

The Farmers' Column.

Swindling Honest Farmers.

The following is from the Williamsport Daily Gazette, and it suggests three points for caution to all farmers, namely: to be careful never to do any business with other than truly honest and honorable men, no matter how good a bargain is promised; secondly, keep out of the way of entire strangers; and thirdly, be careful about signing your names to any papers, unless dealing with old neighbors or those whose integrity is established.

Among the many swindling operations of the day, the patent right dodge is largely practiced on farmers, and we have heard of several cases in this county within a year. The following note is a copy of one now in use by these sharpers. It will appear at first sight to be perfectly simple, and no person wishing to take an agency for any of the many patents, would hesitate to sign it:

SMITHVILLE, Pa., April 15th, 1871.

One year after date, I promise to pay A. Sharp or bearer ten dollars when I selly order, Two Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars worth of Seeding Machines, for value received, at ten per cent. per annum, said ten dollars when due, is payable at Smithville, Pa.

JOHN SMITH, Agent for A. Brown.

Witness: John Doe.

Now, having read the above carefully, and supposing it to be all right for ten dollars, just cut it in two between the words "or" and "bearer" in the first line, and you will find that the left hand piece is a perfect note for $275. Having induced a farmer to accept an agency, as specified in the original note, and having obtained his signature, the sharper departs. He then cuts off the right-hand portion, proceeds to the nearest broker or banker, to whom he offers to sell the note at a discount on the plea of needing the money. The signer is generally a responsible person, well known to the business men of the village, and the note is purchased. When the note falls due it is presented for collection, and as the signatures are indisputable, the horrified farmer is compelled to pay $275, when he only supposed that he owed ten dollars.

This is one of the most infamous of all tricks of deception, and is largely practiced throughout the country. Farmers should cut this out and preserve it carefully, in order to guard against being imposed upon by unscrupulous scoundrels.

—o—

The Teeth of a Horse.

At five years of age a horse has forty teeth. These are twenty-four molar or jaw teeth, twelve incisor or front teeth, and and four tusks or canine teeth, between the molars and incisors, usually wanting in the mare. At birth only the two nippers or middle incisors appear. At a year old the incisors are all visible on the first or milk set. Before three years old the permanent nippers come through. At four years old the permanent dividers next to the nippers are out. At five the mouth is perfect, the second set of teeth having been completed. At six the hollow under the nippers, called the mark, has disappeared from the nippers and diminished in the dividers. At seven the mark has disappeared from the dividers, and the next teeth, or corners, are level, though showing no mark. At eight the mark has gone from the corners, and the horse is said to be aged. After this time—indeed, good authorities say after five years—the age of a horse can only be conjectured. But they gradually change their form, the incisors becoming round, oval, and then triangular. Dealers sometimes bishop the teeth of old horses—that is, scoop them out to imitate the mark, but this can be known by the absence of the white edge of enamel which always surrounds the real marks of age about the animal.

—o—

Remedy for a Cough.—We have used the following with good result, when a horse continued to cough after having distemper: Balsam of fir, one ounce; sweet spirits of nitre, two ounces; sirup of garlic, four ounces. Dissolve the balsam in the niter and then add the garlic. Give in thin gruel one ounce night and morning. Deprive the horse of his usual amount of water, and compel him to drink flaxseed or slippery elm tea.—Rural New Yorker.

—o—

To Prevent a Horse Pawing in the Stable.—Take a small chain, about a foot long, tie it above his knee and let one end hang down; or take a strap, and from the same hang a large burr on the lower end. I will warrant a cure.—Abial Thomas.

—o—

Sore Throat.—Symptoms: the horse hangs his head down, chews, but cannot swallow; throat swollen and feverish. Bathe well with Wizard Oil. Apply a poultice of wheat bran wet up with a strong decoction of red oak bark. Give him tepid water to drink, with moderate exercise. If he is feverish, bleed him two gallons from the neck.

Send the Little Ones happy to bed.

Send the little ones happy to bed,
When closes the troublesome day—
Let no harsh invective be said,
To ruffle their mind while they pray;
Sore trials and trouble so soon,
The sweet sleep of childhood will ban;
And let them lie joyfully down
And cherish bright dreams when they can.

Send the little ones happy to bed,
Though they may be mischievous and wild—
Nature seldom bestows a wise head
On a rosy-cheeked, light-hearted child.
Then let their glad spirits have play,
And brighter and stronger they'll grow,
Like a stream that runs free on its way,
And suffers no check in its flow.

