ACCIDENT ON THE KENT RAILROAD.—On Thursday night of last week the night train of the Kent road ran into a passenger car which had broken loose from the Queen Anne's train, smashing the baggage and passenger car, and badly injuring the Kent locomotive. Strange to say, no one was injured, though there were a number of passengers in the Queen Anne's car.

An accident of this kind should not have happened, and somebody has blundered badly. Each party throws the blame upon the other. We know nothing of the facts in the case, but the Centreville Citizen gives a strange explanation of the affair. It says the Kent locomotive is required to keep ten minutes behind the Queen Anne's train. In the absence of a constant stream of telegraphic communication, we cannot see how this is possible, unless you can insure the same rate of speed. Again it is said, the engineer of the Queen Anne's train had stopped and was in the act of re-coupling, which did not occupy over three minutes. Three minutes seems an incredible short space of time after discovering the cars had broken loose to stop the train, run back and prepare to re-couple. The Queen Anne's chaps are a lively, brisk set of fellows. If the Kent train only waited three minutes at Townsend after the Queen Anne's train left, we think the fact could easily be established. The responsibility for these sort of accidents should be properly ascertained.

Metal Wall Hangings.

[From Once A-Week.]

A French firm are manufactering wall decorations to supersede paper-hangings and paint; these are thin sheets of metal, painted over by a patented process, and are artistic in appearance, and said to be durable.

Tin-foil in sheets, the thickness of ordinary writing paper, is the material on which this is new style of mural decoration, including gilding, it executed. Tin-foil is pliable and supple, sufficiently tough not to be easily torn, and offers a smooth and uniform surface. It forms an excellent base for the work executed upon it It also possesses the advantage of being waterproof, a property well known to architects and builders, who frequently use it to cover damp walls, on which, without that covering, any decorative work would soon perish.

The process executing the painting on tin offers no difficulty. The sheets are manufactured of a width and in lengths suitable to their application on the surfaces to be covered. At the manufactory in Paris the ordinary widths made use of are from thirty to forty inches, and the length five metres, or rather more than five yards

The application of the painted metalic hangings to either wood, stone, plaster, or iron surfaces, offers no difficulty. The operation is somewhat similar to putting paper hangings, with this difference: that with the latter the paper is pasted over at the back before being hung, and with the former the surface to be decorated is covered with a thin coat of adhesive varnish, on which, after it has been left to dry partially, the painted tin is affixed with great ease.

So little is the difficulty that any skilled paper-hanger can, after a few hours' practice, do the work successfully. From the extreme flexibility of tin-foil, mouldings and cornices are covered with the metalic hangings in the most perfect manner, and with a smoothness of surface and sharpness of outline at the edges and mitres which the painter's brush cannot rival.

The last effects are obtained by covering undulating surfaces with the painted material, of dimensions larger—say one one-eighth to one-fourth of an inch in length and width—than the superficial measure. By this contrivance, when the painted tin-foil is affixed on any surface with the varnish, the excess of length or width is cut away along a straight edge with a sharp knife, which leaves the edge of the work clean, and invisible where two edges meet. It is thus that the close joints are obtained in mouldings and mitres, as in the specimens exhibited

The varnish used for fixing the material is of the nature of gold size, but more adhesive. Being of itself "hydrofuge," it adds to the protection of the paint against damp. These advantages make it superior, not only to ordinary painting, but in a much higher degree to paper-hangings, which are stained with water-colors of much shorter duration, and subject to the effects of damp both in the walls and externally.

The New York Tribune says that Horatio Seymour and Lanford E. Church have positively refused to allow the use of their names before the democratic and liberal republican conventions for Governor It is believed that Augustus Schell will be the strongest candidate.

Speech of Andrew Johnson.

THE PRESENT A TIME FOR PATRIOTISM NOT PARTISANSHIP—THE DEMAND FOR PEACE AND RECONCILIATION.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 11.—Ex-President Johnson spoke here by invitation, last evening, for two hours and a quarter, to a good audience. He was introduced by Judge T. A. R Nelson, who spoke of him as the people's man, "Plain Andy Johnson,"—Mr. Johnson said he was not a candidate for any office. He thought it was well in times of popular upheavel to take our bearings and see whither we are drifting. Recurring to first principles he said the government has been drifting from Constitutional moorings and become the plaything of an irresponsible Congress at the dictation of usurping Executives. He reviewed President Grant's Administration with severity but with moderation; discussed official gift-taking as bribery, citing the case of Sir John Trevor, in England. He favored one term and the election of President by direct vote of the people.—The re-election of Grant would be, he said a great national disaster He accepted Greeley on the principle of unavoidable pressure of circumstances beyond human control which has limited the choice to two men.—Patriots cannot hesitate to choose Greeley. It is no time to say this or that is not my party; but let us all unite in saying, this is my country The country must have reconciliation, restoration of civil rights to all citizens, confidence between the sections, and a reform of the civil service. He (Johnson) pleaded for a return of the ancient reverence for the Constitution and official obligations. The speech was well received and generally applauded.

