LOCAL ITEMS

Editorial Courtesy.

The American Union copies two local items from our issue of last week, and then remarks, "We have carefully scanned both the Kent "county papers and these two items are all "we can, for the life of us, glean from them." We can't say whether the searching eye of the Union has scanned the Queen Anne's and Somerset papers, but he has failed to make any report of local items from these counties. Similar remarks to the above have of late been more than once indulged in by the Union, for what purpose we have "for the life of us," failed to see, unless it be for the death of us." The number of local items in the Kent papers is surely but matter of little interest to the people of Caroline county, and for that matter the locals of the last Union, though thirty-three in number and varying in length from one line to twenty-one, are next to nothing as local matter to the readers of the Union. We give specimens:

"Mosquitoes and flies have gone where the woodbine twineth."

"Cash must be paid for all job work done at this office."

"The bed and mattress on which President Lincoln died was sold at public auction last week and brought $80."

We might very rationally infer that the sale took place in Denton. Four others are about Wannamaker & Brown. Three others, —one of them the largest item,—are editorial duns, another is a Vinegar Bitters advertisement, and the balance are but trifles.—The searching eye of the Union overlooked in the News, a report of the premiums awarded to exhibitors at a Kent County Agricultural Fair. In conclusion, we think this class of remarks serve no good purpose to any; they are offensive, and in our humble judgment, entirely outside of the limits of Editorial courtesy.

A New Building Association.

An effort is being made, with every prospect of success, to start another Building Association in Chestertown. A number of persons who did not join the present one, together with some who are stockholders in it, are anxious to form another, to commence operations about the beginning of the next year. Some twenty-five or thirty names have already been obtained, and in the course of a week or two a meeting will be held to take the necessary steps for organizing.

The Association now in existence has been very successful, but there is abundant room for another, and with prospects of a more flattering character than those under which the old one started. Then, in this community, it was an untried thing, and many old fogies solemnly shook their heads and held aloof from what they regarded as an impracticable scheme because they were not able clearly to understand its workings. But its friends were full of faith and zeal, and the practical results of its operations have far exceeded their expectations.

The readers of The Transcript will notice the card of Mr. John R. Hare, 63 Fayette street, Baltimore. Mr. H. is an expert of no ordinary ability—he brings from Birmingham, old England, credentials for superior artistic skill of which any artist might well feel proud. For years he was at Larmour's —and more recently under The Mansion House on his own business account.

Orphans' Court.

Nov. 21, 1871.—Present, James Beck, of George, Thos. Lusby and William Stevens.

The Court passed a number of accounts against the estates of deceased parties.

The release of V. G. Hall to J. P. Ireland, administrator of Edw. Hall, late of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, dec'd., was received and recorded.

The release of Mary R. Ringgold to T. W. Eliason, her late guardian, was received and ordered to be recorded.

Richard Hynson, admr. of Wm. H. Wickes, returned an inventory of the personal property of deceased, and obtained an order for the sale thereof.

Wm. K. Copper, admr. of John S. Parsons, returned an inventory of the personal estate of deceased, and obtained an order for the sale thereof.

J. P. Ireland, admr. of J. Edw. Hall, returned an additional administration account: passed and ordered to be recorded.

The Register was ordered to issue citation for Samuel V. Farsons to answer to a certain complaint by Charlotte R. Perry.

Alexander Wilson and T. C. Lynch returned a valuation of the real estate of John Clark, late of Kent county, dec'd.: ordered to be recorded.

Hog Killing.

This week seems to have generally closed the fattening of hogs in and around our town, and their slaughter has been general. The negro appears in his element at these slaughterings, and enters into it with a seeming relish. The indications are that pork will be considerably lower than last year. Seven dollars will probably be the maximum.

Robbery.

We learn that one day last week the money drawer of Mr. Farson, at the Voshell House, was robbed of some hundred and sixty dollars, by a man who had just been engaged as hostler. A portion of the money belonged to an agent of a Baltimore tobacco house, and was given to Mr. Farson for safe keeping. The man saw Mr. Farsons deposit in the drawer. He occupied the office during the night, and in the morning both man and money were missing.

Public Temperance Meeting.

