The Radical Party.

Evidences are surely abundant, which make it probable, that the Radical party will fail to elect their candidate in 1872. The late Congressional elections prove that notwithstanding the large accessions to their party from the negro vote, they have lost ground materially, and these losses must necessarily be increased at another election, from their cause. Of the Radical party itself and the members which they elected to Congress it may be stated that they are widely divided, and it is by no means certain, that Western Republicans will not unite their votes with the Democratic members of the House of Representatives and secure the speaker.

The probabilities of the Radical defeat is so strong that they will lose all that large class of voters who are certain to be on the strong side if they can; and their sensation measures have failed. The enfranchisement of the negro was their last card, and on it they have certainly lost. Even the Baltimore American says the negro vote has been an element of weakness rather than strength. The sole object of this move, the continuance of the Radical party in power has been too apparent, and it is too generally abhorrent to the white race. It has been the turning point at which the Radical leaders have failed to carry their masses by the crack of the party whip. And now comes that reaction with which the people of this country always repay their discarded leaders. Radicalism will soon be most offensive to those who have through it been led into Republican measures which they already loathe. In fact, we believe the most zealous opponents of the Radical party will be those who have but recently assisted in accomplishing their defeat.

THE COURTS IN UTAH.—The recent rulings of the United courts in Utah seem to be bringing the Mormon question to a crisis. The great difficulty in the way of executing the federal laws in Mr. Brigham Young's colony has been the existence of a territorial code and rules of practice, a territorial attorney general and other officers elected by the Mormon Legislature, territorial marshals to summon Mormon juries, and Mormon probabate courts upon which extraordinary powers had been conferred by the Mormon Legislature. With the machinery of justice thus in their own hands, the Saints have been able to defy the statute and common law, and protect their people in the commission of any outrage upon the Gentiles or any violation of the acts of Congress.

All these points have been before the United States Courts this autumn, and a decision has been given against the Mormons on all of them. It have been held that jurors are to be summoned by the United States marshal, that a territorial attorney general has no locus standi in the federal courts, that the Mormon codes and rules of procedure are not to be recognized, and that the jurisdiction of the inferior courts is limited, not by the laws of the Territoral Legislature, but by the laws of the United States. The importance of these decisions, if they be sustained by the higher tribunals, can be seen at a glance. Let the courts declare the law, and the government will take care to execute it; let juries convict, and there need be no insuperable difficulty in carrying out the proper penalties. The Gentile population will of course increase rapidly now that the Territory has been opened by the railway, and with this increase the difficulty in obtaining honest juries will disappear.

But Chief Justice McKean has dealt another blow at the power of the prophet which will prove hardly less serious than the recent decisions respecting the courts. The law provides that when an alien applies to be naturalized the court shall first ascertain to its satisfaction "that he is a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order of the same," and under this provision the Chief Justice has refused to naturalize polygamists. This will probably have a perceptible effect in checking the growth of the Mormon State.
