From the Prince Georgian.

Rural Talk for January.

BY PATUXENT PLANTER.

"Come forth, Old Year,
To my bidding, and let her
Or him, who missed thee,
Spend this one much better."

A NEW YEAR and a NEW AGE begin at the same time. It is a season always for serious thought, to recall the changes and incidents connected with ourselves and all the wide-world, which have occurred in the past year, now seeming so brief a period—and for memory to indulge in recalling the long years that have fled; methinks I hear, now, the sound of rapid feet to the time of the old tune:

"We'll dance all night, till broad daylight,
And go home with the gals in the morning,"

which was the habit when I was young, in every neighborhood, for the young and the old merrily to dance "the Old Year out and the New Year in." How times have changed! quere, for the better? Perhaps so, but I guess not. We have progressed in science, art, conveniences for labor saving, and in the aggregated wealth of the country, but have we advanced in social happiness, in public and private morality, in those high virtues that constitute all that is noble in manhood and womanhood? These are solemn questions that each should try to solve for himself, and determine to set an example of steadfast progressive reform during this and succeeding years, until the political and social atmosphere has become purified and brought again to that standard of high and lofty character, which our forefathers alone recognized as becoming an honest, virtuous, free and patriotic people.

DOMESTIC.

I suppose you have your ice-house full, your wood-pile large, your corn all in the house—poultry, calves, colts and sheep with warm houses and provided with a supply of nutricious food—hogs with shelters dry and warm, leaves in plenty for beds, and an ample supply of warm cooked food twice a day or three times for sows with young pigs—cattle and horses in good stables and abundance of food and bedding, with strict attention to being carded and well rubbed with straw or hair brush at least two times per day, and good water as much as they may want. Wood for the next year must be supplied, by being now cut and stacked or corded, to be dry, and less weight to haul next winter; farming tools of every sort put in repair, scoured, oiled and painted—harness washed and greased and blackened; every thing on the farm put in complete order and stored under cover, ready for use next Spring. Be sure and take an inventory of every thing you possess, just as if you were acting as an Executor, to report to the Orphans' Court. Put a fair estimate on all, and then ascertain every debt you owe with interest to date, including your security debts, for you are sure, sooner or later, to be made to pay them. You will then know whether you are before or behind hand, whether, in justice to your creditors, you can give parties, balls, go to places of amusement, dress yourself and family in the extreme of fashion, live luxuriously and treat Dick and Tom every time you go to a country store or tavern.

LOTION.

In every family there should be a common place book, where receipts should be pasted or written, for we often hear of remedies for scalds, sprains, burns, &c., &c., and when they occur we have forgotten the materials or proportions, or have them not at hand. How many farmers have phlemes to bleed a horse, or a bottle with its neck wrapt with twine to give a drench safely?

For Sprains or Bruises of Man or Beast.

1 pint of soft soap; 1 pint strong vinegar; 1 handful of salt; 1 table spoonful of saltpeter. Saturate the part well, put on a flannel cloth and saturate it with the mixture. It gives immediate relief and effects a cure. Good tar works, in such cases, wonders—coal oil also is most efficacious in many cases. I have seen sudden cases of neuralgia by its application, and many times cases of sores, and the worst cases of scratches in horses effected by its use. It is a God-send! dispelling pain as well as darkness, and giving relief as well as light. Paste the following valuable receipt in the common-place book.

A CURE FOR HOG CHOLERA.

R. H. Worthington, Esq., of the Second District of Baltimore county, sends to the Towsontown Journal the following prescription, which he states is a sure cure for hog cholera: "Take ten grains of calomel and ten grains of tartar emetic, and make them into a pill. As soon as it is known that the hog is sick give the pill. If there is no change for the better by next day, or within about twenty-four hours, give another pill of the same ingredients." Mr. Worthington informs us that he has never known a second dose of medicine fail to effect a perfect cure and restore the hog to health. Mr. Worthington himself has cured more than 100 hogs, which have been afflicted with cholera, by this medicine.

TRAINING HORSES.

I would like some of our young men who are fond of horses to try the following method of training horses, and let me know the result. I have been told by reliable stable men that it is effectual and rarely ever fails:

Rub some oil of cumin on your hands and rub the nose of a horse with it. He will stand still, no matter how wild or vicious he may be. Then take about eight drops of the oil of rhodium in a small vial or thimble, and, gently opening the horse's mouth, pour it on his tongue, and he will be an obedient slave. He will follow his trainer at command, lie down, and no noise will alarm him. After this lesson, be kind and gentle with him, though firm, and he is effectually broken. This with other appliances are the means, no doubt, used by the Rareys, and other horse tamers. How many fine horses have been spoilt or ruined in breaking, aye literally breaking, instead of gentling. They are commonly "broken" down, instead of being educated and taught by kindness, to be of the highest value and the greatest use and comfort to their owners. Have our farmers ever considered the great amount they individually and collectively lose by not raising more stock, especially horses? If each farmer was to raise one colt per annum for every one hundred acres of arable land he owns, what would be the amount in the aggregate county-product from land over what it is now? Say one thousand horses at $200 each, would be $200,000 added to the profits of our farmers. No small item, and to this should be added the large sum now paid by our people to strangers for mules and horses. It is a shame that we are buyers and not sellers of horses of all kinds and for all purposes. If our people were wise and would breed from the best horses and treat the colts gently, and generously, some of the thousand foaled would prove a Dexter or a Harry Bassett, and all would average $200 at two or three years old. This is the time to decide and make arrangements, to begin a system of breeding fine horses, and improved cattle, hogs and sheep. It is with such stock, as with poultry, the best breeds pay the best. A friend gave me last summer twenty-four eggs of fine Partridge Cochin Fowls, after being transported for miles over railroad, and in vehicles over our rough roads, fourteen hatched, thirteen were raised, and this day the thirteen will weigh over one hundred pounds alive, and will dress eighty pounds. How many common chickens at six months old will do that? Poultry is now sold by weight, and a dung-hill fowl that, at six months old, will weigh two pounds, will bring thirty cents, one, same age, of the large breeds, weighing six pounds, will bring ninety cents. Who then should hesitate to keep the improved breeds? So it is with all domestic animals. This subject should command serious thought.

