THE APPIAN WAY.

BY T. BUCHANAN READ.

The dust of glory all around me lies,
The ashes of dead nations and their kings:
I hear no voice save what from out the skies
The lark shakes down from his invisible wings.

A funeral aspect fills the whole campaign—
Their tomb-like flocks the distant mounds disclose;
Like scattered blocks of granite on the plain,
The dove-hued oxen Virgil sang repose.

The cities seated on surrounding mounts,
Or what were cities, glimmer on the steeps
Like cemeteries, and the fancy counts
In vain their dead for whom no mortal weeps.

All Rome to-day sits on the buried past,
Her later walls with sculptured blocks are flecked:
The spoilers toiled for ages fierce and fast,
Then left the rest to ruin and neglect.

And still beneath their tread what wonders lie!—
Brave statues of the godlike and their gods,
And columns that might corridor the sky,
While scarce a spade upturns the shallow clods.

Unearth their marble wonders, with their high
Immortal lessons, to awake men here,
And elsewhere to arrest, as they sweep by,
Ambition's armies in their mad career.

We to their chariots chain the fiery team
Of elements to gain the realms of gold,
Let them behold the more enduring dream
Of Amphion-sculptors in the days of old.

Exhume these silent teachers from the dust,
And then—— But hold! I see around me strewn,
O'er miles and miles of ruins, a thick crust
Of shattered remnants in dark ages hewn.

For wanton pastime or for kilns of lime!
The very mortar in St. Peter's wall
Hath had its votaries in that grand old time
When Poesy and Art o'erlorded all.

But that is past. What sound is this I hear
More than the lark's? As from a mournful lyre
A weird, complaining murmur fills my ear:
I look above, and lo! the æolian wire

Sings in the wind. It is the lightning's track
Stretching o'er sepulchres, which serve for posts,
And yonder the swift train weaves forth and back.
Thou highway of the dead! where are thy ghosts?

The electric fire that reaches Rome to-day
May give at best a poor galvanic thrill—
The train that streams along the iron way
May bring but mourners to the sevenfold hill:

All this may be, but still within me burns
The prayerful dream and hope that even I
May see her rise above her funeral urns,
And throw her long-worn sackcloth bravely by.

A NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENT.

Some years ago, a Quaker knight of the shears and thimble, who exercised his avocation in Canterbury, was imposed upon by an adroit coundrel, who contrived to get a suit of clothes on credit, and afterwards decamped without paying for them. The Quaker was too poor to lose the debt; but like too many others of his cloth, he had apparently no other alternative. The account was placed upon his books, and soon forgotten. About five years afterward he was examining his old records of debt and credit, and profit and loss, when his attention was attracted to this account, and all the circumstances attending it came fresh to mind. Suddenly an odd thought suggested itself.

"I'll try an experiment," said he to himself; perhaps I may succeed in catching the rogue and getting my pay."

He immediately prepared an advertisement, in substance as follows, which he inserted in the Kent Herald:

"If Mr. Henry Webber, who was in Canterbury about the month of August, in the year 1853, will send his address to the editor of this paper, he will hear of something to advantage."

Having instructed the editor not to disclose his name to the rogue if he should call, but to request the latter to leave his address, the Quaker patiently awaited the result of his experiment. In a short time he was informed by a note from the editor that the individual alluded to in the advertisement, having arrived from London, might be found at the 'Rose Hotel.'

The tailor lost no time in preparing a transcript of his account, not forgetting to charge interest from the time that the debt was incurred. Taking a bailiff with him, who bore a legal process suited to the occasion, he soon arrived at the lodgings of the swindler. The bailiff was instructed to stand off at a little distance till a signal should indicate to him the time for his approach.

The Quaker entered the coffee-room and rang the bell; and when the servant appeared requested him to inform the gentleman of whom he was in search, that a friend wished to speak with him. The waiter obeyed the summons, and soon both debtor and creditor were looking each other in the face.

"How dost thou do?" kindly inquired the Quaker, in a bland tone. "Perhaps thou dost not know me?"

"I believe I have not had the pleasure of your acquaintance," politely answered our hero, with a forced smile.

"Dost thou remember purchasing a suit of clothes several years ago of a poor tailor in this city, and forgetting to pay for them?' asked the Quaker.

"O, no!" said the gentleman, blushing slightly; you must be mistaken in the person. It cannot possibly be me that you wished to find."

But the Quaker was not to be shaken off by this denial of his debtor's identity.

"Ah, John! I know thee well. Thou art the very man I wished to see. Thou hast on at this moment the very waistcoat that I made for thee. Thou must acknowledge it was of good stuff and well made, or it could not have lasted thee so long."

