

The Farmers' Column.

How Much Grass Seed to Sow Per Acre.

As the number of pounds in a bushel of seed varies in different States, I shall designate the amount to be sowed by quarts, instead of pounds, there being thirty-two quarts in a bushel in every State. No man can lay down a rule which will indicate the most proper quantity to be sowed in all places, and on all kinds of soil in different conditions. Grass seed of some kinds may be sowed too thickly, although this is seldom done. Red clover may be sowed too thick for producing a good yield of seed, as there will only be about so many spears of grass flourish, even when the seed is sowed in great abundance. When the seed is applied so abundantly that there is not room for a spear to grow from every kernel, a portion of the young grass dies, the strongest spears overpowering the feebler ones, and maintaining the pre-eminence over them.

When the country first settled, our fathers said four quarts of timothy seed was enough for one acre. If the soil is in fine tilth, four quarts is sufficient to seed one acre, well, if the seed be sowed evenly. Unless it is desirable to raise a certain kind of seed, land should not be stocked down with only one kind of seed. If the soil be in good state of fertility, and seed be sown too thin, some kinds of grass will tiller, and cover the ground tolerably well. Seed should always be sown thicker for pasture, than is necessary for meadow, whether it is to be cut for seed or hay. If the soil is rather lumpy, and not very fertile, twice as much seed is necessary per acre, as will be needful, when the surface is mellow, free from lumps and covered with a fine, vegetable mold. A farmer must learn to exercise sound judgment on this subject without specific directions from books. However, I will state the proper quantity for general seeding, which may be varied to suit the quality of the soil, or for meadows and pastures.

Three quarts of timothy, sixteen of orchard-grass, and twelve of Kentucky blue grass will seed any acre of ground well.

When early red clover and orchard grass are sowed together, four quarts of the former and sixteen of the latter will be sufficient, if the soil is not too poor to produce one and a half tons of hay per acre.

When it is desirable to sow nothing but red clover, either early or late, six to eight quarts per acre will seed the ground well, if sowed evenly.

When orchard-grass only is sowed, not less than two bushels will be found sufficient for one acre, as the seeds are large. Better sow three bushels per acre, than less than two.

Kentucky blue grass seed being bulky, and the plants inclined to spread rapidly, one and a half bushel per acre will be found sufficient, if the soil is mellow, and in a good state of fertility.

Hungarian grass being disposed to grow coarse when the seed is sowed thin, and firm when sowed thick, when no other seed is mingled with it, not less than half a bushel should be sowed per acre. And one bushel will give better satisfaction.—S. E. T., in Working Farmer.

—:o:—

Book Farming.

There are yet a few of the "old school" farmers who have a prejudice against reading, or, as they call it, "book farming;" but I believe the time has passed when it is doubted that intelligence and research produce beneficial and profitable results upon any subject to which they are applied; nor is agriculture so poor as to furnish an exception to this rule.

Webster, when speaking of the importance of agriculture, said: "Agriculture feeds us, to a great extent clothes us, and without it we could not have manufactures, and we should have no commerce; these all stand together, but they stand like pillars—the largest in the centre—and that largest is agriculture."

But, although we know that no man can be made a good farmer by a book, we cannot admit that the best farmer cannot, may not, sometimes find useful hints in a book.

The best farmer cannot know every article of practice that is followed in every part of the country; and as most practices are discovered by what is called chance or accident, it is clear the discovery cannot be generally known until it is carried abroad.

A farmer who travels appreciates the information which he receives in conversation with other farmers, and by observation of field labor.

Such a farmer possesses advantages over him who always remains at home, that is within the circle of his markets.

Now, the object of an agricultural book or paper, at stated times, is to carry hints, suggestions or discoveries, important or unimportant, to the home of the farmer, that he who stays at home may possess all the advantages of him who goes abroad; and that he who goes abroad may compare what he has seen with what he reads, and decide which practice is best suited to his particular purpose; or perhaps, when comparing the hints of others with his own knowledge, he may discover new plans superior to both.

In this manner a good agricultural journal is the means of disseminating throughout the country practices which otherwise would have been confined to the section where they first obtained. If a farmer wishes a good agricultural paper he should support it by writing for it, and thus assisting to make it good.—Cor. Germantown Telegraph.

HOG CHOLERA.—Take the Polygonum Punctatum, or common smartweed—of which there are two varieties, the large and small—use both combined, or the small variety alone; make a strong decoction by boiling; add to this slop, and got the hogs to drink all you can; the effect is almost magical; your hog improves, sheds off and fattens beyond expectation.

It is a fine thing to give hogs that have no cholera to make them improve faster.—Maryland Farmer.

THE CARPET-BAG MILLER.

There was an old man and he lived all alone,
With his three sons and they were all grown;
This old man he made his will,
And all that he had was a little old mill.

First he called his eldest son,
Son, Oh, son, my race is run;
If I miller you should make,
Pray tell unto me what toll you'd take.

Father, father, my name's Beck,
Of every bushel I'd take a peck;
You fool, you fool, the old man cried,
That's no such toll as a man can ride.

Next he called his second son,
Son, oh, son, my race is run,
If I a miller you should make,
Pray tell unto me what toll you'd take.

Father, father, my name's Graf,
Of every bushel I'd take the half,
You fool, you fool, the old man cried,
That's no such toll as a man can ride.

Then he called his youngest son,
Son, oh, son, my race is run,
If I a miller you should make,
Pray tell unto me what toll you'd take.

Father, father, my name's Jack,
I'd take all the grain and swear to the sack;
Hallelujah! the old woman cried,
And the old man shut up his eyes and died.