Last Sunday afternoon a public temperance meeting, under the auspices of Kent Division of Sons of Temperance, of this town, was held at the Court House. The members appeared in regalia, and made a very respectable show of numbers. The principal speaker was Mr. Woollen of Baltimore city, a prominent temperance man of many years standing, and his address was a most excellent one. He was followed in a few remarks by Mr. Applegarth, also of Baltimore. At the close of the speaking Rev. Howard Mecks moved that the president of the meeting appoint a committee, to consist of five from each election district, to make arrangements for the holding in Chestertown of a County Temperance Convention: the motion prevailed. The exercises were inaugurated by the singing of a temperance ode by the Division, and prayer by Rev. S. G. Valliant. Rev. Mr. Milby, at the close, pronounced the benediction. The audience was large, and the principal address (over an hour in length) was listened to with close attention. It is to be hoped that this effort of the friends of temperance will not be fruitless: certainly every thoughtful individual in this community must have observed with pain the almost alarming growth of intemperance—particularly amongst the young—recently in this place, sometimes exhibited in broad day light on the public streets, offending the sight and shocking the ears of all Christian and right-thinking people.

To Farmers.

Under our Farmers' Column, on the fourth page, will be found a very interesting and valuable article to farmers, giving an analysis of various Fertilizers on the market, by Prof. C. P. Williams, late State Chemist of Delaware, showing the market value of each and the actual value to the farmer.

Concert.

We call attention to the Vocal Concert at the M. P. Church, on Thursday evening next.

The object is deserving the support of our citizens, and the entertainment, from what we learn, will prove every way equal to the price of admission.

Farmers' Clubs.

Again and again we have called the attention of our farmers to the advantages of organizing these Farmers' Clubs in every District of the county. We hope the success of the Worton Club will give a new stimulus to these societies. If there is any season favorable to their formation, the long evenings of the present month affords the favorable time. All that is needed is, for one or two earnest men to start the matter in a district and the end is gained.

The following remarks, from the Cecil Whig of last Saturday, are pertinent:

The long evenings have again appeared in their annual round, when the farmer, if ever, has some hours daily, for recreation, study or to form plans for the future year. No other class of men manages so extensive and important an industry as the farmer, and none other, we believe, has so little co-operation and concert of action. The greatest drawback upon the agricultural interest is its sole reliance on unthinking, delving labor. Any business conducted in this manner, soon becomes a mere drudge, without excitement or animation for its devotees.—Bankers, merchants, and all other great employments and professions have their boards, conventions, etc., where broad, far-reaching, and comprehensive plans are discussed, and formed and arrangements made for concert of action. The new ideas and discoveries which have been evolved by experience are, at these periodic meetings, discussed and analyzed, and whatever promises to be useful is adopted as an assistant in future operations. The farmer, on the other hand, shows little of this disposition to better his condition by utilizing the thoughts and experience of the whole to advance and perfect the business of each individual of the class. With the close of day he retires to his fire-side, where he eats, sleeps, and rests his weary limbs for another day's battle of bone and muscle, against the rugged obstacles which lie in his path, when the dawn summons him again to labor. The great, rich store-house of brain, so relied on by all other pursuits and callings, is regarded as of secondry importance in the work of the farmer. He knows that seed-time and harvest, Summer and Winter, day and night, are promised to the end of all things, and he seems to model his unvarying round of labor on these unchanging principles. New demands are constantly being made on the farmer for other products than he has been in the habit of supplying, and old crops on which the chief reliance of the cultivator of the soil of fifty years ago was placed, are now classed among the least remunerative, because supplied from richer and more productive fields. But to these new demands how reluctantly our farmer seems to respond. This conservative disposition, and desire to cling to the products and modes of husbandry his father taught him, in defiance of the demands of the hurrying, progressive world, whose daily wants he is constantly called on to supply, is in a great measure owing to his isolated habits.

What our farmers are in most pressing need of, is to comprehend the change in every thing which is so rapidly going on around them: and then a concerted effort to adapt their busines to supply the new demands.

The first step, it seems to us, would be neighborhood societies or clubs, with a comprehensive and well defined plan of business, which provided some work for each member to do against a certain time. This would open a new field for thought and create an interest which would prove alike pleasant and profitable. There is nothing more important to the farming interest of this section of country than improvement in their stock. Experience has settled one principle in this matter, which leaves no doubt as to the proper mode to be pursued in the accomplishment of this important matter, namely, that to improve all kinds of stock, it is important that the male animals shall be of pure blood. One pure-bred male animal is sufficient for several farmers such as cultivate the soil of Cecil, and by joint ownership such animals could be procured with but a trifling outlay by each individual.—Stock which will command fifty to a hundred per cent higher price in the market, than the majority of the present stock kept, will not consume any more food, but may require better care, but taking the proper care of the labor expended.

We might pursue this prolific subject to an indefinite extent; but every farmer, by a little reflection, will readily perceive that the public demands many things which he can produce, that it did not a few years ago, and that co-operation is the only hope of the small farmer and man of limited means.—No single farmer can meet the expenses that a new and improved mode of farming demands, but much could be done by a combined effort.
