POLITICAL.—If our remarks in reference to organization, have attracted as much attention from the Democrats of the county as they have from the Radicals hereabouts, they have had the desired effect, and will not be entirely lost. The long winter evenings are now approaching, when the farmer and the artisan will have more leisure than during the long days to devote to matters outside of his especial business. The formation of a political club in every school district will be not only profitable but pleasant, and conduce greatly to social sympathy and good fellowship. There has really been no thorough and effective organization of the Democratic party in our county since the war of the States. Activity there has been, and a good measure of individual industry and earnestness, but there is nothing in any cause like united effort. The failure, in large measure, to get out the Democratic vote on the fifth instant, was owing to a lack of organization. The districts, outside of the fourth, were simply indifferent from lack of consultation and a proper knowledge of the condition of affairs. Every effort should be made to perfect our organization throughout the county before the strife for nominations commence. The aristocracy of the Republican party, the white office-holding class, who march their black retainers like sheep to the polls, will not have every thing serene among them when they come to select candidates, it is true, but the moral effect of the last Presidential election is against our party, and we must repair it by care and vigilance. There are numbers all over our country whose chief political ambition is to be on the strong side. The strength of our party in Kent must be made so apparent by organization, that this class of voters will not hesitate in their conclusions. We are in earnest in this matter, and hope to hear of our effort being secouded. Which district—county or school—will take the initiative? A half-dozen, one, earnest Democrat in each school district can start the movement. Don't leave the matter to aspirants for office; a club can be more effectively formed under some other leader. Human nature is very much human, and some other person will take a clearer view of the good of the whole. There is no time like the present for movement: the sting of defeat will nerve many to active effort who will, before the next election, relapse into indifference unless kept constantly awakened.

Democrats, your disfranchisement by a Republican Legislature is not denied. The possibility of such a contingency should act as a living coal to your energies. Have you ever felt its sting? We have. The same men who now prate about equal civil rights, were foremost in robbing you of the rights of freemen. Give them the same power and they will strike you down again, and mount a negro sentinel over you. Organize!

Gen. Lee's Room.

The Nashville Union and American says: A gentleman residing in this city, and who returned from the Washington and Lee University, of Virginia, relates some pleasant facts connected with the last days of Gen. Lee. He says that the private room in the University, which the General occupied, has been left just as it was when he went out of it on the morning he took to his bed, and from which he never arose. The General went into his room at the usual hour that morning, put on his slippers, took a seat near a window, from which he drew the curtain partially back and began reading a copy of the Nashville Union and American. He had been complaining of feeling unwell, and after reading a short time he laid the paper on the table and left the room, never more to return. To-day the visitor to the University is shown the room, which he is allowed to enter, but is prohibited from touching anything. On the dust-covered table he sees the paper as it dropped from the hand of the great chieftain, and near the chair, which is partly turned around, his slippers. The curtain is in the same position in which the General had placed it, and in the inkstand is the deeply corroded pen, just as it had been left when last used. A guard is mounted at the door every day to see that nothing about the room is disturbed by any one visiting it.

A Long Indictment.

The indictment against Wm. M. Tweed makes a large volume. It contains one thousand and fifty pages, and is the longest indictment ever found in the world. It has not yet been furnished to the counsel for the defense. They will probably require several weeks, if not months, to examine it, which, of course, they have a right to. So that, with motions to quash and so on in prospect, the trial does not appear to be very near at hand. If a man can draw an indictmedt of over one thousand pages that will stand, he must be a pretty good criminal lawyer. It has not leaked out who is the real author of this prolix document.

THE VOTE IN DELAWARE.—The full and official returns of the election in Delaware show that U. S. Grant received 11,116 votes, and Horace Greeley, dem ocratic-liberal, 10,208, and therefore that Grant carried the State by a majority of 908 votes. In 1868 Horatio Seymour, democrat, carried Delaware by a majority of 3,257.

DEAR TRANSCRIPT?—Powerful as may have been pecuniary influences in aiding Grant's election, we think his military renown, having a wider scope, has been the more influential. Fort Donelson, Vicksburg, &c., have been constantly paraded before the public view. Burnished brass buttons, the cocked hat, and all the gay paraphernalia of a military hero, present a fascinating glare often as dangerous as that of a rattlesnake's. Through slaughter he found his way to the Presidential chair, or, it may be, to a throne. By numbers Pope would have us judge the poet's song, and by that standard we have ever been inclined to judge the General's success as a military man. We in the minority may derive a little desperate satisfaction in comparing the respective letters of acceptance. The Cincinnati nominee's terse, vigorous, replete with noble sentiments and eloquent periods, showing a mighty pen; the other—well, it exhibits a military pen, and, brief as it was, we felt disposed to applaud for a reason assigned by a Frenchman at the conclusion of an oration, "because 'tish over mid. Yours, OCCASIONAL.

The Right to Cut off Overhanging Branches---Important Decision--Interesting to Neighbors.

