass, and the best method of cultivating it, I will give my experience with it. I do not consider it a very desirable crop to raise alone, as it is rather coarse, and tends to form in bunches or bogs; but mixed with red clover, it is exceedingly valuable, and for these reasons: It blossoms and is fit to cut at the same time with clover; it never lodges, and prevents the clover from lodging; it towers up some two feet above the top of the clover, adding much to the weight of the crop, and makes a better quality of hay—the crop thus raised cures much easier than clear clover; it keeps much better in the cock in case of rain: it can go in the barn sooner, and is not liable to injure in the mow. No one, who has never tried it, can imagine the amount and value of an acre's yield of this mixture, and should it be stated it might be deemed incredible.

Now for the method of putting down such a meadow: To obtain the very best results, it should not be put down with any other crop. Anything, whether animal or vegetable, to do first-rate, needs to have a good start. Let the ground be made rich—the richer the better—plowed deep, and mellowed very fine. If sandy land, not subject to heaving by frost, sow about the first of September; if clay, as early in spring as the ground will work well. Sow one bushel of orchard grass seed and six quarts of clover seed to the acre. Sow the orchard grass seed one way, and cross-sow with the clover. Cover the seed with a fine bush or a light harrow, with teeth about two inches long, so as not to cover too deep, and leave the surface smooth. It is just as easy cutting six tons to the acre, by two mowings, as it is two or three. J. H. WOODBURN.

Kingsville, O., March, 1870.

—:o:—

FISTULA IN HORSES.—The opening should be made large and deep enough, so that the matter can be swabbed out by a piece of sponge tied to a small stick. A portion of the following mixture should be introduced daily: one ounce of creosote, one ounce of turpentine, and two ounces of olive oil. Before applying the medicine, the cavity and surroundings should be cleaned with soap and water, with as little friction to the parts as possible. Where deep fistulas, or caries of the bones exist, it is proper to call the aid of a skilful veterinarian as soon as possible.

INTERCESSION.

Ave Cæsar Imperator, morituram te saluto.

BY ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURE.

I.

O Death, a little more, and then the worm;
A little longer, O Death, a little yet,
Before the grave gape and the grave-worm fret;
Before the sanguine spotted hand infirm
Be rottenness, and that foul brain, the germ
Of all ill things and thoughts, be stopped and set;
A little while, O Death, ere he forget,
A small space more of life, a little term,
A little longer ere he and thou be met,
Ere in that hand that fed thee to thy mind
The poison-cup of life be overset;
A little respite of disastrous breath,
Till the soul lift up her lost eyes, and find
Nor God, nor help, nor hope, but thee,
O Death.

II.

Shall a man die before his dying day,
Death? and for him though the utter day be nigh,
Not yet, not yet we give him leave to die,
We give him grace not yet that men should say
He is dead, wiped out, perished and past away,
Till the last bitterness of life go by.
Thou shalt not slay him; till those last dregs run dry,
O, thou last lord of life! thou shalt not slay.
Let the lips live a little while and lie
The hand a little, and falter, and fail of strength,
And the soul shudder and sicken at the sky;
Yea, let him live, though God nor man would let
Save for the curse' sake; then at bitter length,
Lord, we will yield him to thee, but not yet.

III.

Hath he not deeds to do and days to see
Yet ere the day that is to see him dead?
Beats there no brain yet in the poisonous head,
Throbs there no treason? if no such thing there be,
If no such thought, surely this is not he.
Look to the hands then: are the hands not red?
What are the shadows about this man's bed?
Death, was not this the cup-bearer to thee?
Nay, let him live then, till in this life's stead
Even he shall pray for that thou hast to give;
Till seeing his hopes and not his memories fled
Even he shall cry upon thee a bitter cry,
That life is worse than death; then let him live,
Till death seem worse than life; then let him die.

IV.