"O, yes," said the gentleman, appearing suddenly to recollect himself; "I do remember now the circumstance to which you allude. Yes, yes—I had intended to call and settle that little bill before leaving Canterbury, and you may depend on my doing so. I have come here to take possession of a large amount of property which has fallen to me by will. See here is the advertisement which apprizes me of my good fortune."

Here he handed the Quaker a copy of the paper containing the advertisement whose history we have given above. The Quaker looked at it with imperturbable gravity, and continued: "Yes, I see thou art in luck; but as my demand is a very small one, I think I must insist on payment before thou comest in possession of thy large estates."

A tap at the window here brought the county court bailiff into the presence of the parties. The swindler was particularly astonished at the appearance of this functionary, who immediately began to execute his part of the drama.

"What!" exclaimed the rogue, in an angry tone, "you surely haven't sued me?"

"Yes, I have," replied the Quaker; "and thou shouldest be thankful that nothing worse has happened to thee."

"Come in, then," said the debtor, finding himself fairly caught; "come in, and I will pay you, if I must."

The three went into the house together, and the slippery gentleman having ascertained the amount of the bill, paid it in full. The tailor having signed the receipt, placed it in the hands of his late creditor with feelings such as may be readily imagined. The swindler took it, and for the first time glanced at the various items of which it was composed. He said nothing till he came to the last charge, which was 'for advertising;' when he broke forth, 'Hallo! what's this? 'For advertising?' That's an odd charge in a tailor's bill. You're cheating me."

"O, no," coolly replied the Quaker; "that is all right. I have charged thee the cost of publishing the advertisement which thou just showed me."

Here the swindler savagely demanded, "Do you mean to say that you caused the publication of that advertisement?"

"Truly I did," replied the Yuaker, with most provoking coolness.

"You told a great falsehood in it!" quickly retorted the rogue.

"Convince me of that," said the imperturbable Quaker, "and thou wilt find me ready to confess the fault."

"You said in your advertisement that I should hear of something to my advantage, if I would come hore."

"Thou art mistaken," immediately responded the Quaker; "I only promised that thou shouldest hear of 'something to advantage" and is it not to the advantage of a poor tailor to collect an old debt?"

"If I can catch you in the street," said the swindler, in the deepest rage, "I'll give you such a thrashing as will not leave the breath in your body!"

"Nonsense, now!" said the Quaker; "if thou really intendest to do anything of that sort, we had better step out into the back yard and finish the business at once."

The rogue was completely abashed by the coolness of the Quaker, and stood speechless and almost petrified.

"Now," said the tailor, good-naturedly, "let me give thee a piece of advice. When next thou hast occasion to get a suit of clothes, thou had better not attempt to cheat the poor tailor, but pay him honestly; for then will thy conscience not disturb thee, and thy sleep will be sweet and refreshing. Farewell!"

There is no doubt of the literal truth of this story, as the writer received it some time since from the lips of the Quaker himself.

What Happened to a Girl.

About twelve o'clock one Sunday, as people were returning from church, a lady dressed in the very height of fashion, with a gorgeous Grecian bend of magnificent proportions, tripped down Second street, Maysville, Ky., in the most aproved style, like a cat treading on eggs. Just as she reached the corner of Second and Sutton streets, where the "gentles most do congregate," a newspaper, nearly folded, slipped from her skirts and fell on the sidewalk. A polite newsboy saw it fall and called to her that she had "drapped sumthin'," but she kept her eyes fixed on vacancy, and moved straight ahead, without appearing to hear him. A few steps further another wad fell from the same region, and there wae a diminution of the hump on her back. The boy yelled after her again, "I say, Missis, you are losing all your papers!" The only sign of hearing him that she gave was quickening in her pace, as if she was anxious to get away from those diggin's as soon as possible.

A kind hearted lady who was walking behind her and who understood the situation at this moment hurried up alongside and whispered that she was losing her bend. This information caused her to turn into a friendly stairway to repair damages; but just as she put her foot in the door, an enormous bundle of papers, a hundred or so in number, dropped from beneath her skirts and rolled upon the sidewalk. The youngster, indignant at the treatment he had recieved, and the apparent disdain with which his polite intentions had been met, on this rushed forward and seizing the bundle of papers startled Sabbath stillness on the streets with "ere's your extra! Latest from the seat of war!" The lady, it is needles to say, didn't stop to take an extra.

☞ A gentleman asked Mr. Greeley which was the greatest poultry raising State, as he was anxious to engage in that branch of agriculture. Horace said that since the election he had come to the conclusion that New Hampshire was the most noted for raising poultry, as he couldn't pick up a paper from that State but was filled with roosters.

☞ A spirited girl observes that to her mind the women who want female suffrage because it will cause division in families, must be a precious meek lot. A woman of any pluck can pick a quarrel with her husband without waiting to split on votes.