A New Hampshire Judge of the Olden Time.

John Dudley, of Raymond, N. H., who was a Judge in that State from 1785 to 1809, was a remarkable man. Having no legal education whatever, and but little learning of any kind, yet he possessed a discriminating mind, a retentive memory, a patience which no labor could tire, and integrity proof alike against threats and flattery. He was, says the Exeter News Letter, a resolute, strong-minded man, intent on doing substantial justice in every case, though often indifferent to the forms and requirements of law. He was withal, very heedless of grammar, but never failed to make himself understood. "You may laugh," said the late Judge Theophilus Parsons, "at his law, and ridicule his language, but Dudley is, after all, the best Judge I ever knew 'in New Hampshire." A specimen of his style has been preserved in the following conclusion of one of his charges to the jury, grammatical peculiarities excepted:

"You have heard, gentlemen of the jury, what has been said in this case by the lawyers, the rascals; but no, I will not abuse them. It is their business to make a good case for their clients; they are paid for it; and they have done in this case well enough. But you and I, gentlemen of the jury, have something else to consider. They talk of law. Why, gentlemen, it is not law we want, but justice. They would govern us by the common law of England. Trust me, gentlemen, common sense is a much better guide for us—the common sense of Raymond, Epping, Exeter and the other towns which have sent us here to try this case between two of our neighbors. A clear head and an honest heart are worth more than all the lawyers.

"There was one good thing said at the bar. It was from Shakspeare, an English player, I believe. No matter: it is good enough almost to be in the Bible. It is this: 'Be just and fear not.' That, gentlemen, is the law in this case, and law enough in any case. 'Be just and fear not.' It is our business to do justice between the parties, not by any quirks of the law out of Coke or Blackstone, books that I never read, and never will; but by common sense and common honesty as between man and man. That is our business, and the curse of God is upon us if we neglect, or evade, or turn aside from it.

"And now, Mr. Sheriff, take out the jury; and you, Mr. Foreman, do not keep us waiting with idle talk, of which there has been too much already, about matters which have nothing to do with the merits of the case Give us an honest verdict, of which, as plain, common sense men, you need not be ashamed."

A Word on Nurses.

It is a prevalent, but most egregious error, that the mother is always the best nurse for a child. This may be true in some exceptional instances, but there are many women who are excellent mothers, and yet most indifferent nurses, so far as baby tending is involved. No mother, with older children demanding her constant supervision, and a household requiring her management, can relinquish those other just as responsible duties, for the cautious dandling, the busy idleness, in which the proper care of an infant consists. She who attempts to be Jack of all domestic trades, will often be found to be master of none.

This comes properly and inevitably under the maternal eye and mental guidance, but the physical strain upon the spine and arms, and tax upon undeveloped muscles, should devolve upon a younger and stronger physique than is possessed by the average type of the American matron.

A good nurse is as much a rara avis as a good baby—one frequently makes the other. However, the best specimens of the class are those of a well balanced, nervous and moral nature, the serene and cheerful, healthful and hopeful woman, with little mental activity, and just a soupcon of sentiment. If your nurse does not naturally love your baby, put her to housework or send her away at once; and if the baby does not stretch his dimpled fists and leap at her coming, take the same mode of procedure.

☞ Brains are worth nothing in these times, but shoulder-straps command a high premium. The salary of the Chief Justice of the United States is $6,500; the salary of the General of the Armies of the United States is $18,750! It makes a great difference whether a man is a learned and able jurist or whether he is simply the leader of a torch and turpentine expedition "to the sea." Phil. Sheridan, whose ruthless destruction of the beautiful Shenandoah Valley is two well-known, receives more than twice as much salary as the Chief Justice.—Pomeroy's Democrat.

TO THE WORKING CLASS.—We are now prepared to furnish all classes with constant employment at home, the whole of the time or for the spare moments. Business new, light and profitable. Persons of either sex easily earn from 50c. to $5 per evening, and a proportional sum by devoting their whole time to the business. Boys and girls earn nearly as much as men. That all who see this notice may send their address, and test the business, we make this unparalleled offer: To such as are not well satisfied, we will send $1 to pay for the trouble of writing. Full particulars, a valuable sample, which will do to commence work on, and a copy of The People's Literary Companion—one of the largest and best family newspapers published—all sent free by mail.—Reader, if you want permanent, profitable work, address E. C. ALLEN & CO., Augusta, Maine. Feb. 5,-3m.

LORILLARD'S "EUREKA," Smoking Tobacco is an excellent article of granulated Virginia; wherever introduced it is universally admired. It is put up in handsome muslin bags, in which orders for Meerschaum Pipes are daily packed.

LORILLARD'S Yacht Club Smoking Tobacco classed by all who consume it as the "finest of all;" it is made of the choicest leaf grown; it is anti-nervous in its effects, as the Nicotine has been extracted; it leaves no disagreeable taste after smoking; it is very mild, light in color and weight, hence one pound will last as long as 3 of ordinary tobacco. In this brand we also pack orders every day for first quality Meerschaum Pipes. Try it and convince yourself it is all it claims to be, "THE FINEST OF ALL."

LORILLARD'S CENTURY Chewing Tobacco This brand of Fine Cut chewing tobacco has no equal or superior anywhere. It is without doubt the best chewing tobacco in the country.

LORILLARD'S SNUFFS have now been in general use in the United States over 110 years, and still acknowledged "the best" wherever used.

If your storekeeper does not have these articles for sale, ask him to get them; they are sold by respectable jobbers almost everywhere.