We take the following from the Anne Arundle Advertiser of last week:

Among the many causes tried and determined at the present term of the Circuit Court was the interesting and important appeal case of Henry O'Berry vs. Jas. W Allen (tres-pass quare clausum fregit) involving a question and principle of much moment to the owners or proprietors of adjoining tracts of land. The facts of the case are, briefly, these, viz.: Mr. Allen, before the institution of the suit, owned or was possessed of a tract or lot of ground, improved by an office building, situated West St in Annapolis, and being so possessed, sold a portion thereof to Mr. O'Berry. Before the said sale, there was growing about the centre of the entire lot, a valuable fruit tree, which, after the sale, and the erection of the division fence, still upon the soil of Allen, its branches overhanging the soil of O'Berry. The question argued before the Court was one purely of law, whether Mr. O'Berry, because the branches of the tree overhung his property, had the right to cut them off. Mr. McCullough, in his argument, contended that under all the circumstances of the case, he had not. He said, whilst not questioning the general principle of law, cujus est solum ejus est usque ad coelum, nor its cognate or correlative principle, sic utere tuo, ut alienum non laedas, he did deny the universality of the application of these rules of law to every imaginable case that could arise. His argument was, in a condensed form, simply this, viz.: that as the tree in question was standing and growing when the property was sold (and the overhanging branches did not constitute such a direct, immediate and irreparable injury as might have justified the cutting) the vendee (O'berry) took his property entitled to all the easements and subject to all the servitudes existing at the time of the conveyance. That as soon as the sale was consummated by the delivery of the deed to the vendee, the property of the vendor became the dominant and that of the vendee the servant estate, burdened with this easement in favor of the estate of the vendor. He asserted as a general principle of law, that where the owner of land has, by any artificial arrangement, effected an advantage for one portion to the burdening of the other, upon a severance of the ownership the holders of the two portions take them respectively charged with the servitude, and entitled to the benefit openly and visibly attached at the time of the conveyance of the portion first granted. See case of Lampman vs. Milks, 21 N. Y. 505, also, 4 Foster. 8 Penn., 18 Md., and Washburne on Easements, &c. The owner of real estate may alter the natural distribution of its various qualities, so assentially to change the relative value of the different parts, and may, in a great variety of ways, make one portion of the premises subservient to another. The rule of the common law on the subject is, that when the owner of two tenements sells one of them, or the owner of an entire estate sells a portion, the purchaser takes the tenement, or portion sold, with all the benefits and burdens which appear at the time of the sale to belong to it, as between it and the property which the vendor retains. This is not a rule for the benefit of purchasers only, but is entirely reciprocal. Hence if, instead of a benefit conferred, a burden has been imposed upon the portion sold, the purchaser, provided the marks of this burden are open and visible, takes the property with the servitude upon it. The parties are presumed to contract in reference to the condition of the property at the time of the sale, and neither has a right, by altering arrangements then openly existing, to change materially the relative value of the respective parts. The mere overhanging of the branches does not per se determine the rights of parties in the premises. As the appellant had clearly no right to cut off the eaves of the office, which stood directly upon the division line, a fortiori had he no right to cut off the branches of a tree which stood four feet from said line. It was a case of damnum absque injuria — The Court, after reviewing the facts and law of the case, fully sustained the views advanced by Mr. McCullough, and held that as the tree was standing and growing at the time of the conveyance of the property to the vendee (O'Berry), he took it burdened with the servitude in favor of that retained by the vendor (Allen) and had no right whatever to lop off the overhanging branches.

We have published the above as a matter of interest as well as information to the public, very erroneous views being generally entertained upon the subject.

An Epizootic Warning.

A man by the name of Becker, who resides near Quarryville, New York, owned a couple of horses that had the distemper. In cleaning out the mangers, the other day, the virus came in contact with a fleshwound on his hand. In a short time his hand and arm became so terribly inflamed and swollen, they had to be amputated. Soon after the amputation he died. Persons owning horses cannot exercise too much prudence in this respect, as the matter from this distemper is rank poison to the human system.

Mt. Vernon Place M. E. Church, Baltimore.

The Baltimore Sun of Wednesday says:

The first sale of pews at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, corner of Charles and Monument streets, took place last night at the new structure, the sale being conducted in ordinary auction style, in the main body of the church, by Mr. F. W. Bennett, auctioneer. The magnificent building was brilliantly lighted up, and as one approached it from the ascending hill on Charles street the reflection of light from the inside through the massive windows was very brilliant and effective. Within the church the sight was still more impressive, and as the visitors entered a general murmur of admiration and pleasure was heard as the eye took in for the first time the elegant interior.