☞ The young man who will not be honest because it is right, should remember that honesty is the best policy. The truth is nearing that dishonesty is sooner or later discovered, and is sure to bring its punishment.

☞ Levi Lobe, an Israelite, in New York, swallowed five drops of Croton oil, three in beer and two in brandy, on a wager. He then swallowed seventeen oysters covered with sugar.

☞ A young woman, of Providence, Rhode Island, is said to be one of the best blacksmiths in that city. She works side by side with her father in his shop.

HENRY T. HELMBOLD'S
COMPOUND FLUID
Extract Catawba
GRAPE PILLS.

Component Parts—Fluid Extract Rhubarb and Fluid Extract Catawba Grape Juice.

For Liver Complaints, Jaundice, Bilious Affections, Sick or Nervous Headache, Costiveness, etc. Purely Vegetable, containing no Mercury, Minerals or Deleterious Drugs.

H

These Pills are the most delightfully pleasant purgative, superseding castor oil, salts, magnesia, etc. There is nothing more acceptable to the stomach. They give tone, and cause neither nausea nor griping pains. They are composed of the finest ingredients. After a few days' use of them, such an invigoration of the entire system takes place as to appear miraculous to the weak and enervated, whether arising from imprudence or disease. H. T Helmbold's Compound Fluid Extract Catawba Grape Pills are not sugar-coated, from the fact that sugar-coated pills do not dissolve, but pass through the stomach without dissolving, consequently do not produce the desired effect. The Catawba Grape Pills, being pleasant in taste and odor, do not necessitate their being sugar-coated. 60 cents per box.

L

Being prepared expressly for the above complaints, its blood-purifying properties are greater than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla. It gives the complexion a clear and healthy color and restores the patient to a state of health and purity. For purifying the blood, removing all chronic constitutional diseases arising from an impure state of the blood, and the only reliable and effectual known remedy for the cure of pains and swelling of the bones, ulcerations of the throat and legs, blotches, pimples on the face, erysipelas and all scaly eruptions of the skin, and beautifying the complexion.

M

Concentrated Fluid Extract Buchu,
THE GREAT DIURETIC,

has cured every case of diabetes in which it has been given, irritation of the neck of the bladder and inflammation of the kidneys, ulceration of the kidneys and bladder, retention of urine, diseases of the prostrate gland, stone in the bladder, culculus, gravel, brick-dust deposit, and mucous or milky discharges, and for enfeebled and delicate constitutions of both sexes, attended with the following symptoms: indisposition to exertion, loss of power, loss of memory, difficulty of breathing, weak nerves, trembling, horror of disease, wakefulness, dimness of vision, pain in the back, hot hands, flushing of the body, dryness of the skin, eruption on the face, universal lassitude of the nervous system, etc.

Used by persons from the ages of 18 to 25, and from 35 to 55 or in the decline or change of life; after confinement or labor pains; bed-wetting in children.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu is diuretic and blood-purifying, and cures all diseases arising from habits of dissipation, and excesses and imprudences of life, impurities of the blood, &c., superseding Coaiva in affections for which it is used, and syphilitic affections—in these diseases used in connection with Helmbold's Rose Wash.

LADIES.—In many affections peculiar to ladies the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy—as in chlorosis or retention, irregularity, painfulness or suppression of customary evacuations, ulcerated or schirrus state of the uterus, leuchorrea or whites, sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or habits of dissipation. It is prescribed extensively by the most eminent physicians and midwifes for enfeebled and delicate constitutions, of both sexes and all ages, attended with any of the above diseases or symptoms.

O

H. T. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU Cures Diseases, arising from imprudences, habits of dissipation, etc., in all their stages, at little expense, little or no change of diet, no inconvenience and no exposure. It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing strictures of the urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all poisonous matter.

Thousands who have been the victims of incompetent persons, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they have been deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of powerful astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in a more aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu for all affections and diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. $1.50 per bottle.

HENRY T. HELMBOLD'S IMPROVED ROSE WASH

Cannot be surpassed as a Face Wash, and will be found the only specific remedy in every species of cutaneous affection. It speedily eradicates pimples, spots, scorbutic dryness, indurations of the cutaneous membrane, &c., dispels redness and incipient inflammation, hives, rash, moth patches, dryness of scalp or skin, frost bites, and all purposes for which salves or ointments are used; restores the skin to a state of purity and softness, and insures continued healthy action to the tissue of its vessels, on which depends the agreeable clearness and vivacity of complexion so much sought and admired. But however valuable as a remedy for existing defects of the skin, H. T. Helmbold's Rose Wash has long sustained its principal claim to unbounded patronage by possessing qualities which render it a toilet appendage of the most superlative and congenial character, combining in an elegant formula those prominent requisites, safety and efficacy—the invariable accompaniments of its use—as a preservative and refresher of the complexion.