Send the little ones happy to bed—
You know not what ill may be near—
Ere the morning your pets may be dead—
Then vain the regret or the tear.
So let them lie down with delight,
And fail not to give and to take
A kiss when they prattle "good-night,"
And a kiss in the morn when they wake.

Interesting and Important Case. How Gen. Bradley T. Johnson Recovered his Property.

It is well known to many of our readers that during the late war the property of General Bradley T. Johnson was sold by a trustee under a decree of the Circuit Court for Frederick county, but it may not be as generally known that upon the termination of the war Gen. Johnson commenced proceedings for its recovery, which have finally terminated in his favor. The history of the case is briefly as follows: On the 31st of December, 1855, B. T. Johnson executed a mortgage upon his residence, corner of Second and Court streets, to Mrs. Barbara Robertson, and on the 13th of May, 1861, just prior to his going into the Confederacy, he conveyed the mortgaged property to William J. Ross, Esq., in trust for Mrs. Jane C. Johnson, his wife. On the 2d day of October, 1861, Mrs. Robertson filed a bill of foreclosure in the Circuit Court for this county against Gen. Johnson and wife and Mr. Ross as trustee. The bill alleged that B. T. Johnson and wife, who were then in the South within the Confederate lines, were non-residents, and prayed an order of publication against them.

The court passed an order of publication directing the complainant to give notice "once a week for four weeks before the 10th day of November, 1861, warning them to appear and answer on or before the 1st day of March, 1862." Subsequently a certificate was filed, dated April 2d, 1862, stating that the order "was published in the 'Maryland Union,' printed in Frederick, once a week for four weeks prior to the 1st day of March, 1862." Mr. Ross answered, "submitting to such decree in the premises as may be right." No testimony was taken in the cause, and on the 4th of April, 1862, a decree was passed taking the bill pro confesso as to Johnson and wife, and appointing a trustee to sell the mortgaged property. After the war, and on the 31st of December, 1867, Johnson and wife filed a petition in the Circuit Court, alleging that in May, 1861, they had left Maryland and remained within the "belligerent" lines of the Confederate States during the late war, and that the whole proceedings to foreclose had taken place during the war, when they could not have notice; that the decree had been entered by mistake, which they had only discovered the day before, (Dec. 30th, 1867,) and they prayed to be permitted to appeal from the decree. The cause went to the Court of Appeals, when divers proceedings were had not of general interest, in the course of which it was returned to the Circuit Court from whose order Gen. Johnson again appealed.

Upon the last appeal two questions were presented to the Court of Appeals—first, the effect of their first order remanding the case without either affirming or reversing the decree, and 2d, the question of alien enemy was again presented. Upon the first question the court decided that Johnson had a right to appear and answer upon the cause being remanded, as if no decree had been passed. With reference to the other question, the court decided that although the question was argued upon the former appeal, yet it was not properly before the court, and although the court had, in the case of Dorsey, then referred to, decided upon what was supposed to be good and satisfactory ground that the notice, if duly given, was sufficient to maintain the jurisdiction of the court in ordering a sale of mortgaged property as against a mortgagor who had, up to the beginning of the war, been a resident of Maryland, and who had voluntarily gone within the Confederate lines during the war and remained there, yet since that decision the question had arisen in the Supreme Court of the United States and been there differently decided. That the Supreme Court had decided with regard to notice to such parties, being within the enemy's lines, that "a notice directed to them and published in a newspaper was a mere idle form. They could not lawfully see nor obey it, as to them the proceedings were wholly void and inoperative." Whereupon, the court said that while they would not hesitate to adhere to their original opinion, were the question not a jurisdictional one only, "yet in view of the possible conflict and embarrassement that may occur in regard to titles, when called collaterally into question in suits in the United States Court, on the ground of defective jurisdiction, we deem it judicious to make our decision conform to that of the Supreme Court upon the subject." They therefore reversed the decision of the Circuit Court, and sent the case back with full leave to the appellants to appear and answer. This was a complete gaining of the case by Johnson, as he had a right to pay the mortgage debt and recover his property, which he has done.—Frederick Examiner,

The Great Question.—Since it is more important how we live than how we die, and since death is merely the arrival at the end of a journey—the begining, progress, and history of the journey determining what the arrival is to be—we shall do well to dismiss our borrowed trouble with regard to the manner of our departure out of the world and be solicitious only with regard to the right discharge of present duty.