The people began to assemble as early as seven o'clock, the assemblage comprising about an equal number of ladies and gentlemen. They were provided with diagrams of the interior, showing the number of each, pew, the assessed valuation of each, and the rent named for it, and some time was spent in examining and testing the relative positions, view of the pulpit, &c. About 8 o'clock the sale began, when, for a time, lively competition ensued for the first choices. There are two aisles in the centre of the church, on either of which are eighteen pews, extending within three seats of the front row, which were assessed at a valuation of $2,500 each, those in the rear, numbering twenty-four, being graduated down to $400 each. On the west side of the church (the Charles street side) are two rows of pews numbering fifty in all, varying in assessment from $2,000 down to $300 each, according to position. On the east side are two additional rows, aggregating fifty pews, which are assessed from $2,000 down to $200 each. In addition to these assessed values the pews are subject to rents from $150 per annum to $40, payable quarterly. Below is given a report of the sales of last night, showing the names of purchasers, the amounts paid and the aggregate amount received from the first night's sale:

Sixty two pews were sold, amounting with rent to $97,606 whilst the total amount of sale was $127,186, showing an increase in premiums over the assessment of $27,508, and an average rate of $2,050 for sixty-two pews sold. The sale closed about 10 P. M., when Mr. Bennett announced that the church would be opened again to-night, from 7 to 10 o'clock, to enable persons desiring to secure pews at assessment rates to do so, and announcing further, that no pews would be given out except at the assessment rates. There are remaining 102 pews subject to sale, including some of the choicest locations in the entire auditorium. The amount received last night, it is stated will pay nearly the entire remaining indebtedness for the new structure, the old church property having yielded $110,000, and about $100,000 more having been subscribed before the new building was began. The total cost was about $325,000.

The dedication ceremonies are announced to begin to-morrow (Thursday) at 11 A. M. when Bishop Foster, of New York, will deliver a sermon, and at 7½ P. M. a second serman will be delivered Bishop Andress Services will also be had at 7½ P. M. on Friday, and at 11 A. M and 7½ P. M. on Saturday. Handsome cards of invitation will be issued for special guests, who will be admitted by the rear door, the pew-holders and friends being entitled to seats before the public will be admitted. These cards are splendidly gotten up, and ornamented with a red cross upon each. The attendance is expected to be very large, and the ceremonies will be of the most impressive character.

THE VOTE OF VIRGINIA.—The Richmond Whig publishes the official vote of the State of Virginia, with the exception of Buchanan county. The result shows a total of 184,855 against 220,736—or a falling off of 35,884. The Greeley vote is 91,440 in place of the 119,535 of Walker—a difference of 28,095. The Grant vote is 93,415 instead of the 101,209 of Wells—a difference of 7,784. The Whig says:

'There is no change in the conservative strength. In the strong white districts there was no local questions to draw out the vote. In the county of Augusta alone there were enough conservative absentees to change the vote of the State.'

Not for Sale in Book or News Stores.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there are the chromos, besides!

ART DEPARTMENT.

Notwithstanding the increase in the price of subscription last Fall, when THE ALDINE assumed its present noble proportions and representative character, the edition was more than doubled during the past year; proving that the American public appreciate, and will support, a sincere effort in the cause of Art The publishers, anxious to justify the ready confidence thus demonstrated, have exerted themselves to the utmost to develop and improve the work; and the plans for the coming year, as unfolded by the monthly issues, will astonish and delight even the most sanguine friends of THE ALDINE.

The publishers are authorized to announce designs from many of the most eminent artists of America.

In addition, THE ALDINE will produce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success, and greatest general interest; avoiding such as have become familiar through photographs or copies of any kind.

The quarterly tinted plates, for 1873, will reproduce four of John S. Davis' inimitable child-sketches, appropriate to the four seasons. These plates, appearing in the issues for January, April, July, and October, would be alone worth the price of a year's subscription.

The popular feature of a copiously illustrated 'Christians' number will be continued.

To possess such a valuable epitome of the art world, at a cost so trifling, will command the subscriptions of thousands in every section of the country; but, as the usefulness and attractions of THE ALDINE can be enhanced, in proportion to the numerical increase of its supporters, the publishers propose to make 'assurance double sure,' by the following unparalleled offer of Premium Chromos for 1873.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE, who pays in advance for the year 1873, will receive, without additional charge, a pair of beautiful oil chromos, after J. J. Hill, the eminent English painter. The pictures, entitled 'The Village Belle,' and 'Crossing the Moor,' are 14 X 20 inches—are printed from 25 different plates, requiring 25 impressions and tints to perfect each picture. The same chromos are sold for $30 per pair, in the art stores. As it is the determination of its conductors to keep THE ALDINE out of the reach of competition in every department, the chromos will be found correspondingly ahead of any that receive a certificate, over the signature of the publishers, guaranteeing that the chromos delivered shall be equal to the samples furnished the agent, or the money will be refunded. The distribution of pictured of this grade, free to the subscribers to a five dollar periodical, will mark an epoch in the history of Art; and, considering the unprecedented cheapness of the price for THE ALDINE itself, the marvel falls, little short of a miracle, even to those best acquainted with the achievements of inventive genius and improved mechanical appliances. (For illustrations of these chromos, see November issue of THE ALDINE.)

The Literary Department.
