Adventurers of a Reporter in a New York Lunatic Asylum---Startling Exposition, &c.

The New York Tribune has been investigating the management of the Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum in a novel way. One of its reporters having, by direction of his employers, placed himself under restraint in that institution as a pretended lunatic, makes an expose of the institution and is management which is startling. The Tribune editorially says:

On August 14 Julius Chambers, a reporter of the Tribune, was consigned to Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum by regular process of law, and was placed by the assistant physician in charge in the wards for excited patients, being thought a dangerous maniac. At the end of a week he appeared (by instruction from this office) to be so much improved that he was removed to the ward for quiet patients, and encouragement was held out by the same physician that in six or seven weeks he might be discharged. On Saturday last, after a writ of habeas corpus for his release had been served, Dr. David T. Brown, superintendent of the institution, talked with him for an hour or two, and being familiar with the disease which he simulated, at once saw that the reporter was sane. On Monday, at the earnest solicitation of the physician and the legal adviser of the asylum, consent was given that he be released without further public legal proceeding. Tuesday, however, Mr. John D. Townsend, in whose name the application for release was made, explained in the Supreme Court his connection with the case, and the fact that the person committed was a reporter of this paper.

The reporter's story of his incarceration in the asylum will be told in detail in tomorrow's Tribune, accompanied by his sworn affidavit of the truth of all he states.

In making this investigation of this institution the Tribune was prompted by no motives of idle curiosity, no purpose to misrepresent, no object other than to arrive at the whole truth in the most direct way, and in a manner which would satisfy and convince the public. Its examination was made on a fixed and carefully elaborated plan to test the legal issues involved, and the truth of charges previously put forth by former employees of the asylum. To have bribed two physicians to certify falsely his madness would have been to prove only that there were rogues in the profession; hence it was decided to feign insanity and test the scientific knowledge of the committing physicians. Two reputable physicians, a medical student, and a professional nurse, pronounced the man "a violent lunatic, dangerous to himself and others." It was charged that strangers to patients sometimes committed them. It was therefore decided that absolute strangers should be employed. It was said that police justices committed men without examination.

The justice who sent our reporter to Bloomingdale never saw him at all, and does not know the names of the persons or physicians who made the application. The governor of the asylum to whom application was made for admission declared that the physicians at the asylum would receive no patient without his endorsement. It was therefore decided to avoid this governor altogether, and in spite of the strict regulations the physicians in charge received the patient, and without even asking the name of one of the gentlemen committing him, and after an examination of less than one minute consonsigned him to the ward for excited patients. The reporter was directed to study carefully the character of the attendants and physicians, the condition of the apartments, nature of the general treatment, whether cruel or kind, the character of the meals supplied, and to obtain the statements of any person whom he had reason to think sane.

It was also charged that the physicians connived at the removal of patients for whom writs of habeas had been procured, having some means of communication with the court, by which they were advised in advance of such proceedings.—To test this question a writ of habeas corpus was [illegible] but the prisoner had not been removed and no suggestion was made of removal. But strenuous efforts to keep the matter from the courts were made, and finally with success. The detailed story of these adventures to be told by the reporter will be a plain, unvarnished tale, without reservation of names or facts, and we are sorry to say that it will be adverse to the institution, and reflect painfully on the law of commitment and its administration in this city.

Governor of New York.

ALBANY, August 28.—It is authoritatively stated that the leading candidates heretofore named for Governor at the Syracuse convention and their friends have agreed to nominate, by acclamation, Charles O'Conor, as the only name on which all factions can be harmonized, and as the only absolute exponent of reform acceptable to the proposed coalition in the this State. It is authoritatively stated that Governor Hoffman has agreed to attend the convention in persou and present the name of Charles O'Conor as his successor. The joint withdrawal of Judge Church and Gov. Hoffman, it is understood, had this basis. It is also authoritatively stated that the friends of Mr. O'Conor have given assurances of their ability to secure his acceptance of the responsibility in the interests of reform.

☞ There are two remedies for drunkenness which are severe, but have been found practically effective. In St, Petersburg persons arrested for intoxication are compelled to sweep the streets all the next day. The penalty is strictly enforced, without regard to the sex or the social condition of the culprit. In Liverpool intemperance lately became so alarming that it was at last resolved to publish the names of all persons found drunk on the streets and brought to the station-houses. A salutary effect was at once noticed, and the number of cases of intoxication reported fell off more than a third.

The Case of Dr. Schœppe.

On Wednesday commenced at Carlisle, Pa., the new trial granted some time since to Dr. Paul Schœppe, the German physician, charged with the murder, by poisoning, of Miss Steinecke, a former resident of Baltimore. The general details of this case are perhaps more familiar to the public than those of any other murder case occurring for many years, owing to the concerted and strenuous efforts made by personal and professional friends to save the accused from the penalty of the law. He was convicted of murder, it will be remembered, after a protracted trial, and for months laid in prison under sentence of death, but the Governor, whose action was necessary to put it into execution, withholding his signature to the warrant, the sentence remained unexecuted. Through the efforts of friends a legislative enactment was secured giving the power of appeal to the Supreme Court, where a revision of the case was had, and upon technical grounds as set forth, a new trial was granted, to begin Wednesday. A correspondent who recently interviewed the accused states that he seems cheerful and confident. He stated that he had been imprisoned for three years and eight months, eighteen months of that time being spent in a cell. His treatment was now good. He claimed emphatically that the will of Miss Steinecke, produced by him and giving him property, &c., was a genuine document and no forgery, and that only recently he had been approached with an offer of money and an assurance of safety if he would withdraw all claims to her property. He expressed himself as being perfectly confident of acquittal in the trial.

HOW THEY DO THE CAMP-MEETING BUSINESS OUT WEST.—They have at Urbana, Ohio, the "national camp-meeting" of some one of the half-dozen Methodist churches.—On Wednesday a contribution was being raised for some purpose when a negro gave his silver watch. The watch was immediately sold at auction for $100. This started the blaze, and the faithful began to strip off their jewelry and personal valuables. A Mrs. Ubber, of Marion, Ohio, passed up to the altar her solitaire diamond ring, another gave her ear-rings, another her bracelets, another Geneva watch. The gentlemen on the whole, were poorer or else more discreet, and are only credited with a pair of sleeve buttons and a Mexican dollar. The amount of these offerings was reckoned at $1,500.—The brother who had the affair in charge very honestly offered to return privately anything that had been given in excitement, and we have not yet learned how extensive the reimbursements were.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

WEALTH OF RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS.—According to the census for 1870 the Methodists of the United States are the richest of the religious denominations, and hold property worth nearly $70,000,000. The Roman Catholics are ten millions behind the Methodists in worldly possessions. The Presbyterians own churches worth about forty-eight millions and a half; the Baptist, scarcely claim more than forty-one millions and a half of dollars. The Episcopalians, supposed to be in cities among the richest of the sects, own in church property but little more than thirty-six millions and a half although they are considerably richer than the Congregationalists, and have more than two dollars for one of the Lutherans.

WE believe it has not been definitely determined "where the pins all go to," but a question quite as interesting is looming upon the social horizon, and that is, "Where do the flies all come from?" There are experts who catch the persistent nuisances in scores by a dexterous turn of the wrist; small boys impale them upon pins; vigorous women slash them mercilessly with dusters; thousands lose their lives in milk pitchers, molasses jugs and apple pies, while tens of thousands are deluded to their death by besmeared paper, tumblers of water covered with a piece of bread with a treacherous hole therein, and a hundred other fatal devices of men and women, and yet the force seems undiminished. Who shall tell whence they come.