RURAL LIFE.

Who could have seen nature in her winter's rustic garb, on the night of the 19th ult., under the light of the half-grown moon, robed in her snow dress, every tree bedecked with its white flakes, with the evergreens looking like great emoralds half smothed with diamond-dust and powdered pearls, and not feel how much happier to live in the country and breathe its invigorating air and view its gorgeous scenes than be a denizen of the murky town, with its smoke-laden atmosphere, and breathing its noisome smells and stifling air pent up in narrow streets. The theatre-going young man, and ball-loving girl, will differ with me, but the thoughtful man or woman who loves all that is grand and beautiful in nature, will unite in the sentiments of the dramatist, Sheridan Knowles, when apostrophizing country life, he exclaims;

"It is to dwell
'Mid smiles that are not neighbors to deceit;
Music whose melody is of the heart,
And gifts that are not made for interest—
Abundantly bestow'd, by nature's cheek,
And voice and hand! It is to live on life,
And husband it! It is to con
Its mercy, bounty, wisdom, power! It is
To nearer see our God!"

THE OLD HOMESTEAD.

Ah! here it is, that dear old place,
Unchanged through all these years;
How like some sweet, familiar face,
My childhood's home appears!
The grand old trees beside the door
Still spread their branches wide,
The river wanders as of yore,
With sweetly murmuring tide;
The distant hills look green and gray,
The flowers are blooming wild,
And everything looks glad to-day,
As when I was a child.

Regardless how the years have flown,
Half wondering I stand;
I catch no fond, endearing tone—
I clasp no friendly hand;
I think my mother's smile to meet—
I list my father's call—
I pause to hear my brother's feet
Come bounding through the hall;
But silence all around me reigns,
A chill creeps through my heart—
No trace of those I love remains,
And tears unbidden start.

What though the sunbeams fall as fair—
What though the budding flowers
Still shed their fragrance on the air,
Within life's golden hours?
The loving ones that clustered here
These walls may not restore;
Voices that filled my youthful ear
Delight that ear no more;
And yet I quit the dear old place
With slow and lingering tread,
As when we kiss a clay-cold face,
And leave it with the dead.

A Singular Suit.

The right of a child to prosecute his parents for whipping him, and to recover damages in a court of law, is in process of demonstration in Cincinnati The complainant, who is an infant in the eyes of the law, seeks damages to the amount of $50,000 from his parents for the abuse and ill-treatment he has suffered at their hands since 1858. The boy's petition tells a horrible and disgusting story. That portion of it which is first to appear in print recounts how he was thrashed with an iron ramrod and with rubber whips; how he was dragged about the house and down two flights of stairs by the hair, and how, by way of encouraging penitential meditation, he was thrust into a closet, under a tank of hot water, and kept there for ten hours, in such a position that he was unable to stand up or sit down. The parents have refused an offer to compromise, which seems to give strength to their side of the case.

☞ There was a duel in Cohoes, N. Y., the other day. The seconds kindly drew the balls before the fire, which was manfully delivered. But, at the instant of firing, one of the seconds threw a small pebble against the breast of his principal's opponent, who supposing he was fatally wounded, fainted and fell. The other, seeing the effect of his shot, dropped his weapon and fled to the woods, and has not since been seen. The man who fell recovered soon afterwards, and upon inquiry was told that his antagonist had been killed by his shot, and his mortal remains were then reposing beneath the clods.—This in turn alarmed the last "survivor," and he also fled to parts unknown.

D. 1833,—now one of Philadelphia's oldest regular physicians, and Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology,—who has made Neuralgia, Chronic and Inflammatory Rheumatism the specialty of his entire professional life—a fact vouched for by the signatures accompanying each bottle, and other testimonials of many prominent renowned physicians and clergymen. To protect sufferers from poisonous quack nostrums and useless expenditure of money, a legal signed guarantee, stating exact number of bottles warranted to cure, will be forwarded gratis to any sufferer sending by letter a full description of affliction. In case of failure to cure, amount paid positively refunded. Medicine sent anywhere by express, collect on delivery. Afflicted invited to write for advice; all information and medical advice sent by letter gratis. Address DR. J. P. FITLER, 29 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Penna.