O watcher at the guardless gate of kings,
O doorkeepers that serving at their feast
Hast in thine hand their doomsday drink, and scest,
With eyeless sight the soul of unseen things;
Thou in whose ears the dumb time coming sings,
Death, priest and king that maketh of king and priest
A name, a dream, a less thing than the least,
Hover awhile above him with closed wings,
Till the coiled soul, an evil snake-shaped beast,
Eat its base bodily lair of flesh away;
If haply, or ever its cursed life have ceased,
Or ever thy cold hands cover his head
From sight of France, and freedom and broad day,
He may see thee and wither and be dead.

Paris, Sept., 1869. [Fortnightly Review.

Sleep and Death.

"To live without fearing death," said Hufeland, is the only means of living happy and dying at a good old age. People who dread death seldom attain longevity. If death presents itself to us under a repulsive and terrifying aspect, it is solely owing to our habits and prejudices having perverted our feelings. Montaigne justly said that it is the darkening of the room, the faces full of grief and desolation, the moaning and crying, that make death terrific. Civilization, by investing death with the most lugurbrious associations that it can conjure up, has also contributed to rendering it a hideous spectre. It is the reverse with the patient. In nine cases out of ten it is not only a relief, but almost a sense of voluptuousness.—Sleep daily teaches us the reality of death. "Sleep and death are twin," said the poets of antiquity. Why, then, should we fear death, when we daily invoke its brother as a friend and a consolation? "Life," said Buffon, "begins to fail long before it is utterly gone." "Why, then, should we dread the last moment, when we are prepared for its advent by so many other moments of a similar character? Death is as natural as life. Both come to us in the same way, without our consciousness, without our being able to determine the advent of either. No one knows the exact moment when he goes to sleep, none will know the exact moment of his death. It is certain that death is generally a pleasurable feeling. Lucan used to say that he would be unsupportable to man if the gods had not hidden from him the happiness he would experience in dying. Tullius Marcellous, Francis Suarez, and the philosopher La Mettrie, all spoke of the voluptuousness of their last moments.—Such are the consolations which philosophy presents to timid minds that dread death. We need not say what much higher and loftier consolations await the Christian who is firm and steadfast in his faith, and has before him the prospect of eternal life.

"Who's there?" said Robinson, one cold winter night, disturbed in his repose by some one knocking at the street door. "A friend," was the answer. "What do you want?" "Want to stay here all night." "Queer taste, ain't it? But stay there, by all means," was the benevolent reply.

The right man in the right place—A husband at home in the evening.

TO THE WORKING CLASS.—We are now prepared to furnish all classes with constant employment at home, the whole of the time or for the spare moments. Business new, light and profitable. Persons of either sex easily earn from 50c. to $5 per evening, and a proportional sum by devoting their whole time to the business. Boys and girls earn nearly as much as men. That all who see this notice may send their address, and test the business, we make this unparalleled offer: To such as are not well satisfied, we will send $1 to pay for the trouble of writing. Full particulars, a valuable sample, which will do to commence work on, and a copy of The People's Literary Companion—one of the largest and best family newspapers published—all sent free by mail.—Reader, if you want permanent, profitable work, address E. C. ALLEN & CO., Augusta, Maine. Feb. 5,-3m.

LORILLARD'S "EUREKA," Smoking Tobacco is an excellent article of granulated Virginia; wherever introduced it is universally admired. It is put up in handsome muslin bags, in which orders for Meerschaum Pipes are daily packed.

LORILLARD'S Yacht Club Smoking Tobacco classed by all who consume it as the "finest of all;" it is made of the choicest leaf grown; it is anti-nervous in its effects, as the Nicotine has been extracted; it leaves no disagreeable taste after smoking; it is very mild, light in color and weight, hence one pound will last as long as 3 of ordinary tobacco. In this brand we also pack orders every day for first quality Meerschaum Pipes. Try it and convince yourself it is all it claims to be, "THE FINEST OF ALL."

LORILLARD'S CENTURY Chewing Tobacco This brand of Fine Cut chewing tobacco has no equal or superior anywhere. It is without doubt the best chewing tobacco in the country.

LORILLARD'S SNUFFS have now been in general use in the United States over 110 years, and still acknowledged "the best" wherever used.

If your storekeeper does not have these articles for sale, ask him to get them; they are sold by respectable jobbers almost everywhere.
