Massey's, April 16th, 1872.

Mr. Editor—As I do not remember ever seeing in your paper anything in the form of a letter from Massey's, I venture a few remarks from that extensive borough.

Since the building of the railroad we have increased very rapidly, two hotels, a number of houses, and one storehouse having been built. We have three stores in the village, owned respectively by C. T. Massey & Co., (lately Crane & Co.) Smith & Ernest, and Mr. Faulkner; all of which seem to be doing a flourishing business. We have also a blacksmith shop, carried on by the estimable Mr. Day, a drug shop and a post office. A person walking from the main part of the town towards the depot, would first pass on the right, the beautiful new residence of S. W. Boyer, the railroad agent and grain buyer; he would next pass, on the left, the well known hotel of C. D. Sweatman; then comes the depot, with its snorting locomotives, rumbling wagons, and hurrying men. One would never have thought, four years ago, that the quiet little cross-roads would, in so short a time, turn out to be such a thriving place.

The Protestant Episcopal Church, situated about a quarter of a mile from the village, has been some time without a pastor, and the people are talking about building a Methodist Church, but it is likely the project will fall through. Zeta.

Specific Against Small-Pox.—A physician in Paris has discovered that the deadly night-shade, (atropa belladonna,) employed carefully, is a most valuable specific against small-pox. Dr. Severus urgently recommends it as a preventive against this disease, which, since the siege, has made such ravages.