Death of Citizens in the Siege of Paris.

A paper in the British Medical Journal, by Dr. Henry Sueur, gives the figures of mortality in Paris during the siege with a completeness not hitherto reached. According to his computation, the loss of life to the civil population was over 50,000. He asserts that 300,000 Parisians left the city before the investment, and that 190,000 troops and 170,000 refugees entered it, so that the aggregate of population was considerably increased. Taking, then, the death-rate for the four years preceding the siege, and for the 28 weeks of the siege in the next succeeding year, he finds the excess of deaths to be 52,303. The greatest number of deaths was of men between 15 and 25, this being the class most actively engaged in the public service, and the least number was of men between the ages of 40 and 60, these being less engaged in public service, and having, perhaps, both means and disposition to take better care of themselves. Besides the inevitable suffering from privation and exposure in military service, the population had to contend with an unusual prevalence of small-pox, bronchitis, pneumonia, typhoid fever, diarrhea and dysentery.

Probable War between Russia and China.

A letter from St. Petersburg says that Russia is preparing for a war with China. The territory of Kouldscha, on the western frontier of the latter country, was, as is known, occupied by the Russian troops last year, and China now intends to regain possession of it. The Mahommedan population, however, are so hostile to the Chinese government that they have declared that they will put to death any Chinese official who appears in the country. This would of course lead to a conflict, in which Russia will doubtless take the part of Rouidscha against its so-called oppressors. The government at Pekin seems to be already anticipating such a contingency, for it is building iron-clads and employing 1,500 men daily in the preparation of guns and ammunition, and has sent agents among the Russian Khirgis to induce them to resume their old allegiance to China.

Bismarck, the Paper Maker.

A letter from Berlin represents Prince Bismarck in a new light—in that, namely, of a paper maker. The paper manufactory established by the imperial Chancellor on his estate at Varzin has proved so successful, says the writer, that it is impossible to meet the large orders which come from England. This paper is made of chips of fir—that, at least, is the chief element—and the annual consumption of fir trees is at the rate of six hundred klafter to keep the manufactory supplied. A new workshop is now being erected which will require no fewer than one thousand five hundred klafter of wood a year. The fir forest in the vicinity, which it has been found necessary to acquire, will furnish ample supplies for several years of the raw material for Prince Bismarck's paper mill.

EUROPEAN HORSES.—A gentleman from Brooklyn, New York, now at Frankfort-on-the-Main, writes as follows:

"When in London, a few days ago, a gentleman, the owner of some splendid horses, remarked that he was going out to Middle Park, to attend a sale of blood horses, and invited me to ride with him behind a splendid pair of bays, outriders, etc. Coming at the farm, we found a magnificent tent, in which was a splendid collation. This over, the sale began.—The show of horses was splendid—such a collection as probably will never be got together again. Think of 12,500 guineas (£13,125) for a single. Two of the horses were bought for America. One known as Gaiety, by Touchstone, of the Orthodox cross, went at 370 guineas; the other is named Mandrake, and the prince was 2,100 guineas."

☞ Primary elections were held in the several districts of Queen Anne's county on Saturday, for delegates to a County Convention to send delegates to the Congressional Convention, and resulted in the selection of delegates favorable to the nomination of Lloyd Tilghman, Esq., delegates from all the districts except Kent Island and one from Centreville being elected in his favor —Observer.

HON. HENRY A. WISE.—The Richmond correspondent of the Petersburg Index says that though Hon. Henry A. Wise will not support Greeley and Brown, still he will do nothing either by voice or pen, or action, in the way of lending his influence to the support of Grant. Overtures from the Radical party were made to him, but he declined them.

TURNING THE TABLES.—The Richmond (Va.) Dispatch, noticing the fact that the English government had placed at the disposal of the farmers of Oxfordshire its idle soldiers to help harvest the crops, in consequence of the agricultural laborers having "struck," says:

"In this country, under Mr. Grant, the farmers are 'placed at the disposal of the soldiers,' who are actively engaged in arresting them while the government judges sentence them to Albany."

GOOD FOR OLD WHITE HAT.—Says Greeley in his letter to Senator Schurz, speaking of the qualities which should characterize a Presidential candidate, "he should regardless alike of the shrieks of locality and the suggestions of a selfish policy, instead of being influenced by dexterous manipulators or primary meetings and skillful traffickers in delegates to nominating conventions, dread nothing but the accusing voice of history and the inexorable judgment of God."
